I'm still trying to figure out those four stone monuments. Are we creating a Quincy "stonehenge" here for the hordes of tourists visiting our city?

I keep waiting to see what more is planned but nothing changes. By the way, what is the difference between a formal and an informal garden?

Quincy's Yesterdays

An Incumbent Is An Incumbent

Judge Reuben Luarie decided that City Clerk Donald P. Crane acted correctly when he ordered the names of incumbents printed first on the ballot along with the notation "candidate for re-election."

Judge Luarie ruled that a petition brought by Joseph P. McDonough, a candidate for the City Council, was without merit.

McDonough alleged that, since the form of government in Quincy was changing from Plan E to Plan A at the end of the year, the Plan E councilors could not claim to be incumbents under Plan A.

$53,000 SCHOOL ERROR

City Manager Edward T. Lewis and city officials were seeking to rectify an error in addition that resulted in a $53,000 underestimate of the cost of pilings for Atlantic Junior High School.

The contract was placed for 12,500 linear feet of pilings at a cost of $49,200 when the actual amount was 25,200 linear feet, which came to a price of $102,112.

A spokesman for the engineering firm conceded that the mistake was one of simple addition.

CITY SEEKS LABORER

The city of Quincy was faced with a shortage of laborers that was underscored when three garbage trucks were immobilized because there were not enough men to man them.

When the call went out to 239 men on the Civil Service list only 20 responded and all were hired.

The shortage of workers was blamed on the fact that Quincy paid such low wages for laborers, who received $57.20 a week to start and worked up to $68.75 a week after five years of service.

WORK STARTS ON NUCLEAR SHIP

Production work was underway at Bethlehem Steel Co. Fore River Shipyard on the first nuclear-powered surface vessel, a guided missile cruiser. The keel was scheduled to be laid in the spring.

Thomas Crane Remembered By Library On 200th Birthday

By COURTNEY PAQUETTE
The celebration at the Thomas Crane Public Library had all the trappings of a typical birthday party: games, balloons, cake and ice cream.

What made it unique was the age of the birthday boy: he was turning 200 years old.

The Children's Department at the Thomas Crane Public Library remembered Thomas Crane, born on Oct. 18, 1803, with a hour-long celebration Saturday.

"Usually our building is famous because of Richardson. No one gives credit to Thomas and the Crane family. That's why we're celebrating him today," Children's Department Librarian Gail Columbare said.

The famed Henry Hobson Richardson was the architect of the Thomas Crane Public Library, which was built as a memorial to Thomas Crane.

Crane was born on Georges Island in Boston Harbor and moved to Quincy Point, then known as "The Old Fields," at the age of seven.

He learned stone-cutting in Quincy and, at the age of 26, he left for New York where he made his fortune in the granite industry, especially Quincy granite, which he had shipped to New York.

Crane always retained a love for Quincy and, five years after his death on April 1, 1875, his family donated money, specifically "not less than $20,000," to Quincy to build a library in his memory.

At Saturday's celebration, children played 19th century games led by Mary Wales and Chip Leis of Old

Sturbridge Village, who donned 1830's attire.

The children fixed their eyes on Leis and Wales as they launched a small pink hot air balloon on the front lawn of the library.

Inside, the children laughed as Leis led them in a game of "Thus Says the Grand Muff Tee," a 19th century version of "Simon Says."

They also made "thaumotropes," a picture on a piece of string that when spun appears to move. Children could also pose for pictures in wooden cut-outs of 18th century children.

After the show, participants had cake, donated by White's Bakery in Braintree, and ice cream, donated by Dairy Freeze in Quincy.

Friends of the Library donated the funds for Saturday's event.

"My children are in programs at the Library and we've been talking all month about Thomas' birthday, so we wanted to come and celebrate," said Bargoot.

"I loved it," added Rachael.

Dateline NBC Feature Filmed At Bliss Salon, Spa

Camera crews and reporters aren't the usual tools of the trade at Bliss Salon & Spa in Quincy Center.

But that's what happened when the network television news program Dateline NBC rolled in to film four members of the Quincy High - Vocational Technical Class of 1978 as they prepared for their recent 25th reunion held at Lantana in Randolph. The reunion was the culmination of nine months of hard work in pursuit of losing weight for a Dateline NBC diet challenge.

Six graduates - three men and three women - were asked by Dateline NBC to follow six different diets and lose a significant amount of weight by their 25th reunion. When Elaine Foley, one of the owners of Bliss Salon & Spa located at 1605 Hancock St., heard about the diet challenge, she thought it would be fun to treat the six graduates to a day of pampering at Bliss to celebrate their accomplishments.

"We heard that one of the graduates, Lynn (Passalacqua) Frank, had completed a marathon in Hawaii in September, when she had never been a runner before in her life. The feat in and of itself warranted something special," Foley said.

Bliss owner Donna Mavromates contacted Kathy (Walsh) Wynters, who was a Dateline NBC diet challenge participant as well as reunion co-chairwoman, and offered to provide massages, facials, manicures, makeup applications and haircuts for all six participants on the day of the reunion.

"We were so excited to receive Donna's kind invitation to be pampered at Bliss Salon & Spa prior to our Dateline NBC interviews and again prior to our 25th reunion," Wynters said.

Ultimately, four of the six participants accepted the invitation and arrived at Bliss the morning of the reunion. The big surprise, however, was when the Dateline NBC producer called Mavromates and requested permission to film the day's activities.

"We were surprised and excited to have them here. It's not every day that a film crew from a national news magazine rolls in and sets up shop in Quincy," Mavromates said.

The four graduates - Marc Merlis, Lynn (Passalacqua) Frank, Eleanor Vallier-Talbot and Kathy (Walsh) Wynters, enjoyed their day while the film crew captured their every move, including when Merlis was having his facial and pedicure.

"The day at Bliss was beyond our wildest dreams. The staff was wonderful and we were treated like royalty," Wynters said.

The Dateline NBC show featuring the diet challenge is scheduled to air Sunday, Nov. 23.

City To Seek $50,000 Pre-Disaster Flood Grant

Quincy has received permission to apply for a $450,000 federal grant to elevate or retrofit 22 flood prone residences under the new Pre-Disaster Mitigation grant program.

The funds are part of the Federal Emergency Management Agency's (FEMA's) efforts to prevent damages and loss of life before a disaster happens.

Most of the properties, 21 single family units and one two-family structure that suffer repeatedly from flooding, are located along Quincy's 27 miles of coastline and streams such as Furnace and Town Brooks.

Of the 22 homes, six are on FEMA's list of high priority repetitive flood loss properties. For most of them, utilities are in the basement and are often damaged by flooding.

For some, floodwaters reach the first floors, damaging considerable personal property

"The problem is that after disasters, repairs and reconstruction were often completed in such a way as to simply restore damaged property to pre-disaster conditions," said Mayor William Phelan.

"While such effort expedited as return to normalcy, replication of pre-disaster conditions resulted in a cycle of damage, reconstruction, and repeated damage."

Should Quincy receive the FEMA grant, it will have an opportunity to break the cycle of repetitive loss and repair.

If Quincy wins the grant,

FEMA will pay 75 per cent of the total project, regardless of the income level of the property owner. Matching funds will come from the owner or, if needed, from the city's CDBG funding.

Permission to apply for the grant was given by the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) to only two Bay State communities, the other being Winthrop.

Actually, MEMA is the applicant for the grant since only state emergency management agencies were eligible to apply for the funds and Quincy, being considered a subapplicant, had to satisfy state requirements as well as federal.

Planning Director Richard Meade explained that the process began with letters to 120 property owners that had received National Flood Insurance Program funds for flood damage. Some 30 expressed interest.

The Planning Department evaluated each of them along FEMA guidelines, then hired professional surveyors to determine the elevation of each unit compared to the 100-year flood level.

Then another consulting firm calculated for each project whether the future benefits would exceed the costs. That narrowed the field down to the 22 properties that eventually appeared on the application.

U.S. Flag The Only Flag

Clearly, any group of immigrants, whether they are European, Asian or Latin American, who organize and gather to celebrate the freedom that they now enjoy in this country, ought to be applauded by all patriotic Americans.

If as part of a ceremony, they wish to fly a flag that has significant meaning to them needs to be respected. I support and respect my Vietnamese friends.

However, one question, that I'm sure was on the minds of more than one councillor at the meeting of Oct. 7, was not asked. Why not use the greatest symbol of all in the ceremony to represent freedom and home? The flag of the United States of America has been adopted over and over again by generation after generation of immigrants to this country. It should be the only flag that matters. It's the only one that matters to me.

APPLES, TOMATOES AND flowers are among the items available at the Farmers' Market in the John Hancock Municipal Parking lot off Chestnut St. and across from Quincy District Court, on Fridays until Oct. 31, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Farmers' Market Open Fridays Until Oct. 31

Although the Farmers' Market closes at the end of the month, there are still plenty of items to be found there on Fridays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the John Hancock Municipal Parking Lot off Chestnut St.

According to Anneli Johnson, the state's top tomatoes can be found at the Farmers' Market. The Stillman and Freitas farms were recently awarded first prize of the State's Tomato Contest. The Stillman's Brandywine, an heirloom tomato variety was picked by a panel of chefs as the best tasting tomato in the state. Freitas Farm's cherry tomato was awarded first prize in that category, she said.

Johnson reminds shoppers that it is peak season for sweet field ripened melons of many varieties.

A new arrival during this time of year is the famous Maycomber Turnip, or the Cape Turnip, which is grown only in Bristol and Plymouth counties, she said. Its continued production is carefully guarded by the growers who save the seeds from year to year. "Once you taste its sweet flavor, you are hooked," said Johnson.

She said shoppers can also find pumpkins, which are used for cooking and baking of pumpkin breads, casseroles and soups.

Shoppers can also find Mums from the farmers' fields. Also, the honey man from Milton has arrived. He sells local honey, which can be used as a good source of antioxidant or in place of the white refined sugars.

Council Establishes Environment Committee

The city council Monday night voted to establish another subcommittee devoted to dealing with environmental issues: the environment committee.

Council President Dan Raymond, who introduced the issue, will choose the members of the five-person subcommittee.

Most councillors agreed that setting up an environment subcommittee was long overdue.

"I think it is important to elevate the discussion of environmental issues to the council level," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin. "The environment deserves its own committee within which to discuss and debate issues like marsh restoration, open space concerns and environmental catastrophes, such as the gas spill."

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro said he has expressed interest in serving on the committee.

"This will give us a chance to tackle some quality-of-life issues within the city, such as pollution and restoration projects," said Gutro. "It will give us an excellent new vehicle to look at issues from a different vantage point."

Councillor Joseph Finn agreed, saying, "Environmental issues are always considered ancillary to everything else, and we never get a chance to plan how issues affect the environment. This will give us that chance."

Mayor Seeks Local Photos For MMA Calendar Contest

Mayor William Phelan is seeking photographs of Quincy taken by Quincy residents to be entered in a statewide Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) contest.

The grand prize-winning photo will grace the cover of the new MMA calendar for 2004 while the 12 runnersup will be featured on pages devoted to each month.

"We here in Quincy know that we are the South Shore's jewel, but this is a great opportunity to share Quincy with the rest of the state," said Phelan.

"Who better to illustrate the unique characteristics of Quincy than its residents. I am thrilled at the opportunity to involve Quincy's residents in this creative outlet for publishing their work."

monwealth" and the photographs will be judged on their ability to capture the theme. The competition is open to both amateur and professional photographers.

Interested participants should send as many unmounted, original color photographs as they wish by Nov. 3 to: MMA Photo Contest, c/o Kristin Priscella, Mayor's Office, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Part of 'Make A Difference Day' Saturday Broad Meadows Students Create 'Taste of Quincy History Tour'

As part of "Make A Difference Day" on Oct. 25, Broad Meadows Middle School students are inviting residents to take part in a five-stop, restaurant tour called "A Taste of Quincy History."

The tour will take residents on a free tour of five historic sites and five restaurants to create the 90-minute excursion, which begins at the USS Salem at 11 a.m. Tours will continue until 4 p.m.

The historic sites on the tour are: Adams National Historic Park, Quincy Historical Society, the Thomas Crane Public Library, the Church of the Presidents and the USS Salem. The tour will visit a Greek, Indian, Asian, Yankee and Brazilian restaurant.

Ron Adams, Broad Meadows teacher and organizer, said the students are trying to accomplish two objectives: a greater awareness of Quincy's history, and a greater appreciation for cultural diversity within the city.

"Make a Difference Day" encourages volunteers to participate in projects to improve communities and help neighbors in need. The day is the largest community service effort in the nation, rallying corporations, government leaders, charitable organizations and citizens into action on one day.

The students are part of an after school volunteer group known as "The Quincy History Club," founded last year. The club meets every Thursday after school.

Last month, the city council passed a resolution endorsing the project and voting to name Oct. 25 "Make a Difference Day" in the city.

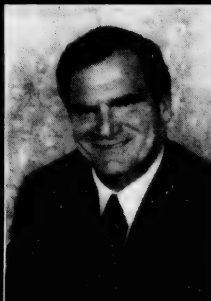

For more information about the day, contact your local volunteer center or the Make a Difference Day hotline at 1-800-416-3824, or the website, www.makeadifferenceday.com

Keegan Says Ward 1 Fire Apparatus Needs Upgrade

Joseph Keegan, candidate for Ward 1 city councillor, says the two fire engines currently assigned to that ward should be replaced soon.

Keegan said he is also troubled about conditions at the Houghs Neck fire station after several firefighters told him about a leaky roof and concerns about asbestos.

"Our firefighters put their lives on the line every day and they deserve safe fire stations and the most modern equipment available," Keegan said.

Keegan, who is a Quincy police officer, said he has made public safety a top priority in his campaign. He said Engine-8 assigned to Germantown is a 1978 model, the oldest active engine in the city's fleet. Engine-6, which is assigned to the Houghs Neck station, is a 1984 model, he said. Keegan said after speaking to firefighters who are familiar with the equipment, he shares their view that both trucks should be retired and replaced with new, state-of-the-art models.

Keegan said he is also concerned that there is no ladder truck assigned to Ward 1 and the primary ladder truck for the area also covers Quincy Point, Quincy Center, South and West Quincy. The city's remaining ladder trucks are stationed in Wollaston and North Quincy.

"Clearly my concern is that for a ladder truck to reach Houghs Neck or Germantown, it would require a significant amount of time and distance," Keegan said. "My experience as a police officer has taught me that a quick response is often the difference between life and death in any emergency."

Keegan said he will urge Mayor William Phelan and Fire Chief Paul O'Connell to make the Ward 1 fire fighting situation a top priority of the comprehensive study that is expected soon.

"I will always work to ensure that the safety of Ward 1 is never compromised," he said.

Cain Wants Seniors, Youth Community Center

John Cain, candidate for the Ward 3 City Council seat, says he will push for implementation of a community center for seniors and young people.

Cain said he is also concerned about the lack of evening activities for young people, who congregate in groups of 20 to 30, in the Montclair and Wollaston area.

Cain said, "Residents have shared with me their concerns about young people creating disturbances around the neighborhood." Cain said he has met with some of the Ward 3 businesses affected by the loitering youth, to assure them that he currently working as facilitator, with the police, the youth and local residents, to work out a solution.

Cain said he recognizes the immediate need for a community center that will allow young people to have alternative recreational options. He said he proposes establishing satellite community centers, working out of schools or churches in and around Ward 3.

Cain said he plans to discuss the possibilities with the mayor's office, to continue working with Ward 3 residents to coordinate a plan with the recreation department. He said the solicitation of sponsors will help defray some of the cost associated with this effort.

Cain said it is equally important to plan and develop programs and activities for Ward 3 seniors and retirees, and would like to see activities for them similar to that in other successful wards.

Candidates Night Oct. 29 In Ward 4

The Ward 4 Neighborhood Association will sponsor a Meet and Greet the Candidates Night Wednesday, Oct. 29, at 7 p.m. Ward 4 NA Hall, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

Candidates for Mayor, the City Council and the School Committee have been invited to give presentations and comment on the concerns of residents in an informal setting.

Light refreshments will be served.

CAMPAIGN TRAIL

QEA Recommends 4 Candidates

The Executive Board of the Quincy Education Association has recommended the election of three candidates for the School Committee and one for the City Council in the Nov. 4 municipal election.

The Board accepted the suggestions of its Candidate Recommendation Committee and endorsed Linda Stice, David McCarthy and Theresa Lord-Piatelli for the School Committee and Jo-Ann Bragg for the City Council at-large.

Linda Stice, who is seeking a fourth term, was described as "forthright, relentlessly honest and consistent in her support of educators. She has been strong in her opposition to state intrusion into local education, endorsing the idea of a Quincy-determined diploma, as opposed to a state-determined diploma based on a single, flawed test."

David McCarthy, director of security at General Dynamics in Needham and the father of seven children, five of them adopted and three of them with special needs, was cited for his involvement "with many civic causes, at whatever he does. The committee believes he is the kind of person we always hope will 'throw his hat in,' and believes that when that happens we are wise to support that."

Theresa Lord-Piatelli, an attorney and chairman of the Quincy College board of governors, was "initially thought to be a candidate with a single issue: relations between the College and the City, which have been strained. The Committee was, however, satisfied that Ms. Lord-Piatelli is committed to the K-12 system (and) was intrigued by the idea that her School Committee membership might work toward better relations between the School Committee and the College."

Jo-Ann Bragg, now in her third term and 10th year on the School Committee, has not always agreed with the QEA, the Board noted, "but we've always found Jo-Ann a good listener and we've always maintained a health respect for each other. We believe she has earned our trust and the opportunity to show what she can bring to the City Council."

Quincy-Based Partnership Gets $50,000 For Mental Health

A Quincy-based partnership, headed by South Shore Mental Health, is receiving grant of $50,000 a year for the next two years to enhance the mental health care for low-income and uninsured children.

The funding is part of a $1.5 million grant to 15 such community-based partnerships across the state in the Building Bridges in Children's Mental Health program that began with a $25,000 grant a year ago.

Members of the partnership headed by South Shore Mental Health include Quincy Community Action Program Head Start, South Shore Day Care, Manet Community Health Center and Quincy Public Schools.

The grant is from the Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts Foundation in partnership with an anonymous private funder.

The $25,000 awarded to each partnership last year was used to develop plans to integrate the delivery of mental health services and the current grant is to be used to launch the next phase of their programs.

QTA Endorses Five: Phelan McNamee, Finn, Stice, Dwyer

By TOM HENSHAW

When it comes to Quincy's Nov. 4 municipal election, President Alan Cousin of the Quincy Taxpayers Association tends to wash his hands of the whole thing.

Noting that the QTA did not sponsor a candidates' forum this year, he wrote in the fall issue of the Advocate, the association's bulletin:

"After watching the Mayor, City Council and School Committee for the past two years . . . I have concluded that most of the candidates (including most incumbents) may talk the taxpayer-value talk, but do not walk the walk.

"I declined to provide them yet another public forum for their misleading rhetoric."

The Cousins and QTA Vice President Robert Haley turned around gave a ringing endorsement to Mayor William Phelan for reelection to a second term.

"We can't claim to have agreed with or understood everything the Mayor has done in his first term, but he has done an outstanding job of putting Quincy's financial ship on the right course," Cousin wrote in the Advocate.

"For evidence, we need go no further than his balanced city budget for Fiscal Year 2004, without layoffs or significant service cuts, while every community around us was hemorrhaging red ink in the wake of state aid cuts.

"His instincts regarding taxpayer value are mostly on target. Mayor Phelan deserves to captain Quincy's ship of state for another two years."

Cousin and Haley went on to endorse Joe Finn of city council at-large, Brian McNamee for city council from Ward 6, and Linda Stice and Elaine Dwyer for School Committee.

Cousin said he is convinced of Finn's "sincere desire to serve the people of Quincy rather than feathering his own nest. I would rather have nine Joe Finns on the Council than one posturing fraud who seems to say all the right things and then does something else."

McNamee, he said, is a member of the QTA "because of his unique zeal for taxpayer value and his understanding of the importance of sound and stable financial management."

Stice was chosen "because of her exemplary responsiveness and professionalism," and Dwyer "deserves reelection because of the exceptional problem-solving and leadership abilities she has shown in her short time on the committee."

Since the QTA officers did not have time to poll the membership, said Cousin, "these recommendations are not an endorsement from the association at large."

Windows And Doors Enhance Home Safety

(ARA) - Safety starts in the home and it begins with fundamentals such as windows and doors. While functional, these products may be safety hazards if not maintained properly and replaced when they are worn out.

Take some time to ensure your windows and doors are in proper working order for your best defense against natural disasters, fire or accidents in your home. Here's where to start:

Windows

First, make sure all of your windows work as they should. Never block, nail or paint windows closed, which could prevent a quick exit in the event of a fire, natural disaster or an accident. All windows and doors in the home should open and close easily and there should be no air leakage around a window.

Here are signs that a window is not functioning properly and needs replacing:

- Poor performance — opening and closing is a difficult task; air leaks in, out or around the window; condensation or fogging occurs on or between glass panes; windows are painted or nailed shut and virtually impossible to open.

- Looks — chipping, deterioration, water stains or wood rot of the window or the area around the window (inside or out) is a sure sign; outdated design or style that doesn't blend well with the rest of the home.

- Effort — cleaning is a major hassle and another chore to be avoided; replacement parts are hard to find or even non-existent.

Window safety

Once your windows are working properly, consider these safety tips for windows:

- Keep unsupervised infants and babies away from windows, especially cribs where toddlers can easily reach and climb to precarious spots. Keep windows closed and locked when children are around. If your home features double-hung windows, close the bottom sash nearest to children, and open the top sash to allow for ventilation. This will help prevent a toddler from toppling out a window.

- Heed the warning of window and door manufacturers: screens are not meant to stop a child from falling; keep children away from open windows.

- Keep furniture, or anything a child can climb, away from windows — they may use these objects as a climbing aid.

Homes with window guards, security bars, grilles or grates covering windows become potential hazards in an emergency if the devices on them do not have a functioning quick release mechanism to allow a swift, safe exit through the window. Time is critical when escaping for emergency purposes.

Cords on shades and blinds can be hazardous to small children or pets who can easily get tangled and wrap the cord around their neck or choke on the cord itself. Pella Corporation provides a safer solution with its between-the-glass window fashions that allow cordless operation or even remote-control operation to control the shades or blinds. This product reduces the risk of injury and offers homeowners a clutter-free and dust-free window fashion.

Finally, the degree of injury sustained from a window fall can be affected by the surface on which the victim falls. Planting shrubs and providing soft edging like wood chips or grass beneath windows may lessen the impact if a fall occurs.

Door safety

As with windows, be sure all doors open and close easily. No door should be painted, nailed or blocked shut. And as with windows, screens on doors will not stop a child from falling. Keep small children away from open doors.

For maximum safety during severe weather, keep away from windows and doors, to avoid potentially being struck by flying debris or broken glass. A basement or hallway is the best place to seek safe cover in a home during severe winds and tornadoes.

All entry doors (including those going into a garage) should be solid core for safety protection. Some practical advice: solid wood construction on doors offers superior insulating qualities — wood provides 1,100 times the insulating value of aluminum.

Patio doors can be a hazard to children. Make sure all sliding glass doors have decals on them, or feature between-the-glass window fashions for added visibility, so a child won't run into them. All sliding doors should have a sliding door stop for child protection, as well.

Fire safety

Pella Windows & Doors, National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) and the Home Safety Council recently sponsored national Fire Prevention Week to bring fire safety education to students in most elementary school classrooms in the U.S. and Canada. Consider these statistics:

- A home fire strikes in the U.S. every 1.4 minutes; every 24 minutes in Canada

- Someone dies every 2.8 hours as a result of a home fire in the U.S.; every 31 hours in Canada

- 383,500 residential fires occurred in 2001

- 3,110 fire deaths occurred in homes (2001)

- $5.5 billion in residential property losses occurred in 2001 due to fire

- Only 25 percent of U.S. families have planned and practiced an escape route at home

Doors and windows are the primary escape routes from a home in the event of a fire. Unfortunately, many homeowners' doors or windows are painted or nailed shut, are blocked by heavy objects, or do not operate quickly, to permit a swift, safe exit in the event of a fire. Therefore, homeowners need to understand the importance of planning and practicing a home fire safety escape route, as well as how to ensure that their windows and doors are safe and operating properly.

Make sure emergency egress windows and doors (required by building codes) can be opened quickly — they can literally save lives, permitting a fast, safe escape in the event of a fire.

Do not install window air conditioning units in windows that may be needed for escape or rescue in an emergency. The air conditioning unit could prohibit escape through the window. There should be at least one window in each sleeping and living area that meets escape and rescue requirements.

Windows and doors should be your first and instant access to freedom from injury if an emergency occurs in your home. Keep them in working order and accessible to enhance your safety. When closed and locked, windows and doors can also be the buffer between your home and the threats of Mother Nature. Be sure to keep them secure and updated to help protect your home and your family.

Firefighters Union Endorses Coughlin

The International Association of Firefighters Local 792 has endorsed incumbent Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin for re-election.

Union President William Arienti praised Coughlin for his leadership skills and support for public safety issues.

"Kevin has demonstrated independence and leadership on a variety of issues of concern to all of Quincy's residents and especially working families," said Arienti. "He has stood up for public safety in all our neighborhoods and shown concern for those in the public safety professions that put their lives on the line each and every day. As firefighters, we are proud to stand in solidarity with him."

Coughlin said he aggressively advocated retaining Wollaston Engine 4 to protect the neighborhoods of Ward 3 when a budget shortfall placed it in jeopardy.

"I'm honored to receive the endorsement of those who stand guard on the home front ensuring our health, safety and welfare," said Coughlin. "I will continue to work hard to keep the trust and confidence of our public safety personnel and all the residents of Quincy."

Today's Quincy needs more than yesterday's ideas

This isn't the 90s

State aid shortfalls. Homeland security. Economic downturns. English immersion in schools. These are the challenges of today. Yesterday's solutions just won't do.

The next generation of leadership

Jimmy Liang is a new voice, with new ideas. A proven success story — an up-from-nowhere immigrant who began a business in Quincy during a "recession" and made it successful.

Today's issues and challenges call for today's thinking, energy and enthusiasm — not yesterday's tired ideas.

Let's move forward

It's time Quincy stepped out of yesterday, and moved forward into a bright future.

It's time to elect a new generation of leader to the City Council.

On Tuesday, November 4, let's elect Jimmy Liang City Councillor at Large.

Homecoming Weekend Celebrated At ENC

By WANDA JACOBS

Entertaining old and new scholars alike, Eastern Nazarene College hosted its annual Homecoming weekend with events such as alumni reunions, a street fair, the production of Guys and Dolls and other activities for all ages.

Poster-size pictures and alumni photo albums decorated the student center where the Hospitality room was set up. The reunions were held during each day in various places on campus. There was an auction for alumni as well as a dinner.

Among those enjoying the Guys and Dolls play were President David McClung and Trustee members. Talented students sang, danced and performed with enthusiasm and vigor. Handmade costumes and set designs added to the personal feeling of the play as a homecoming event.

A smashing hit was the "pie the professor" table at the street fair. Each of the classes presented their own items or events in the fair. The biology class was one of the groups and organizations selling everything from beta fish to Krispy Kremes.

A chapel service commended the hard work and dedication of Dr. Janet Lanham at which she was awarded the Cecil R. Paul Award. She is the first recipient of the award.

Dr. Cecil R. Paul was known as a man of compassion and great faith. He encouraged, motivated and ministered to those in need as the college president until his death in 1992. The award is for those who serve God, are scholars and have an open heart for education. Music from the A-Cappella and Gospel choir raised voices for the crowd.

Ending the weekend, the college held a Gathering of Praise. Performances included Hymns in the style of "Blue Grass," music by the Gospel Choir, Overjoyed — the summer ministry team — as well as an alumni choir. Special guest Paul Pitts performed the opera style of music.

The coronation of each class homecoming king and queen was a large part of the weekend celebration. The king and queen for the classes are: Freshmen Rachel Cooper and James King, sophomores Ryan Ardrey and Suzanne Simpson, juniors Michael Magrans and Devon Cnossen, and seniors Chris Kauffman and Keri Miller.

Past and present students from Eastern Nazarene joined together to celebrate their college experiences. The signs in front of the school read "Welcome Home Alumni." The atmosphere was that of a welcoming community. The weekend was a time of recognition and camaraderie, and will serve as a challenge to equal or outshine in the future.

"Today we endeavor to celebrate and acknowledge one more vital and diverse ingredient within our melting pot."

Raymondi said he was disappointed for the Vietnamese-American community and confused as to why Phelan did not allow the flag to be flown.

"This was an opportunity for the city government to stand in solidarity with the Vietnamese-American community," he said.

"It is unfortunate that the mayor did not allow the flag to be flown. It's confusing because he's telling them (Vietnamese-Americans) he supports the resolution."

Raymondi did not expect nor see the need for additional hearings on the topic.

"The City Council took a vote. If the mayor supports the resolution and supports the flag what decision does the City Council need to have?"

Iacobucci said, "What we do here today should not be controversial." He also spoke about his work helping Vietnamese refugees out of settlement camps to homes in the United States.

There were no signs of protesters.

"We are all immigrants," said Sabina K. Stenberg of the National-Silver-Haired-Congress, which advocates for senior citizens. She spoke in support of raising the flag.

"I think it's the sentiment of everyone in Quincy that this flag should be flown," said Don Kingsbury of Quincy, himself a Vietnam veteran and POW.

"All they want to do is show their appreciation. What are we just too proud to fly it?"

Revenues, Expenditures In Line

Auditor: Fiscal 2004 Budget 'On Track'

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

After a review of the first quarter of fiscal 2004, Auditor Richard Fitzpatrick said the city's budget is in line with estimates and has served up no big surprises.

At Monday night's city council meeting, Fitzpatrick provided an update on the city's financial situation, saying revenues and expenditures are pretty much in line with estimates.

"The numbers seem to be coming in as planned," he told the council. "But we know how quickly things can change, especially at the state level."

Fitzpatrick, harking back to last year's budget, said any further cuts in local aid from the state could send the city's financial situation into a tailspin.

Fitzpatrick said the fiscal 2004 budget is lean, but any large, unforeseen expenditures could pose a problem for the city.

"If something does come along it would be difficult to absorb that," he said.

Revenues collected from water and sewer rates, as well as those from the motor vehicle excise tax, are in line with estimates, he said.

Fee increases in the clerk's office have helped to bring in more revenue, he said.

Fitzpatrick estimated that the fire department has spent almost half its budget in overtime. At the end of the first quarter, which ended Sept. 30, Fitzpatrick said the department had spent $272,000. The fiscal 2004 budget contains $600,000 for overtime.

Fitzpatrick said an outside auditing firm is conducting a review of the fiscal 2003 budget. After seeing a preliminary review of the firm's findings, Fitzpatrick said, "Things look considerably better than the last couple of years."

Council Gives Mayor OK To Offer Early Retirements

But he said the mayor should have the option of utilizing it if the need arises.

"I think it gives the mayor a tool if he wants to use it," said Fitzpatrick. "There is no harm in that."

Fitzpatrick said the mayor's decision to offer the incentive last year saved jobs.

"I would have recommended it last year, when the circumstances were much different," he said. "I think it saved people's jobs."

Councillor John Keenan, who voted for the measure, said if the mayor decides to offer the incentive he should try to place a limit on the number of positions that are backfilled.

"I don't want to take away a tool for the mayor, but I don't want to see it used as a means of clearing the deck, either," said Keenan.

Disease With Agent Orange Link Added To Disability List

Chronic lymphocytic leukemia (CLL), a disease connected to Agent Orange, has been officially added to the list of diseases for which Vietnam veterans can receive free health care and disability compensation from the federal government.

John Brieden, national commander of the American Legion, noted that the Institute of Medicine "found a link between CLL and exposure to the herbicide Agent Orange and that finding is a sound basis on which to award just compensation."

"The government still must carry out a large scale study of the health and herbicide exposures of Vietnam veterans . . . because, obviously, the health of many Vietnam veterans shows the long-lasting effects of their wartime experiences."

"Certain veterans' illnesses are related to the exposure to Agent Orange or to some other hazardous conditions of battle. By doing a study, the government can determine what exactly is making them sick and grant them long overdue health care and disability compensation."

Ayers Strongly Supports Senate Identity Theft Bill

Rep. Bruce Ayers says he strongly supports a bill currently in Senate committee that would make it more difficult for someone to steal another person's identity and increase the penalty for those who do.

"Currently, it's relatively simple to obtain an individual's credit information, including credit card numbers and account status," he said.

"The unlawful use of personal data often results in unfairly damaged credit, which can take several years to rectify.

Ayers said that many times the victims don't realize their personal information has been stolen until after the theft occurs.

"The realization of the crime usually happens when an individual applies for employment or make a purchase," he said.

Massachusetts has an identity theft law now but it does not require corporations to obtain a person's permission before selling his or her personal information.

"It's alarming to think the consumer information is being exchanged so easily and identity theft will continue relentlessly unless we put a stop to it by passing some tough legislation."

The Senate bill that would toughen the legislation is presently under consideration by the Commerce and Labor Committee.

South Shore Savings Bank Gives $25,000 to Curry Fund

The South Shore Savings Charitable Foundation has made a $25,000 commitment to the Marie A. Curry Fund against breast cancer at Quincy Medical Center.

Arthur R. Connelly, chairman and CEO of the South Shore Savings Bank, presented a check for $10,000 to Robert Curry, chairman of Quincy Hospital, at the conclusion of the 11th annual Charity Golf Classic at LeBaron Hills Country Club in Lakeville.

He announced that the foundation would contribute an additional $15,000 to the fund over the next three years.

The Marie A. Curry Fund was established in the name of Robert Curry's wife, who died of breast cancer. The Fund's mission is to provide free breast cancer screening and breast care services for underinsured women in need.

"Supporting the mission of the Marie A. Curry Fund reinforces South Shore Savings Bank's mission of service to our community and its people," said Connelly.

VA Authorized To Care For Combat Vets After Nov. 11, 1998

The Veterans Administration is authorized to provide medical care and other services to veterans who served in combat against hostile forces after Nov. 11, 1998.

The authorization is to provide hospital care, medical services and nursing home care for any illness to such veterans for a two-year period following their separation from the service.

Veterans may be enrolled in priority group 6 and are not subject to copayments for care provided under this authority.

Veterans claiming at least one day of combat service after Nov. 11, 1998, will be provided priority access to enrollment. Staff will accept the veteran's claim as prima facie evidence that such service occurred.

Combat veterans will be scheduled an initial appointment with a primary care provider on a priority basis within the context of their clinical needs.

If the veteran has a condition believed to be related to military service but has not yet applied for compensation benefits, the veteran is advised to contact the local veterans benefits office or veterans' agent to file a claim for compensation.

If the veteran meets the criteria for a combat veteran, he should call Shirley Jackson at 617-323-7700, extension 6126.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Now Is A Great Time To Establish New Eating Habits

(ARA) - As we move into the cold and flu season — whether your kids are in day care, elementary, or even middle- or high-school — now is a great time to make sure they are eating and drinking the foods that are best for them.

Drinking a glass of 100 percent juice is an easy, healthy way for young children to get one of the recommended five servings of fruits and vegetables they need every day.

And introducing 100 percent juice as a healthy beverage while kids are young and parents have the most control over their eating patterns is a great way to steer children away from soda and other sugary alternatives and towards a life-long pattern of healthy eating.

Juice, like any food, should be consumed in moderation, experts tell us. But there is more to it than that. Some juices are just easier for many kids to digest than others, and pediatricians often point to two factors to explain why:

does the juice contain sorbitol, an indigestible sugar alcohol, and does it have an even balance of the carbohydrates fructose and glucose?

White grape juice, unlike apple or pear juice, contains no sorbitol and has the proper balance of fructose and glucose. And while several studies have shown white grape juice to be easier for infants and toddlers to digest, digestive concerns involve many school-aged children as well. As many as 10 percent of school-aged children complain of chronic abdominal pain — some of which could be attributed to the type of juice they are drinking.

"Much research has been done on carbohydrate malabsorption in very young children — 6 to 18 months of age, for example — and the scientific consensus is that white grape juice is easier to digest than apple juice or pear juice in this population," explains Marvin Ament, M.D., chairman, Department of Pediatrics, UCLA School of Medicine. "Our study looked at a significantly broader population and showed that for some young people, the choice of juice may continue to have medical significance well into the teens."

Dr. Ament's research included 28 kids 9 months to 18 years old who regularly drank more than 6 ounces of apple juice or pear nectar and were diagnosed as having irritable bowel syndrome, functional abdominal pain or chronic non-specific diarrhea. He and his colleagues found that some or all of these symptoms might be alleviated by drinking white grape juice instead of apple or pear juice.

In the study, the kids refrained from drinking juice for one month and then switched to white grape juice for 11 months. Seventy percent of the kids in the study stopped presenting symptoms and remained symptom-free through the study conclusion.

Those children who regularly drank less than 12 ounces of juice a day showed no significant changes one way or the other.

"Fruit juice is an important part of young people's diets, but there are some children who just cannot tolerate the particular carbohydrate profiles of apple juice or pear juice," explains Ament. "This is likely due to two factors: these juices have a high fructose to glucose ratio — approximately two to one — and they both contain sorbitol. When the subjects started drinking comparable amounts of white grape juice instead of apple juice or pear juice, we saw no recurrence of symptoms in almost three-quarters of the group."

These days, parents as well as school and day care administrators are looking more closely than ever at what kids are eating and drinking.

With all the pressure on kids these days to make the wrong eating choices, the need to instill healthy eating habits at an early age has never been greater.

As part of a balanced diet, 100 percent juice — perhaps 100 percent white grape juice — is a great place to start.

Seafood Isn't Just For Summer

October is National Seafood Month and a great time to look at all the reasons seafood serves up a great meal all year round.

365 Days A Year: Health is a year round concern. You can't just exercise in the summer and expect to be healthy and trim year round. The same goes for eating seafood. The American Heart Association, the National Academy of Sciences and the World Health Organization all recommend eating fish regularly to maintain good health. Fish consumption is known to lower a person's risk for heart attacks, strokes and breast cancer. A meal with fish is low in fat, low in cholesterol and is an excellent source for vitamins and minerals including iodine, iron, zinc, vitamin B complex, potassium and Omega-3 fatty acids.

Kick Winter Boredom In The Ice: Variety is key to surviving a New England winter. When the winter doldrums kick in, everyone needs variety to spice up their lives. Meat and chicken options are limited to different cuts, but with seafood there are numerous species to provide a variety of tastes, textures and methods of preparation. Swordfish, tuna and halibut provide a hearty, steak-like meal. Shellfish provides a completely different light appeal. The variety doesn't stop at the species. You can prepare and serve fish in as many or more ways than meat or chicken. Grill it, poach it, stir-fry it. Eat it in a sandwich, in a stew, over pasta or a salad.

Fish, The Original Fast Food: School-year activities demand fast meal preparation. The start of school means the start of dance lessons, soccer practice, PTA and other afternoon and evening activities. Getting the family together for a meal is difficult and getting a meal together for the family even more difficult. Seafood provides a quick option. Many healthy seafood dinners can be prepared and cooked in less than 15 minutes. That is the best kind of fast food. For menu ideas, you can do to fish whatever you do to chicken, only faster.

Keep New England Healthy: The local economy always needs your support. Year round New England harvesters, processors, distributors and restaurants are serving up fresh seafood. In fact, more than 13,000 New Englanders work in the seafood industry. Eating seafood is not only good for a person but good for the health of New England's economy.

The Stork Doesn't Fly South For The Winter: Babies are born every day of the year. A recent study released by the American Psychiatric Association found that eating seafood can help women fight depression during pregnancy and after childbirth. Women who ate fish rich in Omega-3 fatty acids two to three times a week had half the amount of depression as women who ate little seafood.

Brain Power: We'd like to forget New England winters, but other memories are precious. People 65 and older who eat fish once a week have a lower risk of Alzheimer's disease, according to a study funded by the National Institute of Health. Omega-3 fatty acids are critical to brain development.

For Every Fish There Is A Season: Fruits may have their best seasons, but fish taste good year round. Peaches may not taste just right in February and tomatoes may not be quite so red and fresh in December but with so many species of fish and the great ability to import, fish is great tasting year round. In fact, fish from the coldest waters are considered the highest quality. The cold North Atlantic waters have always delivered excellent quality seafood, so that no matter the time of year, they can offer consumers a great tasting seafood meal.

An Ounce Of Prevention, A Pound Of Cod: Ear infections attack when the weather is coldest. Recent research says children with middle ear inflammation need fewer antibiotics and have fewer infections when they take cod liver oil and certain vitamin/mineral supplements.

Fish Is For Lovers: A recent survey by Harris Interactive found that Americans think lobster is the No. 1 choice for a romantic dinner, and we all know that oysters have long been known as an aphrodisiac. So whether it is Valentines or just a Friday night at home, spice up your love life with a little seafood. Lighten Your Load: Don't suffer through the cabbage soup or the Hollywood diet, fish is low in fat and calories and it tastes great. There are numerous low fat ways to prepare it, poach it, broil it, bake it. All are great for you.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

SMOKING AND TOOTH LOSS

According to the Academy of General Dentistry, a one-pack-a-day smoking habit can cost a smoker at least two teeth every ten years. The results of two separate 30-year studies indicate that smokers are about twice as likely to lose their teeth as non-smokers. Smoking leads to periodontal (gum) disease, which leads to tooth loss. According to one theory, tobacco may restrict the blood flow to gum tissues, which would restrict the necessary nutrients to the bone and periodontal support for the teeth. Another theory is that smoking causes a chain of events in the mouth that eventually leads to tooth loss. The chain starts with plaque build-up on the teeth, which is linked to tartar build-up, which can cause gingivitis.

This column helps emphasize the importance of not smoking. Everyone wants a beautiful smile — and everyone should have a healthy one. At our office, located at 44 Greenleaf Street, we feel a deep responsibility and commitment to provide the very best care with state-of-the-art equipment. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for professional, gentle dental care. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. While the risk of tooth loss decreases after a smoker quits the habit, the risk of tooth loss is still higher among quitters than among those who never smoked.

FALL CAR CARE

AAA Advice: Read Owner's Manual, Follow Procedures

Preventative Maintenance Key As Winter Approaches

As the leaves turn color and the weather turns cooler we all know winter will be on its way. The key to getting your car through the approaching cold months is with preventative maintenance, says AAA Southern New England.

The most important single thing you can do as a car owner is to read your owner's manual and follow the maintenance procedures. Following the recommended maintenance procedures in your owner's manual will help keep your car in top shape.

One of the most common reasons AAA road service is dispatched is to jump-start a weak battery. If your battery is three years old have it tested, if it is five or more years old it is likely on borrowed time and should be replaced. Battery cables should be checked several times per year for corrosion and proper tightness.

Engine drive belts and radiator hoses should be checked periodically. These components generally have a long life (5 or 6 years and 60,000 miles). Belts and hoses generally don't fail suddenly but rather over time. Combining the inspection of belts and hoses with oil changes will save time, money and help eliminate breakdown.

Antifreeze in most cars lasts only two years (although in some cars it may be good for five years). As the antifreeze and its additives deteriorate its ability to prevent corrosion diminishes and overheating and leaks may develop. As the cooling system is inspected the operation of the engine thermostat and the defroster should be checked.

Oil should be changed following the automobile manufacturer recommendation. This could be as often as every 3000 miles, or with some models over 10,000 miles. The oil filter should be changed with every oil service. Transmission fluid should be changed following the recommendation in the owner's manual, this may be sooner if the fluid becomes discolored, has a burnt smell or if you use your car for towing.

Brake fluid is often overlooked as a maintenance item. Brake fluid by nature attracts moisture, this moisture can cause rusting of brake components and overheating of fluid during a panic stop. Change your brake fluid every other year.

For proper vision all lights should be checked as well as the windshield wiper blades. You may not think of air conditioning as important during cool weather but air conditioning helps remove moisture from the air and aids defroster operation.

Tires are vital to the trouble free operation of your car. Today tires can last in excess of 50,000 miles but still should be checked for even wear, tread depth and damage. The best tire for most of us driving in New England are an all season tire.

Another good way to minimize breakdowns is to keep a logbook for your car. Keep track of fuel mileage, oil use and maintenance. By keeping this log you may notice a change in gas or oil use indicating the start of a mechanical problem.

Even the best maintained car could break down. Keeping some supplies in your trunk in case of an emergency can help minimize the breakdown. Duct tape to repair a leaky hose. A gallon of coolant to top off a leaky radiator, wire to tie up a broken exhaust system, warm clothes and gloves, a good spare tire and working jack. One of the best things to keep in your car is a portable phone. You can ask for directions call someone if you are going to be late or AAA service in the event your car breaks down.

Following the owners manual and having a good relationship with your repair facility will help to ensure your driving will be trouble free.

Presidents Run Past Randolph, 36-7

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School football team played with more than a chip on its shoulder last Friday night against Randolph at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Disappointed with last week's 21-14 loss to Whitman-Hanson, another close defeat to one of the top teams in the Atlantic Coast League, the Presidents took out their frustration on the Blue Devils to the tune of a 36-7 victory.

"This is what we wanted to come out and do," said head coach Bob Noble. "If we're supposed to be a good football team, we have to take care of situations like this."

With Randolph committed to shutting down Quincy's potent ground attack, the Presidents turned to the air and senior quarterback Josh Giordani delivered. He tossed three touchdowns passes and rushed for another—all in the first half—as the Presidents built a 28-0 halftime lead and played its second unit most of the second half.

"We made big plays and we have kids that are capable of doing that," Noble said. "They were committing eight, nine, 10 guys to the line of scrimmage. If they do that we have to take the other stuff. Josh had an outstanding game. Not bad for a first-year quarterback. Hats off to him."

Quincy (2-1-1) now kicks off its three-week Cape Cod odyssey, beginning Saturday afternoon at 1:30 against Nauset. It heads to Sandwich Nov. 1 and Dennis-Yarmouth Nov. 7.

scoreboard less than two minutes into the game when Giordani plunged in from 4 yards out. He hit senior tight end Justin Thorley for the two-point conversion for an 8-0 lead. On the drive, Giordani completed a 32-yard pass to senior wideout Ian Jorgensen and a 25-yarder to senior quad-captain and tailback J.J. Niamkey.

After Randolph went three-and-out, Quincy struck for another big play when Giordani dumped a pass off to Niamkey, who darted down the right sideline for a 52-yard touchdown. Sophomore Everton Decastro's extra point put Quincy ahead 15-0 with 2:44 left in the first quarter.

Each team exchanged three-and-out possessions before Randolph finally discovered its offense. Sophomore Carlton Christian and senior quad-captain and quarterback Garrett Hoffman reeled off back-to-back 23-yard runs to the Quincy 25. But the Blue Devils' offense stalled and turned the ball over on downs.

Quincy extended its lead to 21-0 when Giordani completed a middle screen pass to senior tailback Roger Palermo, who juke two defenders en route to the end zone for a 56-yard TD with 2:06 left in the half.

The Blue Devils attempted to put points on the board before the half and reached midfield before Niamkey picked off a Hoffman pass from his cornerback position and returned the ball to the Randolph 39.

On the second play from scrimmage, Giordani fired an 18-yard TD strike to Jorgensen with eight seconds remaining on the clock. Decastro's extra point bulged Quincy's lead to 28-0 at halftime.

Randolph's fortune didn't change much in the second half, either.

The Blue Devils fumbled the ball on the first play of the opening series and Quincy took over at the Randolph 22. On second down, senior quad-captain and wideout Jon Banks jetted for a 41-yard TD on a reverse with 9:25 left in the third.

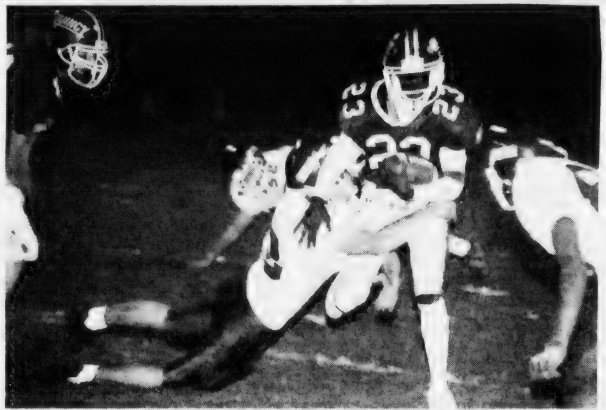

On the extra-point attempt, Quincy botched the snap but Giordani recovered and was able to find Jorgensen in the flat for the two-point conversion and a 36-0 advantage.

Randolph found paydirt on the ensuing series. Senior wideout Jerrell Stephey snatched a Hoffman pass high in the air and raced 76 yards for the score. Senior quad-captain Scott MacGregor added the extra point.

Liam Powers On Westfield Hockey

Liam Powers of Quincy has been selected to play for the Westfield State College hockey team.

A 2003 Quincy High School graduate, Powers is a freshman majoring in business administration. He is the son of Elaine and Steve Powers of Quincy Point.

J.J. NIAMKEY (23) holds on the ball as Randolph's Michael Walsh tackles him by the legs.

SENIOR JON BANKS (86) races along the sideline for a 41-yard touchdown on a reverse early in the third quarter of Quincy's 36-7 victory over Randolph last Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

COLD TRUTHS

As temperatures fall, dead batteries and hard-starting engines become more commonplace. The chemical reaction that produces electricity in batteries cannot generate the same power when temperatures drop. Moreover, thickened oil in the engine means the starter has to work harder. For instance, at freezing, a battery's power can drop by about 15 percent while the engine needs about 150 percent more cranking power. This situation can be helped greatly by making sure that a vehicle's battery is in good shape, as well as by carrying jumper cables—just in case. Switching to a lower viscosity oil for winter also helps make the starter's job easier. Even better, synthetic oil provides a thinner starting viscosity than conventional oils.

Cold weather is here. Is your car's battery up to it? LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is small enough to provide friendly, personal service, and large enough to have the latest, most modern test equipment and ASE Certified technicians who are constantly trained and re-trained. HINT: At zero degrees Fahrenheit, a vehicle's battery has lost about 35 percent of its power at the same time the engine is demanding two-and-a-half times more power.

Raiders Fall To Taunton, At Plymouth South Friday

The North Quincy High School football team fell to Taunton, 49-0, last Saturday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Red Raiders (0-5) traveled to Plymouth South to tomorrow Friday night at 7 in search for their first victory of the season.

"The young players are continuing to mature foot ball wise," said head coach Tony Green. "The catch phrase of the week is 'We're chopping wood,' which means we're practicing fundamentals every day."

"We're not going to throw the baby out with the bath water. Just because the scoreboard is not positive, that doesn't mean we're going to chuck everything and do crazy things."

Taunton jumped out to a 7-0 lead less than two minutes into the game when it scored on the opening drive.

returned the ensuing kickoff 55 yards to the Taunton 28 and the Red Raiders seemed to be in prime position to strike back. But a 15-yard personal foul penalty pushed them back and they eventually had to punt.

65-yard touchdown pass on its next series and less than two minutes later returned a punt 57 yards for a score to go up 21-0 with 5:47 left in the first quarter.

The Red Raiders punted again on their next series, but they received a break when the Tigers fumbled the catch, which senior quad-captain Brandon Neves recovered at the Taunton 39.

North Quincy's offense, though, couldn't do much with the field position as it turned the ball over on downs.

Taunton came right back with a 48-yard TD run for a 28-0 lead with 44 seconds left in the first. The Tigers would add three more touchdowns the rest of the game to account for the final score.

"We're optimistic that the wins will come as long as we stay with our sound principles and fundamentals," Green said. "I'm proud of the kids and they're hanging in there. We're going to focus on the benefits of playing high school football: team building, character building and camaraderie. But we're still trying to win."

Rotary Defeats Beacon Sports For Junior League Title

Rotary recently defeated Beacon Sports, 10-8, to capture the Quincy Youth Baseball Junior League championship.

In the final game of the series, Rotary came from behind with a great pitching performance and tremendous offense. Rotary finished the season with an impressive 19-2 record. It was a special victory for head coach Bill Mahoney, who retired after the season.

At the recent Quincy Youth Baseball banquet, three Rotary players received awards: pitcher Ricky Salvucci, National League MVP; catcher Joey Vialpando, the Richards Exemplary Player Award; and second baseman Kevin Mahoney, the Coach's Award.

Youngsters Participate In Play It Safe In The Sun Program

gram at the Quincy Recreation Department's William F. Ryan Boating and Sailing Program.

The program was a cancer prevention grant sponsored by the Quincy Health Department and awarded by the Massachusetts Health Officers Association and the Massachusetts Department of Public Health and the Massachusetts Melanoma Foundation. Over 300 youngsters benefited from the program.

Through this grant the Quincy Health Department provided free legionnaire type hats, which were salt water proof and had a UPF rating of 50 and more. Youngsters who wore their hats to every sailing lesson throughout the summer had their names placed in a drawing for the Red Sox memorabilia signed by Lowe.

Lowe is the spokesperson in Massachusetts for the Melanoma Foundation and knows first hand of the dangers of exposure to the sun. He had successful surgery last winter to remove a melanoma from his nose. Lowe, who lives in Quincy during the Red Sox season, had kicked off the educational program by speaking to the students of the Squantum School in June.

The lucky participants of the Boating and Sailing Program who won prizes were: Chris Nabstedt, Jimmy Nabstedt, Mathias Conroy, Gary James, Ryan Murphy, Andrew McPhail, Chandler Anthony and Samantha Enbar-Salo.

"The participants were faithful in using sun protections that were available to them," said Recreation Director Barry Welch. "It was a very successful start for the first year of this important program."

North Quincy Drops 1-0 Heartbreaker To Plymouth South

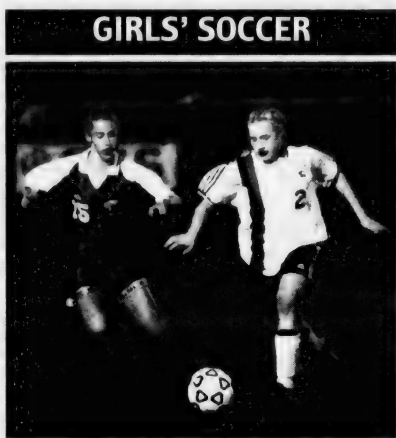

The North Quincy High School girls' soccer team dropped a 1-0 heartbreaker Monday afternoon at Plymouth South.

The Red Raiders dominated play but could not convert numerous chances in front. Senior quad-captain Katy Faherty found senior quad-captain Jenn Ryan in front but her volley missed the far post.

Then, within a 15-minute span, they hit the post or crossbar three times. Junior Caitlyn Peters, back from her concussion, saw her drive hit the crossbar. Faherty, on a ball everyone thought was in, also hit the crossbar. And Ryan's direct kick hit the post.

North Quincy (10-5-3) hosted Marshfield Wednesday and closes out the regular season next Monday when it battles Brockton at 3:15 p.m. at Teal Field.

Last Thursday, the Red Raiders blanked Barnstable, 3-0. Junior Eileen Price, who sat out the previous game with an injured knee, received a perfect pass from lead. Price tallied her second of the game with an assist from Frawley to round out the scoring.

Junior forward Kerin Frawley netted her first varsity goal early in the second half, converting Ryan's ninth assist of the season from inside the 6-yard line for a 2-0

Also playing well were juniors Ali Coughlin, Sarah Kennedy and Caitleen Coleman. Defensively, freshman Bridget Coleman, junior Shauna Kelly and senior quad-captain Sarah Gregory turned in solid efforts.

Last Monday, North Quincy traveled to Bridgewater-Raynham and settled for a 1-1 tie — an impressive feat considering it played a tough match against Quincy the night before.

North Quincy controlled play early as senior Ashley Ridge, sophomore Lindsey Clifford and Ryan controlled

Fifteen minutes in Ryan nailed a direct kick from 25 yards out into the top left corner for a 1-0 lead. The Red Raiders held that lead throughout the second half before the Trojans tied it with less than a minute left in the game.

On Oct. 10, North Quincy traveled to Falmouth and gave EMass's second-ranked team all it could handle before dropping a 1-0 decision.

Manganaro was spectacular in net, turning aside 15 shots. Defensively, Gregory and juniors Julie Holleran, Erika Djerf and Kelly played well.

On Oct. 8, North Quincy hosted Taunton and came away with a 3-1 win. Trailing 1-0 at halftime, the Red Raiders finally got on track 12 minutes into the second half when senior quad-captain Breanne Therrien dropped a nice pass back to Faherty, who rifled a one-time shot.

North Quincy Freshmen Girls' Soccer Posts 9-5 Record

The North Quincy High School freshman girls' soccer team began the season on a winning note and have continued on the high road every since.

With nine wins and five ties in the first 14 games, the team is setting a high standard for future teams and for the continued success of the North Quincy girls' soccer program.

Some of the success must go to the good coaching they received in Quincy Youth Soccer, as well as from the coaches of the travel and club teams.

Goalkeeper Kristin Reamer (four goals allowed) brings poise and confidence, which inspires an excellent defense led by Melissa Mendall, Tara Whooley and Allison Russell. They are supported by Kathleen Ford and Michaela McGee. Bridget Coleman and Natalie Djerf are capable of filling the stopper position.

Danielle Kelly, Jillian Benn, Keriann Cabral and Megan Therrien make up a strong midfield, with Katelyn Glynn, Leah Donovan and Opal Muannuathang coming off the bench.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

What is liberty? . . . Some people say that liberty is the right to do whatever we want to do whenever we want to do it. But this is not liberty; this is license. In government it leads to anarchy. On the highway it leads to automobile accidents. In family life it leads to tears and disasters.

Liberty is not the right to do whatever we want to do whenever we want to do it.

The word liberty comes from a Latin word meaning free. But this Latin word is derived from a Sanskrit word meaning "to grow up." Liberty, therefore, in its earliest context means the opportunity to grow.

The free person is the person who has grown up — especially the person who has grown up emotionally. The worst tyrant before whom we can ever bow is ourselves. The only person truly free is the man who has acquired self-control to such a degree that he is easily the master of his own impulses. The anarchist and libertine are not free. They are prisoners of their own worst selves. The free man is the man who has grown up — matured. He has learned how to live life with ease and grace because he has learned how to control himself . . . He is free . . .

Doug Brown had three assists, Geoffrey Dubois two and Tom Cevrels, Eric Haugh and Anthony Bonone one apiece.

For Play It Again Sports, Kevin Shinnick scored.

Wollaston Over Oliver Ames In Fall Baseball

The Wollaston pitching staff turned in a record game in its recent 6-4 victory over Oliver Ames in fall baseball league action.

Steve Reardon, John Santon and Steve Doyle, who each pitched three innings, combined for 22 strikeouts and allowed only four hits. The big three fanned the side five times.

In the fourth inning Chris Kirshner lined a triple over the center fielder's head and scored on Doyle's single to tie the game at 1-1.

Trailing 2-1 in the sixth,

Quincy's only goal with an assist by Michael Adduci. Sean Patrick Hannon and John O'Callaghan made strong contributions to the game.

Reardon (two hits) and Joey Trabucco (two hits) each singled and catcher Sean Sullivan was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Kirshner stroked a two-run single and Mike McLaughlin (two hits) also knocked in two with a single for a 5-2 lead.

McLaughlin smashed a mammoth triple to center and Doyle singled him home to account for the final run. Playing a strong defensive game was second baseman Paul Doolan, who also had a single.

Morrissey Sounds Alarm On QHS Fate

regarding the state's fiscal situation for the near future.

"The continuing issue of the School Building Assistance is again surfacing and I'm getting strong indications that reimbursement levels and rates will be reduced for all projects and communities," Morrissey wrote to Phelan. "I am convinced that projects not yet started or in the ground could be subjected to reduced state aid."

Morrissey said delays due to environmental concerns are hampering the city's position as it seeks the 90 percent reimbursement.

"I fear we will face the prospect of reduced state aid if the project continues at this pace," he said.

When asked about the prospects of cutbacks to the SBA program, Phelan said, "We are all concerned that there will be additional cutbacks in state funding. If there are any suggestions as to how we can improve our position and maintain our reimbursement rate, we are all ears. We are hopeful the state will live up to its promise of providing 90 percent reimbursement," he said.

In his letter, Morrissey also urged city officials to consider "alternatives" to the current project, in the event the state does not provide 90 percent reimbursement.

"We should have a Plan B in place," Morrissey told The Quincy Sun. "Based on what I have heard, if you want to handicap this project, it does not bode well for us."

Morrissey questioned whether the city could afford the project if the reimbursement rate is drastically reduced.

State Treasurer Timothy Cahill is working with state legislators to reform the School Building Assistance program.

But the details of the plan and how it will affect the city's new high school project are not finalized, according to Karen Sharma, director of communications in the Treasurer's office.

"It's a plan that is in the development stages," said Sharma. "From a debt perspective and a cash perspective, this is a huge problem. Treasurer Cahill is looking to work with the state Legislature to address the complexities of this problem."

Sharma said SBA has approved $5.5 billion in contracts for projects over the next 20 years.

"It is not an exaggeration to say this program has the potential to be the next Big Dig, from a cash perspective," she said.

Sharma would not comment on any specifics of the plan, but she did say she understands Morrissey's concerns regarding SBA. No timetable has been established for the release of the plan, she said.

New Equipment May Be Factor Water Bills Complaints To Be Aired Nov. 24

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

New meter-reading equipment is the likely culprit behind residents' complaints of unusually high water bills, according to DPW Commissioner Jay Fink.

At last week's council meeting, several councillors said they received complaints from constituents regarding high water bills.

But those bills may be accurate, according to Fink, because some residents are receiving their first actual bill in years.

The city council's public works committee will examine the issue on Nov. 24 at 7 p.m. in the council chambers. Concerned residents are encouraged to attend.

In August, the DPW purchased new meter-reading guns that produce a more accurate reading of household water usage, according to Fink. The meter-reading guns used in the past were more susceptible to human error because the readings were inputted manually, he said. The new meter-reading guns are connected to outside water meters and information is downloaded directly into the reader.

For the first time, residents are receiving bills using the new equipment, he said. Some residents are receiving the first accurate bill in years, he said.

Water bills are sent quarterly, and the city wants at least two of those annual readings to be actual, with the other two estimated.

In some instances, the outdated meter-reading equipment failed to obtain accurate readings, Fink said. Other times, meter readers could not gain access to a dwelling to read the water meter. Estimated bills continued for a long time, in some cases as long as five years, he said.

Fink urged residents with questions to compare the reading on their water meter with the reading on the bill. He cautioned residents to be aware that the actual reading will be slightly higher, because the reading on the bill was taken or estimated weeks prior.

"Residents should have an idea if the bill is accurate by checking the meter and comparing it to the city's reading on the bill," he said. "If the actual reading is lower than the bill reading, then there is a problem."

The DPW fields approximately 100 complaints involving water bills each month, Fink said. That number has increased since the new equipment was put into use, he said. Most of the complaints involve residents who claim they received a slightly higher bill, he said. A small number of complaints come from residents with much higher bills, he said. Those issues need to be addressed first, he said.

If the readings are accurate, the city should provide some relief for residents who received unusually high bills, said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

"In a way, people are being victimized because the city was not able to record accurate readings," he said. "The question is, can the city

- At Least 3 New Councillors
- 40% Voter Turnout Seen

Mayor, City Council School Races Share Spotlight Tuesday

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Voters next Tuesday will decide on whether to give Mayor William Phelan a second term and make their choices in what appears to be close city council and school committee contests.

Phelan, on the strength of his preliminary election showing, is seen getting that second term but underdog challenger Joseph Newton is optimistic as the campaign comes down the homestretch and hinting at a surprise outcome.

Open seats guarantee at least three new ward councillors and one new school committee member.

Candidates on the Nov. 4 ballot include two women hoping to crack through into the now all-male council and the city's first Asian-American contender making his second bid for a seat in that body.

And Tuesday could be the "last hurrah" for a 30-year officer holder.

Although the ballot looks voter appealing, City Clerk Joseph Shea is forecasting an "about 40 percent" turnout compared to 47 percent two years ago.

"I hope I am wrong," he says. "I would like to see a higher turnout but I doubt it."

He was right on target with his 25 percent prediction for the Sept. 16 preliminary election.

The city's registered voters now number 52,684 — up 454 from the preliminary election.

This year's mayoral campaign between Phelan and Newton has been mostly low-key unlike the heated one of two years ago when Phelan, as an underdog, defeated six-term incumbent James Sheets by 17 votes in the city's closest ever mayoral election.

Phelan, 43, despite the lack of campaign sparks, is not taking Newton lightly.

And Newton, 36, though he finished 5,120 votes behind Phelan in September, projects optimism.

"I think we are going to surprise a lot of people," he says.

Phelan sees the 68 percent of the vote he got to Newton's 27 percent in the preliminary election as an endorsement of his administration and that he is moving

New QHS, Fire Dept., Tourism Issues Phelan, Newton Spar In Lone Mayoral Debate

In the only mayoral debate of the campaign season, Mayor William Phelan and Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton sparred over a number of issues Monday night, giving residents the opportunity to make a more informed decision when they go to the polls this Tuesday, Nov. 4.

Sponsored by the Patriot Ledger and Quincy Access Television, the one-hour debate allowed the candidates to promote their views on a number of issues, including the new Quincy High School project, tourism, the revitalization of the downtown area and the condition of the streets and sidewalks. The debate was held at the Quincy Access Television studio.

Moderated by Chazy Dowaliby, editor of the Patriot Ledger, the debate featured a panel of representatives from the Quincy media. The candidates fielded questions from Joe Catalano, program director from WJDA; William Traynor, Quincy Sun reporter; and Bill Flynn, city edition editor for the Patriot Ledger.

The city's $110 million plan to build a new high school on Faxon Field and renovate the existing high school dominated the early portion of the debate.

Newton took Phelan to task for not offering an alter-

Beau's Place Sold After Over 35 Years

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

After more than 35 years, Beau's Place at 375 Washington St., Quincy Point has been sold to Alexandros Kesaris, and partner Edward Corcoran, and will be called Rag's Tavern.

The License Board Tuesday granted the transfer of the common victualer, all alcohol license. Also transferred were the cabaret, pinball and video licenses.

The board's vote will be sent to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission for approval.

Kesaris said the hours of operation will be from 8 a.m. to 1 a.m. six days a week. On Sundays the business will open from noon to 1 a.m.

Kesaris told the board that extensive renovation is planned including new restrooms, new kitchen equipment and the replacing of floors and cosmetic work.

Kesaris was former general manager of Amelia's at Marina Bay.

Chairman Joseph Shea commended the Page family who owned and operated Beau's Place since the mid 60's, and who still own the building.

He said after the death of Robert Page Sr., their son Robert Jr. and their mother and family took over the business. He said "I salute them for all their good work."

Shea said that Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond was in support of the transfer.

Kesaris, who said he plans to serve pizzas hopes to open the establishment around the second week in December.

Art Association Offers Kid's Holiday Workshop

The Quincy Art Association will offer a "Children's Holiday Workshop" for elementary school-aged children 5 to 11 years on three Tuesday afternoons in November and December.

The sessions will be held Nov. 18, Dec. 2 and Dec. 9 from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. at the Quincy Art Association building, 26 High School St., Quincy. The instructor is Denise Duncan.

Call the Association at 617-770-2482 for information on registration, cost and questions.

Quincy Point Used Car License Granted

The License Board Tuesday granted Carlo M. Saliba, doing business as Presidents Auto Sales, 671 Washington St., a Motor II, used car license.

The vote is pending a report from the traffic engineer. And the board stipulated that the number of used cars not exceed 35. Originally, Saliba requested 43 cars with five cars designated for customers and employees.

However, Police Chief William Falco said he would be more comfortable with 35 cars.

Saliba is former owner of Presidents Auto Sales at 150 East Howard St. across from the shipyard.

Atty. Dennis Harrington, counsel for Saliba, showed complete site plans to the board. The site is a former Texaco gas station.

Harrington said that Saliba had an "extremely good record" while at East Howard St. He said that all pumps at the Washington St. site have been removed. He said there will be no repairs done on the premises, but will be sent out to a contractor in Weymouth.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the board will await the results of a report from traffic engineer Roy Lamont.

The hours of operation will be from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday and 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturdays. It will be closed on Sundays.

Grant Money To Provide Training City Seeking Volunteers To Assist During Emergencies, Disasters

The City of Quincy is looking for volunteers who wish to assist their community in the event of an emergency or disaster situation.

With the help of a $5,600 CERT (Community Emergency Response Team) grant, the city will conduct training classes for volunteers who wish to assist their neighborhood in the case of an emergency or catastrophe.

"The city will always rely on its safety personnel to deal with emergencies, but trained citizens can augment those services," said Tom Gorman, director of the Emergency Management Department.

Gorman said volunteers can expect to learn about CPR, first aid, fire safety, light search and rescue, man-made and natural disasters, and many other topics related to emergency situations.

"This course allows volunteers to learn something and pass it on to their neighbors," he said. Neighborhood preparedness helps to reduce emergency needs and manages existing resources until professional assistance arrives, he said.

Classes will be taught under the direction of the department, he said. Class instructors will be state and local public safety officials, he said.

Grant monies will be used to pay instructors and for course materials, he said.

Classes are scheduled to meet twice a week beginning the week of Nov. 10 and end in December, according to Gorman. He said the city is looking for 20 to 25 volunteers for the class.

The city is in the process of applying for a similar grant to secure funds for another training course early next year, he said.

Interested parties should contact the Emergency Management Department at 617-376-1105.

"Is it too late for me to refinance?"

If you just go by what you hear or read in the mainstream media, you might think that the refinancing "window" has slammed shut. But that's a simplification that's simply not true. Here are the facts: Mortgage rates are still bouncing around near 50-year lows. So if you want to refinance for whatever reason — to be mortgage-free before you retire, to pay for tuition, to consolidate other loans and debts or just to lock in a low rate before the window does close — you still have time. But possibly not much. So don't wait. Come see us or call 617-471-0750.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1908 postcard view of St. John's Catholic Church on School Street in Quincy Center. Before it was dedicated as a mission church, 150 years ago in 1853, an anti-Catholic group known as the "Know Nothings" tried unsuccessfully to block the purchase of the land. In 1863 it became a separate parish in the community. Father Francis Friguglietti expanded the original building in 1874 with the two wings shown here that reinforced its classic Gothic style. He also built the original Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy in 1878, the St. Francis Church in South Braintree in 1879 and in 1893 he built the old St. Frances-by-the-Sea church in Houghs Neck. They were built to serve the burgeoning Catholic immigration into the area in the latter part of the 19th century. Father Francis, as he was affectionately called, also expanded the cemetery at St. Mary's church in West Quincy where he was interred in 1903.

Rep. Ayers Got It Right

The press loves to cover politics at its worst. "Politics as usual" gets people mad and sells newspapers. What we don't often hear about are the times our elected officials get things right.

State Representative Bruce Ayers got it right when he opposed Speaker Finerman's plan to set legislative bonus pay — the stipends of between $7,500 and $25,000 awarded to leadership loyalists above their $53,000 base pay — without oversight from the Senate or Governor or input from the public.

The problem with the proposal wasn't just the implicit symbolism of "We'll raise our pay while cutting yours." The problem was that it would have increased Speaker Finerman's already excessive ability to control the agenda in the House. And that's why Speaker Finerman made the proposal a top priority, spending days twisting arms while other more weighty issues languished.

Representative Ayers faced strong pressure to go along with the majority of members on this one, but to his credit, he resisted. Along with a coalition of Democratic moderates, progressives and Republicans, his stand was crucial to sustaining the Governor's veto and ultimately burying the proposal. But his opposition may come with a price — a smaller office, reduced staff, fewer influential committee assignments, or fewer goodies for the district. And therein lies the problem.

Until more Representatives stand up to leadership when it is wrong-headed, like Representative Ayers did on this one, we'll continue to have a House (and to a lesser extent a Senate) that resembles a fiefdom rather than the open, democratic institution it could and should be.

Thanks Citizens Who Participated In Blood Drive

I want to take the opportunity to thank the citizens of Norfolk County who participated in the recent blood drive sponsored by the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. I would also like to express my appreciation to the staff of the American Red Cross in Dedham who did the leg work to make the blood drive a success.

Giving blood is truly giving the gift of life. Through their generosity, donors provided blood which was then utilized for surgery, trauma, chemotherapy, kidney dialysis, hemophilia, shock and other life threatening conditions.

Unfortunately, the need for blood continues unabated.

The New England chapter of the Red Cross reports there is currently a day or less supply of all blood types for the New England region. Especially acute are shortages of O negative and O positive blood.

I urge those who were unable to attend the recent blood drive to consider calling the American Red Cross at 1-800-448-3543 and set up an appointment to give blood. What better way to help your community and those in need. Again, my sincere thanks to those who gave of their time to donate blood during the recent blood drive.

Shipyard Wins First Civilian Contract

General Dynamics was awarded its first civilian contract at the Quincy Shipyard by the Federal Maritime Subsidy Board this week.

The $98 million project called for the construction of three highly sophisticated barge-carrying merchant vessels designed by the Lykes Brothers Steamship Co. The double decker vessels would be capable of carrying 24 cargo-carrying barges.

It took the federal board two years to decide that General Dynamics was the lowest bidder, at $32.6 million per ship. The only other bidder was the Avondale Shipyards of Louisiana.

The government subsidy of the ship construction was 55 percent, the highest percentage allowed by law.

OIL SPILLAGE AT TOWN RIVER

At the request of Ward 2 Councillor Clifford Marshall, Fire Chief Edward Barry designated Deputy Chief Herbert Rourke and Fire Captain Francis Daly to investigate conditions at the Quincy Oil Company's waterfront terminals on Town River.

While the federal government standards called for use of plastic booms to prevent the spread of accidental spills, the Town River was still outfitted with wooden booms, that Councillor Marshall called useless.

FIREARMS REGISTRATION BEGUN

AT POLICE HEADQUARTERS

Police Chief Francis Finn announced that under a new state law now in effect, owners of firearms must register with the local police. It covered persons who did not have a license to carry a firearm and who own or possess a firearm, rifle or shotgun. A firearm ID card does not give permission to carry a firearm," the chief emphasized.

Registration cost $2 and would be valid for five years.

Opens Milestone Season Nov. 7

Quincy Symphony Orchestra Celebrating 50 Years Of Music

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

After a half century of entertaining classical music lovers, the Quincy Symphony Orchestra (QSO) shows no signs of slowing down.

The volunteer group, consisting of 55 to 60 classically trained musicians from the area, is rehearsing for its 50th season, which kicks off on Nov. 7 at 8 p.m. in the North Quincy High School auditorium. Usually, residents can expect five shows during a typical season, which runs from November to May. The holiday concert at the Thomas Crane Public Library is always an audience favorite.

But this season, QSO is looking to expand its schedule to include another show on Flag Day in June. Organizers are exploring the possibility with Mayor William Phelan's office.

Guided by conductor Yoichi Udagawa, QSO performs five concerts a year, including the free holiday performance as a gift to the city. Udagawa, beginning his eighth season with the orchestra, has served as cover conductor for both the Boston Pops and the Boston Symphony. He has worked with many other orchestras, including the Garden State Philharmonic, the Boston Conservatory Orchestra and the Austin Civic Orchestra.

Barbara Clement, in her third year as president of QSO, said the symphony has reached a milestone.

"It's really an exciting year," said Clement, who has played the flute and piccolo

MARJORIE MAXHAM, who is celebrating her 50th year with the Quincy Symphony Orchestra, practices on the French horn. Maxham has been playing with QSO since it first began entertaining music lovers in 1953. QSO kicks off its 50th year on Nov. 7 at the North Quincy High School auditorium.

in the orchestra for 10 years. "I have always felt that the symphony has allowed some great local musicians to practice and play for audiences."

Another musician, Marjorie Maxham, could also serve as the orchestra's historian. She has played French horn for QSO since it was founded in 1953.

Maxham, a Braintree resident, said she was simply looking for a place to play her instrument.

"I played when I was in college," she said. "And I wanted to find a place to play after college. The symphony orchestra has always provided people a place to play their instrument, although they do something else for a living. I don't think that need has changed over the years."

Maxham said the orchestra has been graced with many music teachers who simply wanted to brush up on their skills.

This year, the orchestra's ranks have swelled to 65 players, due to a recent influx of string musicians.

"It's fabulous, we have had a recent surge in interest," said Clement. "We are thrilled with the new musicians."

Clement said the symphony sees very little turnover from year to year, because the musicians are so dedicated.

"We have people who play in the symphony from Cape Cod and the Worcester area - these are very dedicated people," she said.

QSO relies on private donations, as well as state and local grants, to stay afloat. The South Shore Music Circus also provides grants to the organization. The orchestra's budget depends on ticket sales, grant monies and donations from the many friends of the symphony.

On Dec. 9, the QSO will hold its third annual fundraiser at the Quincy Marriott Hotel. A reception will be held at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m. Television broadcaster Natalie Jacobsen is scheduled to be a guest narrator.

For more information about the season schedule, or to purchase tickets, contact Chairwoman Lucy Falco at 617-479-6786. To learn more about the QSO, visit www.quincysymphony.org.

Quincy Celebrates Centennial Of City's First Synagogue

By SHEILA HALLORAN

Last Thursday night, close to 200 hundred people gathered at Adams Academy to commemorate the 100 years of the Jewish community in Quincy.

The Quincy Jewish Committee in conjunction with the Quincy Historical Society hosted the celebration in dedication of Quincy's first synagogue, Ahavath Achim, founded in the fall of 1903.

The speakers of the evening discussed the American Jewish immigration both to America 350 years ago and to Quincy just over a century ago.

Ruth Fein, past president of the American Jewish Historical Society, was the featured speaker of the evening. John Grossman, the patriarch of one of the founding families of Ahavath Achim, also spoke, sharing specific memories of Quincy's first synagogue.

Known as the "Hebrews of Quincy," the profile of the first Jews in Quincy in the late 19th century was "poor, daring, adventurous, pioneering, and without status from the communities in which they came," said historian Ruth Fein.

The Jews came to America without rabbis or teachers. Their only possessions were prayer books and lunar calendars, so they would know when the holidays were. According to Fein, they had to "create synagogues from memory."

Although this year marks the centennial of Quincy's first synagogue, the birth of the Jewish community in Quincy dates back approximately 15 years earlier, with the arrival of Henry Litchman. The Austrian-born native is known as the first Jewish man in Quincy.

Not long after the arrival of Litchman, another Jewish immigrant, Louis Grossman arrived in Quincy. The Russian-born Grossman would go on to become a successful business executive and philanthropist and Grossman would become a well-recognized name in Quincy.

Among those who attended Thursday's celebration were grandchildren, great-grandchildren and other descendants of Henry Litchman and Louis Grossman.

Litchman and Grossman both resided on Water Street in South Quincy. The Jewish community in Quincy continued to grow over the next few years. Litchman and Grossman held prayer services in their homes for the Quincy Jews until 1903, when Litchman and Grossman founded Ahavath Achim. Translated as "brotherly love," Ahavath Achim was located at 140 School St., in what had been St. John's Church.

of Louis and son of Joseph B. Grossman, the first child born to Jewish parents in Quincy, described Ahavath Achim as "beautiful inside." It was kept clean, polished, and people were regulars there."

After listening to Grossman speak, Fein commented "what makes a community are those who can talk about the community in which they grew with passion." She continued, "We need people who can remember."

Fein discussed the hardships suffered by Jewish immigrants. "Jews were a nation within a nation," she said. Fein calls the first Quincy Jews "the absolute pioneers." Quincy Jews learned to do things their own way and to better themselves economically. Jews came to America for freedom of religion and according to Fein, they contributed greatly and continue to contribute.

Following the speakers last Thursday evening, the congregation was invited to view a display of rare memorabilia and artifacts from Quincy's Jewish community, including photographs of Ahavath Achim and its founders and newspaper articles marking the significant Jewish influences in Quincy over the past 100 years.

Quincy city council members Dan Raymondi, Doug

MEMBERS of the committee that organized the centennial celebration of Ahavath Achim, the first synagogue in Quincy, included (left to right) Ed Fitzgerald, executive director of the Quincy Historical Society; David Eizickson, president of the Quincy Jewish Committee; Donna Halper, historian and Emerson College faculty member; Ruth Fein, featured speaker; Arthur Gabel, chairman of the meeting for the Quincy Jewish Committee; Jim Edwards, president of the Quincy Historical Society; and John Grossman, featured speaker.

Gutro and Francis McCauley attended the centennial celebration. Raymondi described the Quincy Jewish influence as part of the "fabric and quilt of communities that make up the City of Quincy."

Over the years, the strong Jewish community in Quincy has diminished. In the 1950s, it is estimated that Quincy was home to over 1,000 Jewish families. In 1972, Ahavath Achim was demolished due to a decrease in attendance and fire damage. Today, it is estimated that only about 200 Jewish families remain.

Historian and Emerson Faculty member Donna

Halper attributes the decrease in Quincy's Jewish population to the decline in the once prosperous Quincy business industry.

"Quincy had a Jewish Community Center that was very active, and it had a local economy that was enhanced by the Quincy Shipyard. And then it all changed. The ship yard closed, the major stores moved to the South Shore Plaza, the Jewish Community Center experienced a decline in members, and gradually there were not the same economic opportunities here."

In 1995, David Eizickson and Arthur Gabel established the Quincy Jewish Committee to preserve the presence of the Jewish community in Quincy. Eizickson serves as president of the Committee, which has about 100 members.

Although Ahavath Achim has long since closed, its Torah scrolls were given to Temple Beth El, which is still an active synagogue in the Quincy Community.

Fein stated that "Jews brought to these shores a sense of community." Even though the Jewish community in Quincy is not as large as it once was, that sense of community was evident with the large turnout and support shown at Adams Academy last Thursday evening.

A LOT CAN HAPPEN IN ONE TERM!

Joe's son Kevin has grown up quite a bit. Although he has glasses now, even he can see the progress that's happening. Some of the pot holes and bad streets have been fixed, but not enough. More importantly, a Paveway Management Plan exists, thanks in good part to Councillor Joe Finn's resolution and advocacy. For the first time in a long time the city has both the technology and the political will to make a difference on our 200 miles of streets and sidewalks. That's not all Joe has accomplished. His efforts have led to new affordable housing opportunities, helped to save public senior housing and preserved the rights of all of Quincy's working families. He has brought a common sense and caring approach to the Quincy City Council.

LET'S GIVE HIM ANOTHER TERM!

native plan should the Faxon Field project fail. The two-term councillors said environmental concerns and a lack of assurances on the 90 percent reimbursement rate could doom the plan. Newton questioned whether the high school would ever be built on Faxon Field.

"It's unfortunate, but I think this is set up to fail," Newton said. "This is the largest municipal project in the city's history, and to not have a plan B is shortsighted. If we don't get that 90 percent we are dead in the water."

But Phelan said the city will continue to move forward on the high school project, unless the 90 percent reimbursement rate is placed in jeopardy.

"I share Councilor Newton's concerns, but there is no alternative site other than Faxon Field," Phelan said. "If there is ever a risk of us losing the 90 percent, then we have to look at renovation, that is the only alternative."

Choosing another viable site jeopardizes the high school project because environmental regulations make it incumbent upon the city to prove there are no other potential places for the new high school, Phelan said.

The city should have a better idea in the next few months about its prospects for obtaining the necessary environmental permits, Phelan said.

Newton floated the idea of locating the high school on the current DPW site, but Phelan said that place has environmental concerns as well.

The candidates tussled over a city council-approved ordinance that calls for adopting minimum manning standards in the fire department. Phelan vetoed the measure, calling it fiscally irresponsible. But the council overrode the mayor's veto during the summer.

Phelan reiterated his opposition to the measure and said the city council was "meddling" with the fire department. The ordinance is so costly that its implementation may force the city to close fire stations, he said.

"There is nothing wrong with supporting our firefighters, but let's be realistic," Phelan said. "Only one other municipality in the entire country has this ordinance in effect. That's because we can't afford it."

But Newton said the ordinance ensures the safety of firefighters and the public.

"We need to give the tools to the firefighters to do their job," Newton said. "I think it protects our firefighters and it protects our citizens."

Newton criticized Phelan and the city for re-negotiating a lease with Quarry Hills Associates, the developers who are building a new golf course on the Quincy/Milton line. Private memberships should not be allowed at the course, and membership fees are too expensive for the average player, Newton said.

"It was supposed to be a blue collar course, and the only blue collar people there are working on it," said Newton. "This is another sweetheart deal."

But Phelan countered, saying the new lease will bring in millions of dollars in revenue to the city's coffers. In addition, the new lease is a vast improvement because the former lease allowed only private memberships. The course will not be entirely private, and Quincy residents will be offered discounts on greens fees, among other things, Phelan said.

The mayor called the new lease "one of the best accomplishments" of his administration.

Phelan said conditions in the downtown area have improved since he took office almost two years ago.

"We've added a huge police presence. In fact, the business property owners, I'm sure would agree, that it's just a remarkable turnaround," he said. In addition, Phelan said the city is working closely with MBTA police and the library board to boost public safety measures in those areas.

Both candidates agreed that they would not seek an override of Proposition 2 1/2 under any circumstance. "I think we are overtaxed now," said Newton.

Phelan also said Quincy's tourism board has made inroads in boosting the city's tourism industry.

"All over the country tourism is down, but in Quincy, it's up," he said. The mayor said the board has been taking a number of steps to boost tourism, but urged Quincy Tourism Inc. to hire a full-time executive director. The board is also looking for ways to take advantage of the large influx of visitors who will be attending the Democratic National Convention next year in Boston, Phelan said.

Newton also defended himself for delving into the city's hiring practices within the fire and police departments.

Throughout the debate, Phelan touted his record in dealing with budget issues.

"Since being elected mayor two years ago, I've worked hard to move Quincy forward, despite an enormous deficit and the worst fiscal crisis we've seen in recent history," he said. "In the face of that fiscal crisis, we've brought forth real reform, fiscal stability and accountability to City Hall."

But Newton said he is "worried" about the direction of the city under Phelan's watch.

"I am worried about the future. We do have a lot ahead of us to keep an eye on," he said.

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and the Massachusetts Department of Revenue (DOR) will hold a free workshop Wednesday, Nov. 5 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The seminar will show business owners how to reduce tax liabilities by taking advantage of tax write-offs, such as office in the home and automobile expenses. Participants can also learn how to sign up to make federal tax deposits electronically.

"We will do a special presentation on Internet Web sites, including IRS and other business-related sites,

"In our internet surfing sessions, we'll demonstrate how to download free tax forms and publications and how to search for topics to find the information you need."

Due to limited space, participants are asked to pre-register. To register, email the workshop date, name, address, and phone number to Richard Arruda, Massachusetts DOR, at: arrudam@dor.state.ma.us or call him at 508-678-2844, ext. 37319.

Joe

KEEGAN

Ward 1 City Councillor

November 4th

Commitment

Joe Keegan has never been afraid to stand up for what's right. Just one year out of high school, Joe joined fellow U.S. soldiers in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Iraq, literally putting their lives on the line for our freedom.

This willingness to sacrifice for other typifies the character of Joe Keegan.

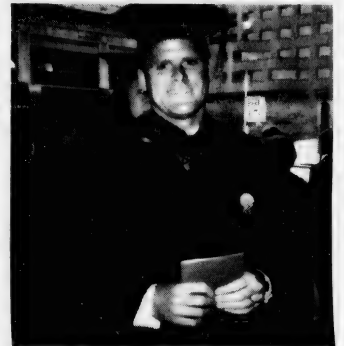

As our Ward Councillor, Joe will not be afraid to fight for our interests above special interests.

Dedication

A graduate of the Quincy Public Schools, Joe has never stopped trying to improve his capabilities.

After returning from the Gulf War, he enrolled in college, became a Police Officer and worked his way through Law School at night. Joe hopes to bring his dedication and work ethic to City Hall to fight for all of us in Ward 1.

Leadership

As a Quincy Police Officer in 2002, Joe responded to an emergency situation like he has always responded to the challenges in his life. Upon arriving on the scene of a distressed woman submerged and struggling in Quincy Bay, Joe jumped into the water, swam to the woman and pulled her back to safety. Injured in this heroic rescue, Joe was commended by Police Chief William Falco, who described Joe's response as, "bravery and unselfish actions."

'For bravery and heroism exhibited during the rescue of a woman from the frigid waters of Quincy Bay.'

The 16th annual Quincy City Democratic Committee Brunch will be held Sunday at 9:30 a.m. at the George F. Bryan VFW Post on Broad Street, Quincy.

State Senator Michael Morrissey will be the keynote speaker.

Democratic candidates for public office have been invited to attend.

nity activist serving as a volunteer coordinator for First Night Quincy, Boy Scout Leader and a volunteer for several charitable events in Quincy.

Tickets are $15 each. Tables of 10 are available at a discount price of $125.

Kids Voting Also Tuesday

Students in grades kindergarten through 12 will be able to cast their votes in a mock election next Tuesday as part of the Kids Voting program.

Elementary and middle school students will be able to accompany their parents and cast separate ballots at the city's polling places from 12 noon to 6 p.m., according to Jim Mullaney, director of business affairs at Quincy Public Schools.

Each polling site will have a separate area for the kids vote, he said.

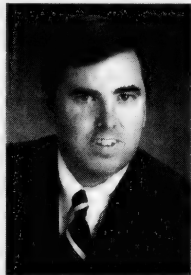

High school students will be able to vote at their respective schools during the entire school day, he said. A high turnout is expected from high school students, said Mullaney.

The kids ballot will be almost identical to the actual ballot, said City Clerk Joseph Shea. Instead, the ballot will contain photos of the candidates and will have every Ward contest, instead of separate ballots in each individual Ward, he said.

The kids ballots will be gathered and tallied on election night also, he said.

Kids Voting is a non-profit, grassroots education program that gives young people actual experience in the election process by casting ballots alongside their parents in a real election.

MICHAEL MORRISSEY

"This is an election year and the City Committee expects that most candidates will attend," said Michael Cheney, City Committee Chairman.

Each year the City Democratic Committee recognizes an individual that exemplifies the principles of the Democratic Party. The Dennis Ryan Award will be presented to Michael Berry, a 53-year-old IBEW 103 electrician from Houghs Neck.

"Mike has been involved in every federal, state and local election for as long as anyone can remember," Cheney said. "He truly exemplifies the principles of a true Democrat."

Congress Approves Delahunt Bill For End To Cuba Travel Ban

Congress has approved legislation, championed by Rep. William Delahunt, to lift United States restrictions on travel by Americans to Cuba.

The measure, part of an appropriations bill, now goes to a joint conference committee to iron out the many differences between the Senate and the House versions.

But it still faces a veto by President Bush who has vowed to halt any legislation containing this Cuba language.

The Senate gave its approval last week by a 59 to 36 margin while earlier this month the House of Representatives passed it by a 227 to 188 vote.

The bill under threat of veto is the 2004 appropriations measure covering two federal agencies, the Departments of Transportation and Treasury.

"The House and Senate have spoken clearly and jointly," said Delahunt. "We don't need travel police who tell us where we can go and what we can do when we get there."

Current law prohibits Americans, with certain exceptions, from traveling to Cuba without a license from the Office of Foreign Assets Control in the Treasury Department.

Delahunt has long maintained that these restrictions are counterproductive.

"U.S. policy seems based on the belief that restricting Americans' rights will somehow bring change to Cuba," he said. "That make no sense."

Water Quality Wollaston Beach Open Space Candidates Concerns

Water quality, Wollaston Beach, the salt marshes and open space are the issues most frequently mentioned when you quiz the candidates in the Nov. 4 election on the environmental concerns facing Quincy today.

That was one of the questions asked of the candidates the other day by the Quincy Environmental Network on a questionnaire that drew responses from eight of those who survived to the final election.

"The restoration of our city's marshlands, the preservation and maintenance of our park system and the cleanup of Wollaston Beach and our coastal waters, were the top three concerns of Mayor William Phelan.

He noted that the restoration of the Houghs Neck salt marshes has begun, the Army Corps of Engineers is ready to begin work on Broad Meadows and "we are now looking at the marshes at Squantum and Marina Bay."

"Our goal is to restore all of our marshes so that they become the sound ecological environs they were years ago," said Phelan.

Joseph Newton, the mayor's opponent, had not responded to the NET questionnaire at presstime.

Among the at-large candidates for the City Council, Frank McCauley identified the most pressing environmental issues as "clean up the bog in North Quincy, clean up of sewage from leaking pipes on Quincy Shore Drive and clean up former high school site on Quincy Avenue."

Jimmy Liang would like to see "the preservation and enhancement of existing open spaces, woodlands, wetlands and water bodies" as well as restoration of the salt marshes and improvement of the quality of storm water run-off, particularly at Wollaston Beach.

Joseph Finn leans toward elevating the environment to a "primary as opposed to a tertiary position in the forwarding of development, "smart" development of and in the city and "quality and protection of water, beaches and remaining natural areas within the city limits."

Jo Ann Bragg was brief when she said, "the most pressing environmental issues facing the city of Quincy today are preserving open space, restoring our salt water marshland, improving the water quality of our 27 miles of coastline and cleaning up any hazardous waste sites around the city."

Kevin Coughlin, candidate for the Council in Ward 3, nominated as the three most pressing environmental issues "land use, development and preserving space; restoration of our salt water marshland; and improving water quality."

Alicia Gardner, candidate for the Council in Ward 6, feels that the important issues are "preserving and protecting our open space . . . and our salt marshes, maintaining and upgrading our parks recreation facilities and beaches . . . and mitigating the effects of development by assuring open space taken is replicated."

Brian McNamee, another candidate in Ward 6, cited as issues the water quality at Wollaston Beach, the preservation of open space and the reduction of air pollution. "We need to identify and replace any sewer lines that are broken and leaching into storm collection systems."

QMC Seminar Offers Support For People Coping With Loss

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) will offer a bereavement seminar for individuals who recently experienced the death of someone close, on Nov. 19 from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at the Center on 114 Whitwell St.

Titled "Coping With the Holidays," the seminar will have grief counselors available to address concerns and answer questions from the public.

Grief counselors say it is not uncommon for people who have experienced the death of a close relative or friend to feel a heightened sense of loss around the holidays.

Talking about feeling of loss, particularly with people who are going through a similar grieving process is part of the healing process, according to Rev. Esther Bowen, certified bereavement counselor and director of pastoral care at Quincy Medical Center.

Pre-registration is required. For more information call 617-376-5502.

Water Bills Complaints To Be Aired Nov. 24

provide any relief to allow them to make payments over an extended period of time?"

Coughlin said he has received complaints from residents who claim their water bills have doubled in one quarter.

"If the bills are valid then what can we do to assist people who are receiving bills they may not be able to pay? I think we need to respond to that," he said.

Coughlin said he would like the DPW to explain the differences between the new and old meter-reading equipment.

The new meter-reading guns have the capability of using radio waves to read water meters, Fink said. The technology would be similar to that used for garage-door openers or cordless telephones, he said.

City employees simply can walk by a dwelling and catch a reading by radio waves, Fink said. Workers would not be concerned with gaining access to homes, he said. The technology would allow the city to do away with estimated readings, he said. In addition, the new meter reading equipment would allow the city to take monthly readings, which would limit any potential problems with bills, said Fink.

New water meters would have to be installed in dwellings to accommodate the new system, Fink said. The city is looking to begin the process of converting to the new system next year, Fink said. Many cities and towns, including Abington and Rockland, utilize the new equipment already, he said.

The conversion project is part of a larger capital improvement plan being worked on by Mayor William Phelan, said Fink. Converting thousands of water meters to the new system would cost millions of dollars, he said.

The city is exploring the possibility of bonding the conversion plan, said Fink.

Liang Endorsed By Carmen's Union

Jimmy Liang, a candidate for an at-large seat on the City Council, has been endorsed by the Boston Carmen's Union, which represents more than 5,900 MBTA workers.

It is the first endorsement of Liang by a major organization.

"The Carmen's Union feels very fortunate to have a friend of your stature and integrity running for election as city councillor in the City of Quincy," wrote the union in a note to Liang.

"You will be a great asset to the working men and women in Quincy."

Liang responded that he and the union "share common goals and values."

"At the age of four, my family came to the United States seeking a better life, with greater opportunities, more safety and security. In short, we came seeking the American dream. We found it is Quincy and continue to live it.

"Organized labor is really about the same things my family sought. You fight to improve workers lives, ensure worker safety and provide worker security. Labor has brought the American dream within the reach of many who otherwise would not have had a fair chance.

Liang has been campaigning on the promise to bring new ideas and a new vision to the City Council with the rallying cry of "yesterday's politicians, yesterday's methods and yesterday's solutions... just won't do for today's Quincy."

the city forward, the central themes of his bid for a second term.

But Newton, a two-term Ward 6 councillor who got into the race at the last minute and with little money, notes that only 12,754 voted in September and 39,482 stayed home.

"A lot of those voters who didn't come out, I feel, are undecided and I hope to get them out Nov. 4."

Shea, in making his 40 percent prediction, notes that most of this year's campaigning for not only mayor, but the other offices, has been somewhat in a quiet mode.

He is also basing his forecast on another indicator: going into this week just days before the election, there were only 393 applications for absentee ballots. Two years ago 752 absentee ballots were actually cast.

The ballot:

CITY COUNCIL AT-LARGE

The city council at-large race is being watched closely.

Incumbents Francis X. McCauley, 73, and Joseph G. Finn, 47, and appointee John F. Keenan, 39, have strong challengers in JoAnn Bragg, 48, and Jimmy Liang, 26.

For McCauley, a four-term mayor seeking his eighth term on the council, this apparently is his last campaign. Now in his 30th year in municipal elective office, he has indicated this will be his last run.

Finn, former executive director of Father Bill's Place and now executive director of Shelter, Inc., a Greater Boston agency helping the poor, is seeking a second term.

Keenan was elected by the city council in February to fill the seat vacated by Tim Cahill after he became state treasurer. He was the runner-up in the at-large race two years ago.

Keenan is the executive director of the Norfolk County Retirement System and served as executive secretary to Mayor Sheets.

Bragg, now in her third term, 10th year as a member of the school committee, has been a consistent strong vote-getter. She topped the school committee field in her last two elections and has served as vice chairwoman of the board.

Liang, a Quincy restaurant owner, is making his second run for councillor at-large. He is the first and so far only Asian-American candidate to run for the city council.

Two years ago he won a nomination in a nine-candidate preliminary election field and finished fifth in the final election polling 7,173 votes.

Also seeking one of the three at-large seats is Robert J. Boussy, 48, of Farrington St., who has run in Ward 3 and at-large and in 1999 challenged Mayor Sheets.

There was no preliminary election for council at-large.

Former Councillor Leo J. Kelly, 71, and Joseph Keegan, 32, a Quincy police officer and Desert Shield and Desert Storm Army veteran, seek the Ward 1 seat incumbent Gregory Hanley is leaving.

Kelly, who held the seat for 10 years from 1974 to 1983, has been chairman of the Beaches and Coastal Commission for several years.

In the preliminary election, Kelly topped the five-candidate field with a vote of 868. Keegan took the second spot with 702 — 166 behind Kelly.

Ward 3

Incumbent Kevin Coughlin, 48, seeking a second term, is opposed by John C. Cain, Jr., 58, of South Central Ave. Coughlin is an assistant chief probation officer in Middlesex Family Court. Cain, a teacher in the Boston public school system and former computer company owner, is making his third bid for the Ward 3 seat.

There was no preliminary election.

Ward 6

Alicia A. Gardner, 50, of Deerfield St., Squantum, and Brian McNamee, 46, of Commander Shea Boulevard, North Quincy, are seen in a close race for the Ward 6 seat Joseph Newton is leaving.

Gardner, Constituent Service Aide to state Senator Michael Morrissey, is making her political debut.

McNamee, chief financial officer for the South Essex Sewerage District, has run for the Ward 6 seat before and two years ago was a candidate for councillor at-large.

In the five-candidate preliminary election in September, Gardner topped the field with a close 12-vote margin over McNamee.

Two incumbents and one newcomer are in the "already elected" category.

Daniel Raymondi, 56, Douglas S. Gutro, 38, and James H. Davis, III, 38, of Shawmut St., are unopposed.

Raymondi is running for his eighth term in Ward 2 and Gutro for his second in Ward 5.

Davis, an attorney and a political newcomer, was the only candidate to take out papers for the Ward 4 seat Bryan Connolly is leaving after only one term. An open ward seat with only one candidate is a political rarity in Quincy.

Only three women — Edna Austin, Joanne Condon and Patricia Toland — have been elected to the city council in Quincy's 114 years as a city.

Toland, who died in 1994, was the last to serve. She was elected to an at-large seat in 1981 and re-elected to five more terms. She was council president in 1988-89, the only woman to hold that post. She left the council in 1993 to become assistant city clerk. The council has been all-male since.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

The school committee race has generated a good share of voter interest.

Christine Cedrone, present vice-chairwoman, has decided not to seek a third term, leaving a vacant seat to attract contenders.

Incumbent Linda K. Stice, 54, is seeking her fourth term and was the top vote-getter in the school committee preliminary election in September.

Elaine Dwyer, 48, who was appointed at the city council-school committee joint convention to complete William Phelan's term after he was elected mayor, hopes to retain the seat by city-wide election.

The four contenders are: Brian H. Buckley, 52, of Sims Rd., coordinator of Intergenerational Programs for the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office and former executive director of the Quincy Council on Aging.

Ronald P. Iacobucci, 48, of Adams St., head of the South Shore and Neponset Valley Foundation overseeing the Mini-Fenway Park planned for Quincy.

Theresa M. Lord-Piatelli, 46, of Brunswick St., Quincy attorney and chairwoman of the Quincy College Board of Governors, making her political debut. David F. McCarthy, 42, of Whitney Rd., director of security at General Dynamics in Needham and a member of the Quarry Hills Gold Course Advisory Board.

Stice topped the preliminary election field with an impressive vote of 6,582 followed by Iacobucci, 4,506; Buckley, 4,448; Lord-Piatelli, 3,885; Dwyer, 3,530; and McCarthy, 3,291.

The polling places for the city's 30 precincts will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 4. Their locations are listed on page 21.

Liang Endorsed By Carmen's Union

Jimmy Liang, a candidate for an at-large seat on the City Council, has been endorsed by the Boston Carmen's Union, which represents more than 5,900 MBTA workers.

It is the first endorsement of Liang by a major organization.

"The Carmen's Union feels very fortunate to have a friend of your stature and integrity running for election as city councillor in the City of Quincy," wrote the union in a note to Liang.

"You will be a great asset to the working men and women in Quincy."

Liang responded that he and the union "share common goals and values."

"At the age of four, many family came to the United States seeking a better life, with greater opportunities, more safety and security. In short, we came seeking the American dream. We found it is Quincy and continue to live it.

"Organized labor is really about the same things my family sought. You fight to improve workers lives, ensure worker safety and provide worker security. Labor has brought the American dream within the reach of many who otherwise would not have had a fair chance."

"So, my life and lives of the average working man and woman aren't very different."

What have we learned from experience?

It's true...

Some of the people running for City Council have spent more time in the City Government than Jimmy Liang.

What has that experience brought us?

Record high taxes. Roads and sidewalks in disrepair. Water bills out of control. Unbearable traffic. Threats of cutbacks and layoffs.

So what has that experience taught us?

That today's issues and challenges call for today's thinking, energy and enthusiasm — not yesterday's tired ideas.

Anyone can put in years of time. But time doesn't equal progress. Time doesn't equal success.

Let's move forward

It's time Quincy stepped out of yesterday, and moved forward into a bright future.

It's time to elect a new generation of leader to the City Council.

On Tuesday, November 4, let's elect Jimmy Liang City Councillor at Large.

Keegan Recommends City Import Drugs From Canada

Joseph Keegan, a candidate for City Council from Ward 1, says the city of Quincy and its residents would save a lot of money if they followed Atty. Gen. Thomas Riley's advice and import cheaper drugs from Canada.

"This is something the city needs to explore and start saving money as soon as possible," said Keegan, noting that Springfield is importing drugs from Canada and Mayor Michael Albano thinks it will save $9 million each year.

"This is the kind of thinking that we need in Quincy. People talk about fiscally tough times so we need to take a different approach to solving our problems. We need to think outside the box and look around for new solutions and new ideas.

"The FDA is concerned about oversight of the drug production but many believe that agency could use the same technology it uses to combat counterfeit drugs.

"Too often many of our elderly and working poor are left to choose between purchasing necessary drugs and purchasing necessities of life. We need to do everything we can to protect our seniors. If we could allow them to safely purchase drugs from Canada at a great savings we should do that.

"The city of Quincy could stand to see a good deal of money if they were to begin this practice."

Olympic Medal Winner Thanks Buckley For Aid

Karen Cashman-Lehman, winner of a bronze medal in the 2002 Winter Olympics, introduced Brian Buckley, a candidate for the School Committee, to the audience at a recent campaign fundraiser.

She told the audience that Buckley was of great assistance to her in training for the event at Salt Lake City and had become a special person to her.

Cashman-Lehman won the bronze medal when her team finished third in the Olympic Short Track Relay Race.

Buckley asked the audience to join his winning team in the Nov. 4 election and work toward creating the best possible educational system for Quincy's children.

Throughout the campaign, Buckley has reiterated the importance of the entire community coming together for education.

Payment History, Credit History, Outstanding Balances, Number Of Charge Cards Among Factors

Credit Scores Determine Eligibility For Best Loan Deals

By CHRISTOPHER HARADEN

Are you a good credit risk?

Not long ago, most borrowers with a "clean" credit report — no late payments, charge-offs, bankruptcies or other black marks — considered themselves eligible for the best loan programs and lowest interest rates.

But the use of credit scoring by mortgage lenders and other credit grantors has caused consumers to pay close attention to their overall financial profile, not just whether they pay their bills on time.

Credit scores, sometimes called FICO scores since the scoring formula was developed by Fair, Isaac & Co., consider four factors other than payment history in rating a borrower's level of risk.

FICO scores also take into account the person's length of credit history, current outstanding balances in relation to credit limits, mix of credit types, and the number of new charge cards or loans.

All three major credit bureaus use the FICO scoring model and provide these scores to lenders to help evaluate applications for consumer loans, credit cards, home mortgages and other lines of credit.

According to Fair, Isaac & Co., lenders use FICO scores because they "provide the best guide to future risk based solely on credit report data. The higher the score, the lower the risk. But no score says whether a specific individual will be a 'good' or 'bad' customer."

Previously, credit scores were kept secret from borrowers, although Fair, Isaac now sells scores to the public for $12.95 through its Internet site, www.myfico.com. The site also contains detailed explanations of the factors that determine credit scores, tips on how to raise your score, and examples of how credit scores affect interest rates offered to borrowers.

According to rate comparisons on myfico.com, borrowers with credit scores between 500 and 559 would likely be offered a loan with an annual percentage rate of 9.2 percent, while those with scores between 675 and 699 would get an APR of 6.4 percent.

In the above example, borrowers with the highest scores — between 720 and the maximum of 850 — would get the lowest rate, 5.8 percent, for a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage. The exact mathematical formula that weighs each element of the credit score is not revealed, but Fair, Isaac has released guidance on how much weight each factor is given.

Payment history: 35 percent of the score Late payments won't irreparably harm your credit score, especially if other parts of your financial picture are exceptionally good. Likewise, a perfect payment record won't always translate into a perfect credit score. Myfico.com estimates that between 60 and 65 percent of all credit reports in the United States show no late payments, but not every one of these borrowers ends up with a high FICO score.

Amounts owed: 30 percent - In determining risk, the FICO formula looks at how much money you owe and how many accounts have balances, as this is considered an indicator of whether you are overextended or likely to miss a scheduled payment.

Length of credit history: 15 percent - While it's true that a "seasoned" credit profile will generally produce a higher score, people with relatively short but well-managed credit histories can score well under the FICO formula.

New credit: 10 percent - Opening several new accounts or having credit report inquiries tells lenders that you are actively looking to increase your indebtedness, thereby increasing your risk as a borrower.

While inquiries stay on your credit report for two years, FICO considers only the number of requests for credit within the past 12 months. If several inquiries appear for the same type of credit in a short period of time, the formula will recognize this as interest-rate shopping and will not count this as a negative. The formula also does not count credit-report requests made by you or by lenders who send unsolicited "pre-ap-

Top 10 Factors That Will Lower Your Credit Score

Up to four "score reason codes" are given to lenders to explain why your FICO score was not higher.

These factors can be helpful in determining if there are errors in your credit report data and can guide you on how to improve your score.

- Serious delinquency in payment history
- Serious delinquency, and public record or collection filed
- Other Derogatory Public Record Filed
- Time since delinquency is too recent or is unknown
- Level of delinquency on accounts
- Number of accounts with delinquency

- Amount owned on accounts

- Proportion of balances to credit limits is too high
- Length of time accounts have been established

- Too many accounts with balances proved" credit offers in the mail.

Types, or "mix" of credit: 10 percent - FICO scores include the number and types of accounts you have, such as credit cards, retail charge accounts, installment loans and mortgages. Fair, Isaac does not recommend opening new accounts of various types in order to improve your credit score, as this factor is only a small part of the overall picture.

Although lenders are given FICO scores that use the same calculation model, banks or credit-card companies differ on how they use the scores in decision-making on loan applications. The credit score formula uses only the information reported by the credit bureaus, so it's important that your consumer credit file be free of errors. Massachusetts residents are entitled to one free credit report per year, so it's a good idea to check all three major credit bureaus — Experian, Trans Union and Equifax — to be sure the information is correct. Also, credit scores will rise and fall as your credit profile changes, so a low score today doesn't mean that a new home is out of reach.

By keeping payments current and following Fair, Isaac & Co.'s guidelines, it is possible to improve your FICO score. Resources on the Web: FICO Scores: www.myfico.com Experian: www.experian.com/consumer/index.html Equifax: www.equifax.com Trans Union: www.transunion.com

Better Indoor Living: Give Your Home A Comfort Makeover

CARA Even with today's hectic pace, Americans still spend more than 50 percent of each day in their homes.

In a recent Honeywell survey, consumers ranked their top three homeowner pet peeves that impact home comfort and livability — particles in the air (especially dust, pet hair and allergens), uneven temperatures and high utility bills.

Taking those concerns into consideration, here are some home comfort makeover solutions that can help you improve your home's livability.

Improving Indoor Air Quality

Remember the last time you saw sunbeams through a window? The visible particles that dance in a sunbeam represent only one percent of all the particles actually present in home indoor air. That means 99 percent of airborne particles — everything from pollens, pet dander and mold spores to bacteria — are too small to be seen with an unaided eye.

A standard 1-inch furnace filter, the most common form of home air filtration, removes less than three percent of these particles.

What can you do to help improve indoor air quality?

Consider a whole-house solution — installed in your home's central heating and air conditioning system — to zap, trap, moisturize and ventilate.

Zap. Mold and bacteria often blow through the air when a heating and cooling system's fan runs. For many years, hospitals, pharmacies and commercial kitchens have used ultraviolet (UV) light to "zap" or kill airborne particles like mold and bacteria. Now homeowners can benefit from UV technology, too. Mounted in the return-air duct of a home's heating and cooling system, a UV system emits energy that can kill a high percentage of airborne pollutants passing by the light. UV systems can also prevent mold growth on moist air conditioning coils.

Trap. A standard 1-inch furnace filter removes some of the larger contaminants that would otherwise enter your furnace and circulate throughout your home. And it removes a very small percentage of dust, pollens, pet dander, plant spores, fungi, bacteria, tobacco smoke and other small particles that can cause harm. A top-performing whole-house electronic air cleaner, installed into new or existing forced-air heating/cooling systems, can trap more than 90 percent of fungi and ragweed pollen, and more than 70 percent of certain bacteria that passes through it.

winter in cold climates, the relative humidity inside an average home is 15 percent. People generally are most comfortable when the relative humidity is approximately 40 percent. Indoor air that's too dry can take a toll on your family, and your home suffers, too.

A whole-house humidifier combats uncomfortable conditions that can contribute to dry skin, out-of-tune pianos and damage to hardwood floors by automatically regulating the humidity levels in your home. As an added benefit, homeowners can reduce heating bills because people feel more comfortable at a lower temperature setting if humidity is at a proper level.

Ventilate. According to the Heating, Refrigeration and Air Conditioning Institute, your home should have new, fresh air every three hours. In drafty older homes, built before the emphasis on energy conservation, fresh air exchange occurs naturally as stale air seeps out and fresh outside air is drawn in. But in a home that is tightly weatherized, it can take as long as 10 hours to bring in new air.

Choose a ventilation or air exchanger that fits the climate where you live. Whole-house air exchangers for cool climates help reduce excess moisture problems — like condensation on windows — that contribute to mold growth. It's the same principle as using your bathroom exhaust fan to remove moisture created by running the shower. Systems for warm climates help guard against too much humidity entering the home from outside.

Too Warm or Too Cold?

Humans are extremely sensitive to temperature fluctuations. We're able to detect a temperature change of just two degrees. One of the most frequent homeowner complaints today is uneven temperature from one room to the next.

Temperature zoning — or managing temperature control room-by-room — is one way to fix that problem. Just as we don't use a single light switch to control lighting throughout the house, it's inefficient to use a single thermostat to control an entire home. In a zoned home, you install multiple thermostats and customize the climate in each room or area. Whether you want to keep the bedrooms cooler at night, adjust your living room temperature to account for large windows, or help control the temperature difference between floors, how you customize your home's temperature is up to you.

Programmable

Thermostats Save Money

This winter, experts are forecasting sharply higher home heating bills because of natural gas shortages. In the Midwest, for example, the U.S. Department of Energy estimates the average residential winter heating bill could increase 19 percent, sending the average heating bill to $915 for November through March.

A recent Honeywell study found 91 percent of homeowners turn off lights to save energy. That's a good idea, but managing temperature settings is a far more effective way to save money.

FALL CAR CARE

See, Be Seen Key To A Safe Halloween, Says AAA

Motorists coming home from work or from running errands. Ghosts, witches and goblins running through the neighborhood. The combination of the two makes for a more dangerous situation than on a regular fall evening, says AAA Southern New England.

Safety Tips For Children, Parents, Motorists

"See and be seen is the key to a safe Halloween," said John Paul, AAA Manager of Traffic Safety. "Motorists and children need to be reminded to keep eye contact with each other. Knowing each other's next step can prevent a tragedy from happening."

An analysis of data from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration also shows that among pedestrians aged 5-14, an estimated 4,000 injuries occur on Halloween between the hours of 4 to 10 p.m. This compares with an estimated 1,000 injuries during these hours on every day of the year.

"On Halloween evening, we're placing our children in probably some of the most dangerous traffic situations you could imagine," Paul said. "Our children are outside after dark, they walk on and cross unfamiliar streets and they often wear dark colors difficult for motorists to see."

Because of these safety concerns, many parents are finding alternative methods to celebrate such as local mall events and Halloween parties. For those parents and children who continue with a traditional Halloween, AAA recommends a few simple tips for a safe Halloween:

Children

- Avoid wearing masks; they block your vision. Create a look that's just as dramatic using face paint.

- Wear light-colored costumes, but no matter what the costume is, be sure to illuminate costumes and trick-or-treat buckets with reflective tape and glow-in-the-dark accessories.

- Be sure every trick-or-treater or chaperone carries a flashlight. For younger kids, make it hands-free by facing the light face down in the treat bucket. Remember not to shine flashlights in the eyes of oncoming drivers.

- Walk facing traffic and cross only at the corners — never mid-block or between parked cars.

Parents

- Plan the trick-or-treating route in advance, and include only neighborhoods you know.

- Be sure children under the age of 12 are accompanied by an adult.

- Have children over 12 travel in small groups and follow a strict curfew.

- Wear reflective tape and glow-in-the-dark accessories, too.

Motorists

- Slow down; try driving 5 mph slower than the posted speed limit to give you extra time to react to children who dart out in front of you.

- Be extra alert to children crossing the street between parked cars or in the middle of the block.

- Broaden your scan — look left and right into yards and front porches.

- Turn your headlights on even in daylight — lights make you more visible.

- Arrive home a little earlier on Halloween if you can. Make sure you have all your treats ready, so you can avoid that last-minute rush to the store.

"Keeping kids safe is a huge safety challenge on Halloween," Paul said. "Keep in mind that trick-or-treaters are focused on candy and fun, rather than traffic safety. Remember that you're going to see pedestrians where you usually don't, and if you don't put safety first, you have thousands of accidents just waiting to happen."

Josh Giordani Throws For Three Touchdowns 'Little General' Leads Presidents Past Nauset

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School football team and its "Little General" came up big in the first leg of a three-week trip to the Cape.

Senior quarterback Josh Giordani seems to be following the footsteps of recent standout signal-callers at Quincy High, completing 10 of 14 passes for 106 yards and three touchdowns—the second straight week he's reached the trifecta—to lead the Presidents to a 21-18 victory over Nauset last Saturday afternoon.

"We call him the Little General," said head coach Bob Noble of his 5-foot-7 quarterback. "Not bad for a midjet. Not bad for a first-year varsity quarterback."

"It's tough going down there," he added. "It's a long ride and a long day. The kids responded accordingly and came out with a big win that keeps us in the hunt for the league title."

Quincy (3-1-1) heads to Sandwich Saturday afternoon at 2:30 and travels to Dennis-Yarmouth Nov. 7 before returning home Nov. 14 to host Plymouth North. Quincy trails Whitman-Hanson and Plymouth North by one game.

Lacrosse Registration Saturday

Spring registration for Quincy Youth Lacrosse will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon at Quincy Youth Arena.

Registration is for 12-and-under and 14-and-under divisions for both boys and girls. Fee is $120. First payment of $60 due at sign-up

"Our goal is to get to Nov. 14 against Plymouth North with a 5-1-1 record, which means we have to win our next two games. And then we'll see what happens at that point."

The Warriors jumped out to a 7-0 lead when they marched 75 yards on the opening drive, capped by the quarterback's 1-yard plunge.

The Presidents tied the game on the ensuing series when Giordani connected with senior tight end Justin Thorley for a 5-yard TD pass on a screen. Senior Steve Costigliola kicked the first of his three extra points.

Late in the half, Quincy was forced to punt deep in its own territory, but it misfired on the snap and Nauset recovered the ball at the Quincy 14-yard line—a similar situation that haunted the Presidents in their 21-14 loss to Whitman-Hanson Oct. 10.

Quincy's defense, though, North Falls To Plymouth South

The North Quincy High School football team suffered a 46-0 loss at Plymouth South last Friday night.

held the Warriors to a 27-yard field goal as the Presidents trailed 10-7 at halftime.

Quincy came out on fire in the second half, scoring on its first two drives. Giordani fired a 19-yard TD pass to Thorley to take a 14-10 lead and hit senior wideout Ian Jorgensen for a 39-yard TD pass on third-and-11 for a 21-10 advantage.

Nauset engineered a 60-yard scoring drive late in the game. The quarterback ran another into the end zone with 1:03 left and completed a two-point conversion pass to make it 21-18.

Costigliola recovered Nauset's onside kick and senior tailback Roger Palermo (50 yards, nine carries) picked up a first down with a 9-yard run to cement the win.

Quincy totaled 300 yards in offense, with senior quarterback and tailback J.J. Niamke picking up 144 on 18 carries.

KEEPING UP THE SUSPENSE

Your vehicle's springs hold up its weight and help resist pitch to the front and rear while working with the same sway bars to resist lean to the side. At the same time, the shock absorbers do just what their names say—absorb shock—tempering the up-and-down movement of the vehicle under acceleration, braking and cornering. They also help stabilize the vehicle when it goes over bumps in the road. Shock absorbers slow and reduce these movements to help control the weight of the vehicle during transitions and allow the tires to perform better under the driver's input. When shock absorbers wear, their resistance to movement weakens. As a result, handling suffers and tires and suspension components wear abnormally.

When you bring your car into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for service, don't hesitate to ask any questions about anything related to your car's suspension system or other systems. We have modern test equipment, the right parts, and the best ASE Certified service technicians available in the area. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 8am-5pm.

HINT: Because shock absorbers wear gradually over tens of thousands of miles, drivers often do not notice the deterioration in ride.

First Season Sweep For Presidents Since 1990

Quincy Defeats North In Tourney Tune-Up

By CHRIS POISSON
Having already clinched a tournament berth and captured at least a share of the league championship, the Quincy High School girls' volleyball team had one more thing left on its to do list.

Knock off rival North Quincy Monday night at home in the regular season finale to complete a season sweep of its neighbors.

And the Presidents (17-3) delivered with a 2-1 victory, winning by scores 30-23, 28-30, 30-18, to roar into the postseason scheduled to begin Friday or Saturday. In the first showdown Sept. 15, they defeated the Red Raiders, 2-0, for the first time in 13 years.

GIRLS' VOLLEYBALL

That 1990 squad, which featured current head coach Christine Barrett when she was a senior, was also the last Quincy team to sweep North Quincy, and it also made it all the way to the state finals.

"We knew going into the season we had a talented group of kids," Barrett said.

"They've done a great job playing together and they get along well. They put the team first, not themselves. They work hard. They communicate on the floor well. They knew what they had to do and they did it. They've been very successful."

Junior middle hitters Nicole O'Sullivan and Nicole Cahill powered the offense with 16 and 14 kills, respectively. O'Sullivan also had five digs and two service aces and Cahill tallied 11 digs.

Senior outside hitter Bonnie Hirtle had a strong defensive game with 13 digs and also had nine kills. Junior setters Andrea Pettinelli and Rebekah Sorensen (five digs) registered 21 and 15 assists, respectively.

North Quincy (13-6), which has won three of the past four state championships, also qualified for the tournament in what was considered a rebuilding year. It closed out its regular season Tuesday at Bourne.

"They swept us in the first meeting so to take a game from them is a step in the right direction," said NQ head coach James Rendle. "It was good volleyball between two competitive teams. We played a little better than we have been and we're starting to improve."

"Both teams should fair well in the tournament. They're clearly the better team right now. We're going to keep working. Hopefully we'll get to play them one more time, in the tourney."

For North Quincy, senior Elyse Dolbec and junior Alicia Huang played well defensively, while senior outside hitter May Ho turned in a strong two-way game.

"We played well defensively," Rendle said. "They're a strong offensive team across the board with Cahill and O'Sullivan. There were two or three volleys where the fans were on their feet because of the defense on both sides. We have to work on our offense a bit. We have to put the ball down more consistently."

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

FORGET FAULTS

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your brother's faults. Forget the slander you have heard, forget the temptations, forget the fault-finding, and give more thought to the cause that provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points that make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels you may have heard by accident, and which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they really are. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday; start with a clean sheet for today, and write upon it, for sweet memory's sake, only the things which are lovely and lovable.

There is an old Chinese proverb which states: "Think of your own faults the first part of the night when you are awake, and the faults of others the latter part of the night when you are asleep."

Something to think about? We think so! . . .

How To Reduce Stress In Home, Work Environments

(ARA) Though stress is a part of life, there are unique, enjoyable ways to reduce stress at home and at work.

Stress occurs when the body reacts to change, triggered by events happening directly to you or around you. Although your bodily response can be a positive one keeping you alert, too much stress can be harmful to your health.

Most of our stress is a result of everyday responsibilities and obligations. As we go about our lives, pressures—both physical and mental—are constantly putting a strain on our bodies. Although this stress is not always obvious to us, the daily tension can cause minor illnesses such as insomnia, backaches, skin disorders or headaches, and can also contribute to potentially life threatening diseases like high blood pressure, heart disease and a variety of other serious illnesses.

"Everybody, these days, is prone to stress -- we need to find ways to reduce stress in our daily lives," says Luke Sutton, president of Serenity Health, a provider of high quality relaxation and stress relief products for the home and office. "There are a number of simple things that people can do to greatly reduce stress in their daily lives."

Although stress can't always be avoided, we can certainly learn to manage it and lessen the harmful effects on our bodies.

The National Mental Health Association and Serenity Health offer the following ideas for reducing stress in your life:

- Regular exercise is a great way to reduce stress. Just 20 to 30 minutes of activity a day will help your body to relieve itself of pent-up stress.
- Take short, periodic breaks from your day to just sit quietly and calm your mind. Even a bit of meditation or gentle focus can help to quiet your mind and calm your body. This can enormously help in relieving stress.

• Create an environment at home and at work that is as stress-free as possible. For instance, have you ever noticed how calm and relaxed you feel when you are sitting in nature, next to a babbling brook, a river, or some beautiful waterfall?

Well, it is very easy to bring those natural, calming water sounds into your home or office, with a beautiful, affordable water fountain. This enables you to create a wonderful sense of calm and serenity in any living environment.

Water fountains come in range of sizes and styles, some of which are small enough to fit on even a modest desk top at work. The floor-standing and wall-mounted models create a magnificent presence with their illuminated cascading waterfalls.

Esthetically, they are stunning, and they create beautiful waterfall sounds that are mesmerizing and delightful. "All of these water fountains are beautiful to look at, and are very relaxing at the same time," says Sutton. "More and more, we are finding that people are choosing these wall fountains as pieces of natural moving wall art, over more traditional art pieces such as paintings and prints."

• Eliminate stress from the moment you wake up in the morning.

"Something as insignificant as your alarm clock may be contributing to your daily stress," says Sutton. "Most people use an alarm clock with a harsh beeping sound that suddenly jars them from sleep.

That shocking process can actually send stress throughout your entire body, which sets the tone of your whole day." Instead of a traditional alarm clock, there are a variety of very effective natural awakening alarm clocks that wake you up in a gradual, stress-free way every morning. There are sunrise alarm clocks that awaken you with a simulated glowing sunrise. This is particularly effective for people who suffer from Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD), but thousands of people who do not suffer from SAD also use this type of clock and love it.

There are also clocks that awaken you with a choice of several different nature sounds (such as ocean surf, forest rainfall, birds etc.) or your relaxing musical choice from any CD. Such clocks are also excellent for lulling you to sleep at night.

And then, there are clocks that awaken you with a beautiful zen-like chime cycle that increases over a 15 minute period.

Also, many of these natural awakening alarm clocks include a built-in radio, if you wish to awaken to any radio station.

• Share your feelings. Whether you have had a bad day at the office or a sick child to take care of, talking with a friend can help you remember you aren't alone. Don't forget to stay in touch with friends and family; they can provide valuable support and guidance.

So, remember to treat yourself to much needed moments of peace and relaxation every day, for your health and well-being. You deserve it, don't you? For more information about Serenity relaxation and stress relief products, visit www.SerenityHealth.com.

South Shore Mental Health Receives Grant

The Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts (BCBSMA) Foundation, in partnership with an anonymous private funder, recently made $1.5 million in grant awards to help shape the landscape of community-based mental health care for low-income and uninsured children across the state.

These grants represent fulfillment of a three-year pledge to support 15 community-based partnerships to address fragmentation in service delivery.

South Shore Mental Health in Quincy is leading one of the partnerships, which includes Quincy Community Action Program Head Start, South Shore Day Care, Manet Community Health Center and Quincy Public Schools.

The program will improve coordination of behavioral health services for low-income families with multiple risk factors with children ages 2-6.

The initiative includes three components: 1) training in behavioral health screening and appropriate referral; 2) interagency multidisciplinary service planning for identified families; and 3) analysis of interagency systems based on the experiences of families in the program. There is a special focus on outreach to Quincy's Asian community.

The BCBSMA Foundation announced the original "Building Bridges in Children's Mental Health" grant program a year ago. Grantees were awarded $25,000 in the first year to develop plans to integrate the delivery of mental health services in their communities.

Having just concluded the planning year, grantees submitted proposals describing their strategies for program implementation and evaluation. All 15 collaborations were awarded $50,000 each year for the next two years to launch the next phase of their programs.

"The planning year was a constructive approach to strengthening collaborations among community partners that are not always used to working together to address children's mental health needs," said BCBSMA Foundation President Andrew Dreyfus.

"We were very impressed with the program models that developed as a result of this planning time, and are more confident than ever that the collaboratives will implement effective, community-based solutions."

The foundation's goal is to support collaborative demonstration programs throughout Massachusetts to improve mental health services for children where they live and go to school.

The grants will help reduce fragmentation of services for children; improve support for their families; and train non-traditional mental health providers in early identification, assessment, and referral of children with emotional problems.

All collaboratives include representation from at least three sectors:

- Education: public schools, Head Start programs or childcare centers;
- Mental health: community mental health clinics or social service organizations; and
- Primary care: pediatric practices or other community health care providers.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustlin, D.M.D.

SHELLS OF THEIR FORMER SELVES

When teeth are discolored, chipped, worn, or misaligned, patients have the option of having porcelain veneers bonded to the front sides of their affected teeth to make a cosmetic improvement in their appearance. The process of applying a porcelain veneer involves removing a thin layer of enamel from the front of the tooth and securely bonding a thin porcelain shell in its place. Not only is porcelain an inherently strong material, but because it is translucent, it mimics the light-handling characteristics of enamel. Light striking a porcelain veneer will penetrate its thickness and then be reflected back from the tooth structure underlying the veneer. This translucent effect provides a sense of depth that is quite natural looking.

Making your smile one that dazzles in both professional and personal realms is our focus. Rely on us to answer all your questions about dental treatments and procedures. We appreciate the opportunity to provide you with quality dental care. Our staff is made up of well-trained professionals who work together as a team to provide you with the highest quality treatment in a warm, caring setting. We're located at 44 Greenleaf St. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. P.S. A porcelain veneer is impervious to stains.

Please Vote To Re-Elect Mayor Bill Phelan –Tuesday, Nov. 4th

He's moving Quincy forward!

In the city's worst fiscal crisis in decades, Mayor Bill Phelan has kept his promise to be a fighter for us, for a change.

Bill has brought real reform, fiscal stability, and accountability to City Hall.

Despite inheriting a huge deficit, he balanced the budget, strengthened public safety, and protected our kids' schools...all without a Prop. 2-1/2 tax override.

And while other cities closed schools, Mayor Phelan has maintained small classes and even increased this year's school budget!

Fresh ideas & a new openness.

Mayor Phelan sets aside one afternoon each week just to listen to citizens' questions, complaints and ideas, and he's made government more responsive.

And Bill's new ideas have saved taxpayers money:

By renegotiating the Quarry Hills Golf Course deal, the Mayor secured millions to repair streets and sidewalks;

Bill's using the hotel room tax to fund his plan to preserve more open space and improve parks and playing fields.

Mayor Phelan is getting the job done.

Help Bill move Quincy forward!

clear choice:

Bill Phelan is moving Quincy forward!

This year Quincy's voters will decide whether to continue moving Quincy forward, or turn back the clocks.

Faced with the worst budget crisis to hit in decades – plus a multi-million dollar budget deficit he inherited — our new Mayor Bill Phelan has brought reform, fiscal stability, and accountability to City Hall.

In fact, Quincy's finances were in such disarray when Bill took office that the State Department of Revenue refused to approve our city's tax rate!

But Bill's independence and fresh ideas enabled him to avert the school closings, huge layoffs, and Proposition 2-1/2 tax overrides other communities have faced this year.

In fact, Bill was able to increase our school budget, and protect the small classes so essential to real learning.

Please Vote To Re-Elect Mayor Bill

Protecting Quincy taxpayers.

Our new Mayor has shown he has the independence to make the tough decisions.

Other Massachusetts cities and towns are closing schools and fire stations — and firing hundreds of teachers, police and firefighters.

And over 100 communities have sought Proposition 2-1/2 overrides to increase taxes.

But here in Quincy, Bill Phelan has kept his pledge to maintain public safety and protect our schools.

And in his first term as Mayor, Bill has turned things around, balanced the budget deficit, and put Quincy's financial house in order...without a Proposition 2-1/2 tax increase!

Moving our schools forward.

Bill Phelan first ran for public office to become a member of Quincy's School Committee. The son of a Hough's Neck clam digger, Bill worked his way through college and law school, and understands the value of a good education.

When he ran for Mayor two years ago, it was to stand up for our kids and ensure they had safe schools with excellent teachers and small classrooms.

Despite inheriting an enormous deficit, declining local aid and the worst fiscal crisis in decades, Bill Phelan has kept his promise to our kids.

This year the Mayor's budget included a 4% INCREASE in education funding, enough to ensure that classes will remain small, and kids will get the individual attention they need to learn.

And for the first time in 32 years, our new Mayor successfully negotiated a contract with teachers before school opened.

Bringing the change Quincy needs.

Bill Phelan ran for office with a promise to shake things up with innovative thinking and new approaches to problems.

Some insiders at City Hall don't like the changes and reform that Mayor Phelan has brought.

But that hasn't stopped him!

Because Bill Phelan isn't afraid to step on a few toes, he renegotiated the City's contract with the developers of the Quarry Hills project and got city property taxpayers a better deal.

Thanks to Bill's independence, the new contract will increase the City's overall payments once the golf course opens. The new deal will also provide a new revenue stream dedicated to repairing the City's streets and sidewalks.

That's the kind of independence and new thinking Quincy needs.

Phelan – Tuesday, November 4th

An Open Letter from Mayor Phelan

Dear Friends:

I need your help to continue to move our city forward.

As you know, when I took over as Mayor I inherited a multimillion dollar deficit plus the worst fiscal situation in decades.

Across Massachusetts, cities and towns have been forced to close schools and firehouses, and hundreds of teachers, firefighters, and police have been laid off.

But here in Quincy we made the tough decisions and instituted some money saving ideas that have enabled us to hold the line on public safety, and increase our school budget.

And while over 100 other cities and towns have sought Proposition 2-1/2 tax increases, we haven't had to do that here.

And I'm most proud of the fact that we were able to keep our classes small in Quincy's schools, and give our kids the individual attention they need to excel.

But that fight is not over yet.

There are always those who would fight change, and turn back the clock on the reforms we have made at City Hall.

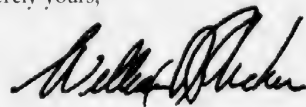

So I ask for your support in the fight to move Quincy forward.

Your support — and your vote on Election Day — will help to ensure that we hold on to the gains we have made to improve the quality of life for everyone in our city.

I also want you to know how grateful I am for the honor of serving as Mayor of our historic City of Presidents.

Thanks so much.

Sincerely yours,

Signs Council Resolution

Phelan Undecided About Early Retirement Incentive

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Mayor William Phelan is mulling his options about whether to offer another early retirement incentive for municipal employees.

Phelan signed a city council resolution giving him the authority to implement the state-backed early retirement program for a second straight year, according to Thomas Largey, the mayor's executive secretary. Although the mayor has the authority to offer a plan, he is undecided, Largey said.

"He (Phelan) is doing his homework," said Largey. "He is conducting an in-depth analysis of the impact of the early retirement incentive, both to the fiscal impact it would have as well as to those individuals who might avail themselves of it."

Largey said the mayor has until Dec. 1 to make a decision.

Under the state-approved plan, the mayor has broad discretion on how to tailor the incentive to workers. Group 1, 2 and 4 employees would be eligible, but the mayor can limit the number of retirees by group or exclude a group in its entirety.

According to Auditor Richard Fitzpatrick, the city saved approximately $1.3 million by offering an early retirement incentive in 2002. About 100 city employees took advantage of that plan.

City officials said interest in this year's plan is muted. An informal survey conducted recently indicated that approximately 35-40 employees would take an early retirement if it were offered this year. Approximately 350 employees would be eligible to take an early retirement incentive, city officials estimated.

Two weeks ago, the city council approved a resolution allowing the mayor to offer another early retirement plan. Councillor Frank McCauley and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro dissented, saying another round of early retirements is unnecessary.

But most councillors said the mayor should have the option to offer a plan as a means of saving money during tough financial times.

Mayor William Phelan steamrolled to a second term in Tuesday's city election which also saw the first woman elected to the city council in 10 years, the return of a former councillor and a new school committee member.

Phelan, 43, breezed by underdog challenger Joseph Newton, 36, with 73 percent of the vote to Newton's 27 percent. Phelan's vote was 13,117 and Newton's 4,775.

"This vote indicates that people think the city is moving in the right direction," Phelan said. "I am humbled by the show of support by the citizens of Quincy. I pledge to work just as hard in the coming term. I look forward to working with all the other elected officials to make sure Quincy's future remains bright."

In the closest race, Alicia A. Gardner, 50, of Deerfield St., Squantum, edged Brian McNamee, 46, by 26 votes to win the open Ward 6 seat and become the fourth woman in Quincy's 114-year history as a city to be elected to the council.

There were indications McNamee might seek a recount.

Gardner, constituent service aide to Senator Michael Morrissey and making her political debut, polled 1,740 votes to McNamee's 1,714.

"I think women can bring a different perspective to the city council and I am anxious to get started," Gardner said. "I want the Ward 6 residents to know they can rely on me. When they contact me, they will get answers - it may not be the answer they want to hear but I will always respond to my constituents."

50 Organizations Seek Help Volunteer Summit Encourages Civic Responsibility

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR
The city wants YOU.

That's the message conveyed by more than 50 service organizations last week as part of the first annual Quincy Pride Volunteer Summit, an effort by the city to encourage greater civic participation.

Initiated by Mayor William Phelan's office and the Office of Constituent Services, the event gave residents an opportunity to network with and offer help to a number of local non-profit and community groups. The coalition of organizations set up shop in the Atrium of the Thomas Crane Public Library last Thursday.

Kristen Priscella, the mayor's director of operations, said the event was an overwhelming success.

"The feedback we received from the participating organizations was positive. Not only were these organizations able to network with each other, they were able to get their information into the hands of new volunteers," she said.

Interested parties were greeted by representatives from each community group. Handout materials were also readily available.

Kao T. Li, representing Quincy Asian Resources Inc., said he was encouraged by the number of Asian students who attended the event.

"This is a great opportunity for the Asian population to volunteer their services to help the community," said Li.

Robert Loughran, representing the American Legion Post 95, said the event was a great opportunity to educate people.

"A lot of people don't know what we do," said Loughran. "This was a good opportunity to give people a better understanding of our mission." He said the American Legion is always looking for help with blood drives, fundraisers, dances, and Veterans' Day activities.

Gaetano DiGrazia, repre-

sending the Quincy Human Rights Commission, said the event was about "people helping people."

"That's what makes Quincy so great," he said. "You help whenever you can."

DiGrazia said the organization is looking for volunteers to help with program planning and fundraising events.

In addition, the city has put together a booklet that lists every organization involved in the summit. The booklet contains mission statements, contact information and opportunities for volunteer work.

The booklets are available from the Office of Constituent Services.

For more information, or to volunteer your services contact the Office of Constituent Services at 617-376-1500.

RENEE RICCIARDI, 14, a freshman at North Quincy High School and a member of the Thomas Jefferson Forum, speaks with Major Doug Jones of the Quincy Salvation Army about performing community service at the recent Quincy Pride Volunteer Summit. Seated at the table is Jennifer Manning of the Germantown Neighborhood Association.

MORE THAN 50 service organizations participated in the first annual Quincy Pride Volunteer Summit held recently in the atrium of the Thomas Crane Public Library. The event gave residents an opportunity network with and offer help to a number of local non-profit and community groups.

Those Little Pet Peeves

Every once in awhile I get in a grouchy mood. Well, maybe more than just once in awhile.

Most of the time, though, I get off to a jolly-good-fellow start in the morning. Then, sometimes, suddenly it can happen. Some little thing gets in the way that annoys me. I can't help it.

Like, for example, coming down Independence Ave. and running a little late on the way to the office and a car pops out in front of you from a side street and then goes into a slow crawl all the way to Quincy Sq. And, no room to pass.

Nothing really earthshaking. Just one of my little pet peeves, a few of which I have aired here from time to time. You must have a few of your own.

Maybe some of mine are some of yours.

Not necessarily in order of importance but you know, things like:

□ The hot-rodder who speeds through the Hancock parking lot as if it were the Southeast Expressway.

□ People who start sentences, "Me and him" or "Hey, man!"

□ The horn tooter behind you who lets you know the second the red light turns green.

□ The cowboy who roars through a neighborhood ignoring parked cars and the safety of youngsters who might dart out from them. You really wouldn't feel too badly to see this guy again a block or two away wrapped around a steel utility pole.

□ Those sitcoms with the canned laughter and the fascination with the word "boobs."

□ Madonna and Britney Spears. What a couple of role models.

□ The driver who leaves his (her) car partly in the adjoining parking space taking up two spaces while you keep circling the lot trying to find a space.

□ And the other who leaves a shopping cart in the middle of a parking space. Or, up against your car.

□ The place that charges eight bucks a drink and the bartender doesn't know how to make a dry martini with a twist.

□ The dog lover who loves to let Rover roam free, knocking over trash barrels, leaving souvenirs on the front lawn or barking at the moon at 2 a.m.

□ The pollster who wants to know who you're going to vote for.

phone finally rings. And the guy says he's conducting a survey and could you tell him whether you prefer red or white wine. Or like oatmeal better than cornflakes.

□ Overpaid baseball players like Manny Ramirez. If he's worth $160 million, Babe Ruth, Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio should have gotten a $billion.

□ Basketball players who are 7 foot 10 — and considered "natural athletes." Oh, for the days of Bob Cousy.

□ The politician who thinks he knows it all, whatever the issue.

□ The radio talk show callers who don't have to identify themselves and then character assassinate someone.

□ The sports talk show caller who thinks the Red Sox loss to the Yankees in the playoffs was the most momentous event in world history. By now we all must know the Red Sox will always find some way to blow the "big one." They've blown them since 1918.

□ The writer who sends an angry letter-to-the-editor claiming wrong-doing at City Hall and ending with a challenging "I bet you don't have the guts to print this letter." But doesn't have the guts to sign the letter.

□ The rumor-monger spreading a juicy once about some well-known figure having an alleged affair. Lots of talk, no proof.

□ The guy that likes to surprise you by waiting until he starts turning before giving a directional signal.

□ Motorcycle cowboys who just can't get enough noise out of their bikes. If your car made as much noise, you'd be ticketed for faulty equipment.

□ People who abuse or show no respect for Old Glory.

□ Kids on skateboards risking their young necks doing pretzel loop-the-loops or maneuvering alongside traffic on Hancock St.

□ Drivers who sail through "Walk" pedestrian lights.

□ The guy who steals a parking space reserved for the handicapped.

□ Those are some of my pet peeves that stir up in me once in awhile. Can't help it.

You must have a few of your own.

Maybe one of them is someone like me forcing mine on you.

I have a few more. But some other time.

Scenes From Yesterday

City Square and Drinking Fountain, Quincy Mass

THIS IS A 1908 postcard looking north on Hancock Street from the front of the First Parish Church in Quincy Square. The three-story H.G. Shaw furniture store on the right later became home to the Bargain Center and today is the site of Presidents' Place. The building with the pitched roof and awnings on the left was on the site of South Coastal Bank branch in today's Munroe Building. In the right center was a drinking fountain for horses that was donated to the city in 1891 by a group of citizens known as the Quincy Village Improvement Society. Their objective was to make Quincy more beautiful and attractive. The McKenzie and Patterson Company made the Quincy-granite fountain for $5,900. After more than 25 years the fountain was discontinued during the great influenza epidemic when it was determined that horses were dying from passing the disease to one another here. It was also in the way of an increasing number of automobiles passing through the square. In 1917 it was moved to the entrance of Mount Wollaston Cemetery where it remains today

Hannon Succeeds McIntyre As Mayor

Walter Hannon was elected mayor this week defeating Rep. Joseph Brett with an impressive 2,500-vote margin.

Hannon succeeds James McIntyre who served three terms as mayor and was not a candidate for re-election after being appointed counsel to the Massachusetts Senate.

The city elections also saw the return of former councillor Joseph LaRaia after a six-year absence. LaRaia was elected as councillor at-large along with Arthur Tobin and John Quinn.

Newcomers on the School Committee were Atty's, Harold Davis and Daniel Raymondi and banker Francis McCauley. Unsuccessful candidates for the School Committee were Christopher Kennedy, Leo Hannon and Dean Paul Nicastro.

In Ward 1 incumbent Edward Graham defeated Leo Kelly. Theophilus McLelland won the Ward 3 seat being vacated by John Koegler, edging out Peter Gacicia. William Delahunt captured the Ward 5 seat over Warren Powers. That seat was vacated by Hannon to run for mayor.

PERCY LANE EULOGIZED

Percy Lane, who served as clerk of the City Council's committees for 30 years, was eulogized by the City Council. The regular meeting was postponed to honor Lane who died recently at age 75.

The memorial program featured remarks by outgoing Councillor George McDonald and Rabbi Jacob Mann.

McDonald, whose father served on the council while Lane was clerk, said, "He was a dedicated, conscientious and loyal public servant who never missed a meeting."

Following the program the council voted to have a memorial plaque installed in the chamber in Lane's honor. The resolution for the plaque was written by City Clerk John Gillis, a long-time friend of Lane.

READERS FORUM

Thanks For Such Fond Memories

Reading Henry's Sunbeams on the "Pope's Mass: A Night To Remember," reminded me that I meant to write a letter when he wrote the Sunbeams "He's Not Running . . . And Why." So now I'll write on both.

I'm glad Henry is not running for President or probably any other political office because then he'd be too busy to write "Sunbeams." Also who knows what might be discovered besides the Lincoln Theatre sneak entry when he would be checked out as a political nominee!

I thoroughly enjoy reading old stories which Henry remembers so vividly that it makes you feel you were back there yourself. The one on the Pope's Mass in Boston back in 1979 was especially moving because now the Pope has such difficulty speaking as well as moving due to his physical ailment.

It is great to recall what a thrilling experience it was to be able to see and hear the Pope close at hand. Also it was interesting to recall those present — well-known political figures, Quincy people and many members of the clergy from our local churches.

Best of all, as Henry points out, to be in the midst of 400,000 people of all ages and religions joined together. As Henry eloquently wrote, "a night to long cherish — a wonderful feeling of togetherness rare today."

Whenever Henry writes about the old Lincoln Theatre, I love it because, growing up on Avalon Avenue in the Point, I went to the Lincoln every Saturday, too, after earning dimes doing household chores. I was never as lucky to win anything at the drawings as Henry was.

My mother always went

Tuesday nights to collect the dishes. I still have that whole set of dishes and use them for special parties.

Mama also went on some money nights. She had the luck in the family and won some nights, even $10 once in a while! I always looked forward to Saturday when I could see my hero, Buck Jones. As they say — "those were the good old days."

Thanks so much, Henry, for bringing back such fond memories!

MARY TOMPKINS

With A Sense Of Humor Mary Tompkins To Celebrate 100th Birthday

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

"Anyone can be 100 if they live long enough" is an example of the sense of humor that Mary Santosuosso Tompkins still has. She will celebrate her 100th birthday on Nov. 11, and attributes her longevity to "leading a good life" and never "telling a lie."

At the Eventide Home on Adams Street, where she now resides, there is a large picture of Tiger Woods hanging on her wall among the others which include her nephews Pete, Don and Bill White. Pete is an avid golfer which explains Wood's picture.

She said that after you reach a certain age, you should start "subtracting instead of adding."

The reason for the lie issue was that years ago, she was called by a radio station and was asked if she were listening to the radio. She replied "yes" although she was not listening.

She always remembered that incident, and said she would never tell another lie.

She was born, raised and educated in Milford. After graduating from high school, she was honored as Salutatorian.

She graduated from the Mass School of Pharmacy in 1923 and was one of the earliest woman graduates of that school, and is now the oldest living graduate.

In 1926, she moved to Quincy and lived in the Wollaston area. She was employed at various pharmacies in the area. She was once offered a job at Howard Johnson's, first store on Beale Street, but refused because "all he sold were patent medicines" and she didn't want to be a "window dresser."

She married George Tompkins in Quincy in 1928. When he passed away in 1949, Mrs. Tompkins continued to live in Wollaston until 1998. She didn't enter the Eventide Home on Adams St. until then.

She said although she never had children, she has the best relatives in the world, meaning her three nephews. She added "and lots of friends."

She said her favorite food is pizza and the homemade cookies that her niece Pete's wife Gen bakes and brings to her regularly. Commenting that she is a FBI, and when I asked her what that was she said a "full blooded Italian."

I asked her what time she goes to bed and she says anytime after watching television and then has breakfast at 8 a.m.

When I first walked in to meet her, I was amazed at the lovely looking lady sitting in her room wearing a beautiful black and white printed dress with lovely white pearls and earrings. Her shoes were the latest style, and her hair meticulously coiffured. She looked at least 25 years younger than she is. She walks unaided and often travels down the long corridor to view the small aquarium of fish.

She also attends some of the events offered by the home.

It was my first time visiting the Eventide Home which was like walking into a beautiful large mansion all beautifully decorated resembling something out of a magazine.

Scallops, Haddock Bake

If you like seafood, or love it as I do, here is a nice easy way to bake scallops. When I prepared it I also used a piece of haddock, but any other fish will combine nicely.

The difference in this recipe is that instead of placing the stuffing on top, I breaded each scallop separately with great results.

Mixture should be on the dry side to coat the scallops properly. First slightly grease a casserole or baking dish. Bread the fish, and then add the juice of a half lemon. Coat each scallop with the mixture, and place on top of the fish. Squeeze the lemon juice over the top and any extra mixture.

Baked Scallops and Haddock
1 pound scallops (large is preferred)
1/2 pound haddock (or a favorite)
5 cream lunch crackers juice of two lemons
1/2 teaspoon fresh parsley
2-3 tablespoons seasoned bread crumbs

Bake covered in a 350 degree oven for about 25 minutes. Check to see if it is done and then bake for another five minutes or so.

The results were great and the combo was moist.

Five Honored At Mayor's Boys Scout Breakfast

By SHEILA HALLORAN

Five persons were honored at the annual Mayor's Boy Scout breakfast for significant contributions to the Quincy community and to scouting.

Receiving awards were: Christine Cedrone, Robert Curry, James R. Barbieri, Rev. M. Alicia Corea and, posthumously, Francis H. Boudreau.

Mayor William Phelan hosted the recent breakfast at the Quincy Lodge of Elks. Proceeds from the annual event benefit scouting in Quincy.

Phelan recognized the importance of supporting scouting in the community. "The scouts instill important values in our young people during their most formative years. They build character in boys and young men and help them go on to lead full productive lives," the mayor said.

Perhaps the most important value instilled in young scouts, Phelan said, is "the appreciation of the community in which we belong and the significance of making contributions to that community."

Cedrone, vice-chairwoman of the Quincy School Committee, received the Good Scout Award. In addition to her contributions to the School Committee, Cedrone has been an active member and past president of the Quincy Lion's Club and vice-chairwoman of the Quincy Housing Authority since 1994. She is known for her work helping the blind and visual impaired by raising money for research and free eye exams.

Cedrone will retire from the School Committee this year, after serving for eight years.

Upon accepting the award, Cedrone said the most significant thing she can do is give back to the community.

"There isn't anything more important than looking into a child's eyes and seeing some kind of spirit and dedication to what they want to do," she said.

Curry, owner of Curry Hardware, also received the Good Scout Award. Curry is a member of the Quincy Flag Day Committee, chairman of the Board of Directors of Quincy Medical Center, and founder of the Marie Curry Foundation.

The annual Marie Curry Walk, founded in memory of his late wife, raises money to assist women without insurance receive breast cancer screening and diagnosis. This year's walk raised over $156,000. Curry said that receiving the award was an honor due to the remarkable people who have received that same award in past years.

"It is a privilege giving back to this city," said Curry.

Rev. Corea, retired pastor of Houghs Neck Congregational Church, received the Special Granite Pillar Award, presented for the first time this year. It is a lifetime achievement award presented to individuals for their service to Quincy and scouting.

Rev. Corea, who retired in May, served 54 years at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 52 as co-pastor with her late husband Rev. Dr. Peter Corea and the last two as pastor.

She is a member of the Quincy Council on Aging and a member of the Board of Directors of South Shore Elder Services. She is well known for her work helping young people pursue higher

THE FIRST Granite Pillar Awards were presented to the Rev. Alicia Corea, retired pastor Houghs Neck Congregational Church, and posthumously to the late Francis H. Boudreau for his many years of service to scouting in Quincy. From the left are Charles (Chuck) Phelan, former City Council president and now chief information officer at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds; James Boudreau, Norwell town manager who received the award on behalf of his father; Rev. Corea; Quincy Sun publisher Henry Bosworth and Donald Uvanitte, vice president of Eastern Insurance and committee chairman. The two awards were presented by Phelan and Bosworth.

JAMES BARBIERI (second left), president and CEO of Horizon Bank, received the Whitney M. Young, Jr. Service Award at the Mayor's Boy Scout Breakfast. With him, from the left, are Mayor William Phelan, Anthony Agnitti of Agnitti Insurance Co., who presented the award, and Donald Uvanitte of Eastern Insurance, committee chairman.

LEADING THE PLEDGE of Allegiance at the Mayor's Boy Scout Breakfast were Rahmy Eltouy, Pack 6, Houghs Neck Congregational Church; Quentin Harrington, Jonathan Theberge, Jack Monahan, Den 2 St. John's Church; and Scott Gorman, Pack 6 Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

Henry Bosworth, publisher of The Quincy Sun, presented Rev. Corea with the Special Granite Pillar Award. Bosworth referred to her as a "true pillar in the community and as sturdy as Quincy Granite." And he added, "Alicia, you are a community treasure and a community sweetheart."

Mr. Boudreau, who died in June, was also honored with the Special Granite Pillar Award. Boudreau served as assistant scoutmaster of Quincy Troop 19 for almost 30 years. He also served on the Camp Massasoit Campmaster staff.

His son, James Boudreau, Norwell town manager, accepted the award on his father's behalf.

Charles (Chuck) Phelan, former city council president, now chief information officer at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, who presented the award said: "Frank was always looking out for the kids and for the City of Quincy. He had a great love for this city."

Barbieri, president and CEO of Horizon Bank, received the Whitney M.

Young, Jr. Service Award for outstanding service promoting scouting opportunities for inner city youth. The award was presented by Anthony Agnitti of Agnitti Insurance Company.

Barbieri thanked those in attendance who have contributed financially to scouting in the past. "Fundraising is sometimes unfortunately unpleasant but it does allow us to provide a lot to the community."

Brian Shankey, Boy Scouts of America District Director Boston Minuteman Council, recognized Don Uvanitte, Vice President of Eastern Insurance and the Chair of the event, and Mayor Phelan, for their efforts organizing the breakfast.

Nebraska's Midwest Grille At 405 Hancock St.

The Taste Of The Midwest Spices Things Up In North Quincy

By SHEILA HALLORAN

John LeRoy doesn't take any short cuts when it comes to serving authentic barbecue. The owner of the newly opened Nebraska's researched every angle of midwestern smoked cuisine. Every meat he serves is prepared with special rubs, smoked over apple, hickory and pecan woods, and cooked to perfection.

LeRoy is no stranger to the culinary lifestyle, having served as the former Vice President of both Super Salad and the Boston Chowda Company. While smoked barbecue ribs and pulled pork is far from salads and creamed soups, LeRoy has wanted to open an authentic barbecue establishment for a few years now. LeRoy saw barbecue as a hot yet sparse segment in the hospitality industry. After thorough research, LeRoy opened Nebraska's at 405 Hancock Street.

The decor of Nebraska's is classic western style. Large rodeo prints adorn the walls, shades of burnt red dominate the color scheme, and brick-frontcounters and oak benches complete the rustic feel.

Nebraska's serves everything from authentic smoked barbecue ribs to pulled pork and brick chicken sandwiches. They offer a variety of southern and midwestern sides varying from corn salad to homemade corn bread. Best of all, the portions are generous yet reasonably priced. The popular "country platters," served with choice of meat and two sides, range in price from $5.99-8.59.

"True barbecue is hard to find in the northeast," said Aaron Skowrya, a customer at Nebraska's. "But here in Quincy, we have an opportunity to try barbecue at its best and the prices are reasonable."

LeRoy and the staff at Nebraska's take particular pride in their barbecue ribs. Michael Webb, head chef or "Pit Master" of Nebraska's has been researching barbecue for over two years. He found that the common baby-back ribs are entirely a New England phenomenon rather than authentic barbecue.

"Barbecue ribs or Carolina ribs are what people in the south know," said Webb. "Down south, most people have never even heard of baby-back ribs." According to Webb, the Carolina ribs are larger and meatier than baby-back ribs.

Prior to opening Nebraska's, LeRoy and Webb talked with barbecue restaurant owners, interviewed experts at the Massachusetts State Barbecue Championship, and met with members of the New England Barbecue Society. They also researched Nebraska and the types of meats used in Nebraska. According to LeRoy, they learned through "trial and error" and in the end, developed a barbecue rub, prepared with a secret rub developed by Webb, that they are proud of.

The barbecue ribs are slow cooked and smoked over hickory, pecan and cherry wood. Richard Skowrya of Agawam described the ribs as meaty yet lean. "There's a lot of meat but not a lot of fat. You can taste the wood on them and the barbecue sauce compliments the ribs without overpowering."

In addition to the ribs, other must-tries include the brick chicken, which is literally cooked under a foil-covered brick to seal in the natural juices and smoked over hickory wood; the pulled pork and pulled chicken, both tender meats covered in barbecue sauce; and their grilled wraps, such as the barbecue pork melt and southern chicken wrap.

As for sides, the fire roasted corn salad came highly recommended as well as the authentic Nebraska seasoned fries. Bourbon barbecue beans, country style greenbeans, sweet baby carrots, and county slaw are also worth trying.

Nebraska's offers homemade corn bread to accentuate each meal as well as homemade desserts. LeRoy plans on introducing more homemade pies for the holiday season.

There are also some menu additions in the works. LeRoy hoped to introduce beef ribs, barbecue meatloaf, spicy, southern sausages, and seafood options, such as smoked barbecue salmon, smoked catfish and rainbow trout.

LeRoy chose to open Nebraska's in Quincy due to the high visibility of its Hancock St. and Billings Rd. location. "There is a heavy concentration of office and industry workers, providing a strong lunch customer base." The heavy residential area provides the night and weekend business and the high delivery potential.

Nebraska's offers free delivery or as they call it "pony express" delivery. According to LeRoy, authentic smoked barbecue makes a great alternative to pizza and wings when watching the game and platters of ribs and other smoked specialties make for a delicious addition to corporate parties and family events. Nebraska's also offers "chuck wagon" value options to feed your entire family or to serve while entertaining friends. Nebraska's convenient delivery and catering services compliment any event.

Nebraska's is opened Sunday through Thursdays 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Fridays and Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 12 p.m. For catering information, take out orders or curb-side pick up, call 617-472-8822.

More Than 100 In Attendance

Ceremony Celebrates John Adams' 268th Birthday

Dignitaries, elected officials, family, friends and residents gathered last week to celebrate the 268th birthday of one of Quincy's most famous sons, John Adams.

More than 100 people attended an Oct. 30 wreath-laying ceremony, signifying Adams' birthday. The ceremony began at noon in the Church of the Presidents in Quincy Center.

The annual tradition started during President Lyndon Johnson's tenure, where a wreath is sent to the burial place of all deceased presidents on their birthdays.

Adams, the nation's second president, received a wreath of red and white carnations and blue lilies from the United States Navy because Adams was president when the Navy was formed.

Representing President George W. Bush was Commander John C. Bozeman, Commanding Officer of the Naval Reserve Center in Quincy.

A number of dignitaries and elected officials attended the ceremony, heaping praise on Quincy's most famous resident.

Lt Gov. Kerry Healy, representing the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, described Adams as "independent, intelligent, blunt and fiercely patriotic."

"John Adams was an original thinker who loved America and made enormous sacrifices on its behalf," she said.

Healy credited Adams with being a catalyst for the development of the modern public education system.

Mayor William Phelan called Adams "one of history's keenest minds, one of our nation's most eloquent spokesmen, and perhaps the greatest of Quincy's native

Emma Barber, senior at the Woodward School For Girls, spoke of the special history linking the Adams Academy and the Woodward School, and she praised Adams for his commitment to providing access to a good education for all.

"As a student, I benefit because of his determined commitment to schools for all," she told the audience.

Rear Admiral Roger T. Nolan, assistant deputy chief of Naval Operations for Warfare Requirements & Programs, said Adams would be proud of the modern-day Navy and its servicemen and women.

Nolan praised those serving in the military during operations in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"The Navy has never been more ready than now," said Nolan.

For Longtime Dedication To Children And Community

Thomas Williams Honored As JWV 'Citizen Of Year'

Quincy Atty. Thomas Williams was honored Sunday as the Quincy Jewish War Veterans "Citizen Of The Year" for his longtime dedication to helping children and the community.

Williams received the 53rd annual award at a breakfast at Beth Israel Synagogue attended by city officials, past recipients and members of his family.

Mayor William Phelan, congratulating Williams on receiving the award, said:

"This lofty honor is well deserved for his work in helping children, the community and his concern for his fellow man. He joins an impressive list of past recipients.

"I hope that we all may draw inspiration from the work of Tom Williams and think of what we can do to help our fellow citizens."

Phelan presented Williams with a city commendation.

Randolph School Supt. Arthur Melia, a close friend, cited Williams' "strong family values.

"When I think of somebody I'd like to be like and have my family be like, I think of Tom Williams.

"I know that many of the values and principles that Tom has received came from his mother and father but he has been a tremendous son, somebody you want to say, 'I'd love my son to be like that.' When you talk about a friend, there is nobody more devoted, dependable, selfless."

Family members had their own special tributes.

"I think I can say for the last 33 years and more that Tom has been the most wonderful person," his wife, Patricia, said. "He has always been available assisting everyone he could find who needed help.

"He has always been so unselfish, giving of himself. I just want to thank you and tell you how much I have admired him over all these years. He has been an amazing husband, an amazing father."

Tiffany Williams, a daughter, who owns an advertising-public relations firm, said her father was also her mentor and friend and "a man born with the courage to lead... As an attorney and businessman, he has helped so many people along the way."

Victoria Williams Landers, an attorney working with her father in his Quincy law firm, said: "He has a heart of gold. He is full of love and faithfulness. He loves children and really enjoys helping children.

"He is a man who believes in justice and social action and helping others, particularly his neighbors and those who are underprivileged."

Monique Hankinson, an Army Reserve captain and military nurse with the 101st Airborne Division, said: "The one word I can think of about my father is supportive. He was always the loudest guy at the softball games... He spent so much time and effort with the Boys Scouts and with the girls, too. He put so much into the kids in the community. It was awesome."

Thomas Williams, Jr., of Washington, D.C., a government analyst, said his father likes to plan trips and wants everyone to go.

"If it was a boy scout trip... and the kids couldn't afford it, he would pay for it.

It is an honor to call my father 'Dad.' He is my best friend."

The award was presented to Williams by Irving Isaacson, past commander of the Quincy Jewish War Veterans Post and program chairman.

The inscription reads: "In recognition of outstanding and meritorious service for helping children, the community and concern for his fellow man."

Williams, in accepting the award, said: "Thank you again for being my friends and supporters. Thank you so much to the Jewish War Veterans for this award. I hope to live up to this award and do more in the future to help make the world a better place."

A Massachusetts Senate citation from Senator Michael Morrissey, who was attending the Quincy City Democratic Committee breakfast that morning, was presented to Williams by Larry Norton, past commander of the Quincy Veterans Council.

David Rafferty of Dist. Atty. William Keating's office presented him with a citation from Keating and other district attorneys in the state.

Officials attending the breakfast included City Council President Daniel Raymond, Councillor and former Mayor Frank McCauley, former Mayor James Sheets, Councillor John Keenan and School Committee Vice Chairwoman Christine Cedrone.

ATTY. THOMAS WILLIAMS was honored Sunday as the Quincy Jewish War Veterans "Citizen of the Year." With him here are Post Commander Bertrand Shaffer (left) and Irving Isaacson, past commander and program chairman who presented the award.

Eagle Scout Project For 17-Year-Old Arthur Barrett

Local Youth Repairs Gravesites At Hall Place Cemetery

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Arthur Barrett is just trying to be a good scout.

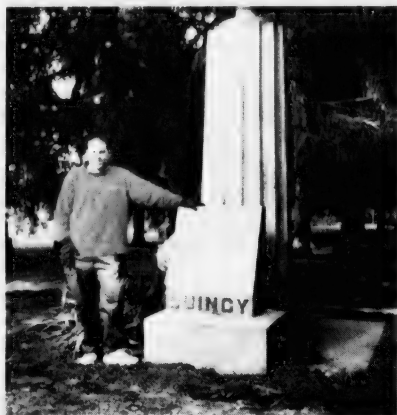

Eagle Scout, that is.

Searching for a community service undertaking that could serve as an Eagle Scout project, Barrett, 17, discovered that several gravesites at Hall Place Cemetery were in dire need of repair.

Barrett, a Quincy resident and senior at North Quincy High School, did some research at The Thomas Crane Public Library and found out that several Quincy citizens, including Civil War veterans, are buried in the cemetery.

From his research, Barrett learned of Pvt. Charles H. Brown, a 44-year-old blacksmith from Quincy who joined the 60th regiment company B. The regiment was organized in the summer of 1864 for 100 days of service. Part of Brown's term of service was spent in Indianapolis where he investigated secret organizations and others alleged to be disloyal in the war. He was awarded a letter of commendation for efficient service.

"This guy was pretty cool; he investigated secret organizations during the war," said Barrett. "I found him to be very interesting."

Brown survived the Civil War and lived to the age of 78. He died in 1898. He is buried in the cemetery.

Barrett found his project.

With the help of many friends and volunteers, Barrett restored several gravesites that had been damaged due to the rigors of Father Time and Mother Nature. In addition, they cleaned the areas surrounding the graves. They raked leaves, removed weeds, trimmed bushes and repaired five gravesites using epoxy cement. The graves of Eugene Trask, Nathaniel Ames, John Johnson and Jane Graham were also repaired, Barrett said.

After cleaning Trask's gravestone, Barrett was able to decipher the epitaph written on it. Barrett discovered that Trask was born in Quincy in 1839. He enrolled in the Iowa voluntary infantry during the Civil War and was killed in 1863 by American Indians while on duty.

Volunteers also cleaned up the Quincy Family Monument, the resting place for eight family members whose last name was Quincy. The names on the monument are: Charles C. Quincy, Mary K. Quincy, William H. Quincy, Angelina M. Porter, M. Emmie Quincy, Edward A. Quincy and M. Fannie Quincy.

"The great thing about this was I remember helping other people when they were looking to become an Eagle Scout, and now other scouts are helping me," said Barrett, a member of Troop 2 in Weymouth.

Curry Hardware provided mulch, soil and tools for the workers, while Wal-Mart contributed a $50 gift certificate for the cause.

In addition, Barrett received guidance on how to repair the gravestones from Linda Monti of Monti Granite Co. in Quincy.

"I had no idea how to repair gravestones and she was very helpful, as were all the businesses that contributed," said Barrett, who joined the Boy Scouts six years ago.

After the project is complete, he will submit a report to the Boy Scouts, in the hope of becoming an Eagle Scout in early 2004.

Stop & Shop Launches 'Food For Friends' Drive

The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company has kicked off its 14th annual Food for Friends program with a goal of raising more than $1 million for some 100 local hunger relief agencies in the Northeast.

The Stop & Shop stores in Quincy will be raising funds for Seaside Advocacy, DOVE and the Great Boston Food Bank.

The stores will host fund-raising events such as hot dog and bake sales and will sell $1 paper turkeys which may be personalized by customers and displayed throughout the store.

A total of 100 per cent of the funds raised in the Quincy Stop & Shop stores will be donated to the local hunger relief organizations and the company will match a portion of the funds.

"This is a critical year for fund-raising; many families have to decide whether their money will go towards food of heat because they can't afford both," said Barry Berman, executive vice president of procurement and marketing.

"Providing meals to those who need help is a cause that directly impacts each community in which we operate and gives each store the opportunity to form a lasting partnership with a local food pantry and make a difference."

Christine Cadegan Wins 2 Occupational Health Awards

Christine Cadegan, program director of Occupational Health Services at Quincy Medical Center, has won two awards for excellence in the field of occupational health.

She was named recipient of the Lewis H. Millender, M.D., Golden Rose Award as "an outstanding individual in the field of occupational health - one who is a tireless advocate committed to assisting injured workers in reaching their fullest potential, who demonstrates compassion and leadership and who is a role model for others."

She was recognized as "an exceptionally caring individual who is always looking for ways to enhance the patient experience and optimize patient outcomes."

Cadegan also won a certificate of appreciation from the office of Mayor William Phelan during the Quincy Firefighters' annual graduation ceremony when she was cited for her work in ensuring the health of city firefighters.

Getting Your Roof Ready For The Season

(NAPS) — Your roof can be in top form this year if you take a little time to give it the care it needs. While you're out raking the leaves or mowing the lawn, you can give your roof a once-over from the ground to be sure it's ready for rough weather — the last thing you need when there's snow on the ground and a chill in the air is a roof problem.

The safest way to check your roof is to look at it through binoculars from the ground. You don't have to climb a ladder to spot potential problems. Here are some things to look out for:

- Make sure your gutters are securely fastened and draining properly.

- Make sure there are no cracks or open seams in your gutters or downspouts.

- Check that your roof isn't missing any shingles, tiles, slates or nails.

- Look for signs of decay on the shingles and sheathing, and make sure no shingles are cracked, curled or missing.

- If you have a flat roof, the drainage system must be designed to handle water appropriately and be in working order.

- Look at the mortar and bricks on your chimney; you may need a mason to make necessary repairs.

- Check the flashings — the metal pieces used to waterproof interruptions in the roof plane such as pipes, chimneys and skylights.

- Look over the caulking and touch it up where it might be deficient.

- Dark, dirty-looking areas on your roof can be a sign that your roofing material has reached the end of its life span.

If you do spot problems, your next step should be to call in a roofing professional to evaluate your roof and determine what — if anything — needs to be done to repair the damage.

If you need to reroof your home, remember that the key to a long roof life is the right combination of underlayment, ventilation, insulation and shingles. When these elements are working in unison, they can provide maximum performance, efficiency and roof life.

CertainTeed Corporation offers a variety of shingles in an array of colors and styles to suit almost any budget and enhance almost any facade. For example, algae-resistant Landmark shingles are constructed using three laminated layers and may be the most versatile ever produced.

Better Closet Systems Bring Order To Busy Households

(NAPS) The cure for closet clutter often seems as elusive as a cure for the common cold—but it's out there. Even among new homeowners, lack of closet space is a chief complaint, according to the National Association of Home Builders. And it's no wonder. In today's fast-paced world, wading through personal clutter on a daily basis interferes with the speed of life.

Time-pressed and space stressed, Americans are seeking order on the home front, one closet at the time.

The key to an organized closet is making the most of the space available. Design leader Lynette Jennings suggests several guidelines for maximizing closet space:

- Expand storage options vertically and horizontally. "Look up and down, right and left," Jennings suggests. "Add storage units and racks to under-utilized areas for a dramatic increase in shelf and hanging space." An existing closet can be transformed into a jumble-free zone by adding organizer units which can be configured into an almost endless number of clutter-busting solutions.

- Group apparel and accessories by activity. "This is a simple time-saver for today's multi-faceted lives," says Jennings. Once items are categorized, it's easier to determine if extra organizers —such as belt racks or stock dividers—are needed to create customized storage for individual needs.

- Aim for convenience. "An easy-to-use system automatically saves time," Jennings notes. "For example, keep the items you wear most often front and center in your closet to avoid wasting precious minutes hunting for a certain blazer or a favorite scarf." Create a convenient, centralized dressing area by moving dressers and mirrors close to the closet.

- Opt for visibility. Arranging items by color within each category—from power suits to lingerie—makes it easier to dress for a meeting or pack for a trip. Open shelves, clear containers and double hung racks for shirts and slacks keep choices in plain view for quick retrieval. "Don't forget to install a light in the closet to brighten the area," Jennings adds.

- Look ahead. Save time now—and later—by choosing portable, easy-to-install components.

Point Webster Students Take Cruise On New Police Boat

Point Webster Middle School students got their sea legs with a boat trip on Sept. 17 along Quincy's coastline during the start of the 3rd annual New Horizons for Youth Program, sponsored by the Quincy Police Department.

More than 100 students, along with teachers and police officers acting as chaperones, took a cruise on the department's new police boat, which was donated by the US Coast Guard. The excursion took them along Quincy's coastline, Castle Island, Logan Airport and the Charles River Locks. Point Webster Principal James P. McGuire, community police officer James Dentremon, and the Quincy Police Marine Unit, consisting of Officers Robert Gillan, Robert Morales and James Silcox, participated in the cruise. One trip visited George's Island where Officer Gillan provided the group with a tour and narration of the island's history.

This is the first in a series of five boat trips this school year.

Each year, the New Horizons for Youth Program offers more than 200 students a wide variety of activities, including field trips and celebrations, while building a strong relationship between teachers, youths, Quincy police and local businesses.

Point Webster Middle School is the recipient of two after-school grants, the New Horizons for Youth, which is funded by the Governor's Office of Public Safety and the Quincy mayor's office, and the Twenty-First Century Grant, which is funded by the Department of Education.

Both programs offer many academic clubs, including Real Life Math, Power Math, French Club, and cooking classes, where students learn how to prepare healthy and nutritious meals. After school programs include arts and crafts, dancing lessons and making candy.

The Quincy school department and the community police have worked together to enlist the support of several local companies and businesses, including Dependable Cleaners, Outback Steakhouse, Walmart and Dunkin' Donuts.

Native American Chief Speaker At Beechwood Breakfast

By JOHN NOONAN
Chairman Quincy
Council On Aging

A full-fledged Native American Indian chief recalled legends and customs of his ancestors when he spoke recently at the monthly Currents Events Breakfast held at Beechwood on the Bay.

Chief One Bear Richard Tremblay, 86, of Ojibwe descent, recounted tales and folklore concerning tribes and his ancestors who inhabited territories in the Quincy and South Shore areas.

Chief One Bear is no stranger to Quincy having lived as a youth in West Quincy and Houghs Neck before his family moved to Weymouth.

In his talk at the breakfast attended by seniors representatives of Quincy's six wards, he described various parts of his distinctive wearing apparel including his feathered headdress.

Tremblay is well-versed in Native American Indian traditions and has been named lifetime chief of the Order for the Preservation of Indian Culture also known as TOPIC.

This is the native American Indian organization that for the past quarter of a century has sponsored the annual Pow Wow in the South Shore area.

For the past several years this culture event now held at the base of the Blue Hills has attracted thousands annually. For two days a wide range of exhibits, sacred rituals, tribal music and dances are presented.

Tremblay has received numerous honors for his tireless efforts to respect the environment. He has lectured at Harvard University, the University of Massachusetts and at the State House.

He is the recipient of the Elderpreneur of the Year prestigious award cosponsored by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and local business group.

He has received an award from the Massachusetts Commission on Indian Affairs for advancing Indian culture. He has taught pottery in Trade School and has sold pieces worldwide.

He is past commander of the Weymouth American Legion and VFW posts. He is also currently chaplain for the Weymouth Veterans Council.

Last June he was honored by the Weymouth Historical Commission for his leadership in the creation and dedication of the Wessagusset Memorial Garden. It was near this spot 380 years ago that a group of Wessagusset Indians were lured to their deaths by Myles Standish of Plymouth Colony.

A life-size wooden carved statue of a bear was unveiled in his honor.

Tremblay has also participated in Quincy Is No Place For Hate official ceremonies in the City Council Chambers. He is known for his appeal to the Great Spirit which he invoked at that time. The appeal reads as follows:

A prayer of the Chippewa Native Indian. (Courtesy Chief One Bear).

"O Great Spirit whose voice I hear in the winds and whose breath gives life to all the world, hear me! I am small and weak. I need your strength and wisdom.

"Let me walk in beauty, and make my eyes ever behold the red and purple sunset.

"Make my hands respect the things you have made and my ears sharp to hear your voice.

"Make me wise so that I may understand the things you have taught my people.

"Let me learn the lessons you have hidden in every leaf and rock.

"I seek strength, not to be

CHIEF ONE BEAR Richard Tremblay was the featured speaker at a recent Current Events Breakfast at Beechwood on the Bay. Shown with him are Forrest Smith, Frances Smith, Tremblay's wife, Margaret Little Fawn Tremblay, and Mary Hennessey.

AMONG THOSE WHO attended the Beechwood breakfast and shown with Chief One Bear Richard Tremblay were Ruth Matthews, Lillian Murphy, Gert Smart and Maureen Murray. (Beechwood photos) greater than my brother, but to fight my greatest enemy — myself.

"Make me always ready to come to you with clean hands and straight eyes. So when life fades, as the fading sunset, my spirit may come to you without shame."

FALL CAR CARE

Ask The Car Doctor -- AAA's John Paul

Questions About Cooling Fans, Batteries, Front Brakes

Question: I have a 1990 Honda Accord; the radiator-cooling fan is not coming on.

Could the fan motor be the problem?

Answer: Check the power and ground circuit of the system. Additionally the engine temperature sending switch or the fan relay could be the problem. The fan motor can be tested by applying 12 volts of power directly to the fan.

Question: I have a car that the battery goes dead if the car sits for several days. I have checked for lights left on and a faulty battery. All the test look good, what is causing the battery to fail?

Answer: The best method to check for battery voltage drain is with an ampere meter. Using the meter leads attach one lead to the negative battery post and the other lead to the battery cable. Remove the cable from the post keeping the leads attached. At this point the meter will be in series with the circuit. This method will read the battery drain and keep the memory for the radio presets. Start on the 10-ampere scale and continue to the milli-ampere scale. If current draw is found remove fuses to isolate the circuit causing the current draw and resulting dead battery.

Question: I have a 1999 Kia and the front brakes make noise. The brake pads look fine but there is quite a bit of noise and some vibration. Is there something I can do?

Answer: During the model year 2000, Kia developed a new style brake pad to reduce noise complaints. Check the disc pads if the pad backing plate is black in color they can be updated to the new design.

Question: I recently purchased a used 1998 Chrysler Sebring convertible with 65,000 miles on it from a private party. The car runs good but when I went to get an inspection sticker the car failed for NOX. The garage is at a bit of a loss as to what to do. I love the car and don't want to return it; do you have any suggestions?

Answer: NOX or oxides of nitrogen can be caused by high engine temperature, excessive combustion chamber deposits or a faulty catalytic converter. Some Chrysler products required updating of the onboard computer to pass dynamometer testing. Have your garage reference technical bulletin number 18-26-99 for further information.

Question: I have a car that I only drive about once a week. The brakes just don't seem to stop well and the pedal feels a little mushy. I have had the brakes inspected and the mechanic told me the pads and shoes were in good shape. Could the brake power booster be faulty?

Answer: As a brake power booster fails you will usually lose all power brake assist and have a very hard pedal. The problem may be the lack of use with the car. It is entirely possible the brake calipers and wheel cylinders have rusted and don't allow enough brake application. Some repair shops have gauges that can measure brake pressure and pinpoint the cause of the problem. In most cases the repair involves replacing the calipers, wheel cylinders and brake pads and shoes.

Question: I want to buy a vehicle and keep it for 18 years then give it to my granddaughter. I could use a truck and it would be great if it could be a classic by the time I give it to her. Do you have a suggestion for a truck?

Answer: Look for a vehicle that is both practical and produced in limited numbers. The Harley Davidson edition Ford F150 (currently on the market) and the Chevrolet SS/R when it is released later this year are two vehicles to look at.

John Paul is AAA's Car Doctor and is heard locally every Saturday morning on WJDA am1300 from 9-11:00am. You can email John your car question at jppaul@aaaasne.com

North Quincy Girls Shocked By Oliver Ames

By CHRIS POISSON

A surprising season came to a shocking end Sunday afternoon for the North Quincy High School girls' soccer team.

Third-seed Oliver Ames struck twice within a two-minute span in the first half — on balls that deflected off North Quincy players — to dispatch the 13th-seeded Red Raiders, 2-0, in the first round of the Division 1 South tournament.

"We were absolutely stunned," said North Quincy head coach Paul Bregoli. "We outplayed them for the first 20 minutes and then that happens. It took the wind out of our sails. It was like getting punched in the stomach."

Still, the loss doesn't take away from what North Quincy accomplished this year. Considered a rebuilding season, the Red Raiders actually posted a better record (12-7-3) than a year ago and won a tournament game with their 1-0 home victory over Natick last Friday on Halloween in the preliminary round.

"The senior group is a terrific group of kids in terms of leadership," Bregoli said about quad-captains Sarah Gregory, Jenn Ryan, Breanne Therrien and Katy Faherty along with Kristina Manganaro, Ashley Ridge, Kacy Dotoli and Caitlin Trainor.

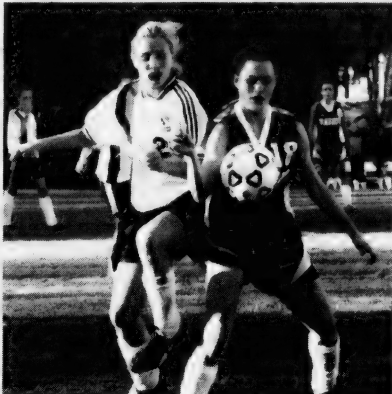

"No one, including the coaching staff, thought we'd make the tournament this year. We thought it would be a rebuilding year. We only had five kids back with experience. It's remarkable the way they responded."

The Red Raiders generated several scoring chances in the first 20 minutes. Faherty and junior midfielder Eileen Price had quality bids, while junior midfielder Caitlyn Peters broke down the left side before being pushed from behind. Bregoli felt there should have been a penalty kick awarded.

Oliver Ames scored with 18 minutes left in the first half. Gregory, with her back to the field, chased a ball in the penalty area and there was no call when she was pushed to the ground. As she got up, the ball bounced off her knee and past keeper Manganaro.

Two minutes later, outside midfielder Brenna Matthews crossed a ball left to right that ricocheted off a North Quincy player coming back into the play and past Manganaro for a 2-0 advantage.

"We had chances but the big momentum turner was that first goal," Bregoli said. "The kids played hard as usual. They didn't score against us. Defensively, we played real well."

Ridge, a defender, blanketed midfielder Amanda Klane, one of the top players in her league. "Ridge did a great job of marking her up," Bregoli said. "She was not a factor offensively at all."

North Quincy had a couple of chances in the second half. With 10 minutes left in the game, Ryan made a nice move to beat two defenders and fired a bullet inside the box, but the keeper made an incredible save coming out of the net. Several minutes later Faherty almost scored on a corner kick but the keeper made the save right at the bar.

Manganaro turned in a solid game, and made an outstanding save with eight minutes left in the game when she rushed out of the net, slid and kicked the ball away from a charging Oliver Ames player.

Against 19th-seeded Natick, the Red Raiders didn't do much offensively in the first half as they were on the defense against an attacking Natick offense, which pushed its strong midfield group forward and was getting passes off cleanly.

"Their midfielders pushed up and it was like they were playing six forwards," Bregoli said. "We were playing defense the whole time. We'd get the ball in the first half and just kick it. We weren't playing soccer; we were playing kickball. We told them at halftime they have to win some balls. That means being tougher and more tenacious in defending. And we talked about playing together."

The Red Raiders heeded their coach's advice, and 15 minutes into the second half they tallied the game-winner. Sophomore midfielder Lindsey Clifford, who had just entered the game for a banged-up Ryan, received a pass from Price in the box and placed a perfect shot past the keeper.

"We got the one goal and then we hung on for dear life," Bregoli said. "We had to scratch and claw for this win."

With 15 minutes left in the game, junior sweeper Julie Holleran made a great defensive play when she caught up to a streaking Natick player at the top of the box to stop a breakaway attempt.

Sophomore midfielder Caitlin McLeary played well at midfield when she filled in for Ridge who left win an injury. Gregory had a strong defensive game, as did Faherty after she moved from forward to outside mid for the final 20 minutes.

"We got the monkey off our back," Bregoli said. "We finally got a win in the tournament. That was a great team, like a club team. They were so skilled it was scary. This was the epitome of a team win. We used a lot of kids."

In the regular season finale, North Quincy pulled out a 2-1 win over Brockton to avenge a 4-0 loss in the season opener. Therrien headed in a Faherty corner kick for a 1-0 lead and with seven minutes left in a tied game Faherty netted the game-winner on a penalty kick.

CLEANER CABIN AIR
If your vehicle's windows fog up and there is minimal airflow coming from the defroster outlets, the cabin air filter(s) may be plugged. Filter life depends on the quality of the air in your area, but a year (12,000 to 15,000 miles) is typically the recommended replacement interval. More common on newer cars, cabin air filters may resemble engine air filters. They are usually made of different materials, however, the primary one being a charcoal layer in several elements. The charcoal is "activated," meaning that it is treated with chemicals and heat to provide it with specific odor-control properties. In addition, the dust and pollen-filtering element is electrostatically charged so it can attract airborne particles to the opposite charge fibers.
Regularly scheduled maintenance, such as filter changes, can extend the life of your car, especially important if you are considering buying your car at the end of its lease. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO we want you to be well informed about every system of your car. Our friendly, professional, ASE Certified service staff, here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-943-1550) will gladly answer all your questions. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Give us a try! We'll earn your trust!
HINT: Cabin air filters also perform "mechanical filtration," which means they trap particles that are larger than the pores in the filter.

Jimmy Fund Baseball Tourney Raises $18,500 For Dana Farber

The third annual Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament held in the summer raised $18,500 for the Pediatric Solid Tumor program at Dana Farber Cancer Institute.

The tournament, sponsored by Quincy Youth Baseball Junior League and Quincy Parks Department, featured 32 teams of 10, 11 and 12 year olds from communities throughout the South Shore and Boston.

For the first time, Quincy teams won the championship in each of the three age divisions.

Jane Warwick and Cindy Ouellette, tournament co-directors, again supervised the volunteer effort, which included soliciting donations from area businesses and organizing the many Quincy Youth Baseball parents and family members who worked the concession table throughout the weekend.

Quincy Babe Ruth World Series contributed over $2,000 raised from 50/50 raffles held during the World Series in August. Several winners donated their winning shares.

South Shore Co-operative Bank, Krokidas & Bluestein, LLP, "A Friend," and Roush

Associates each contributed $1,000. Players and coaches from the Quincy.com Junior League team raised over $300. Player leaders R.J. Barden and Danny Breslin organized the team's fund-raising efforts.

The tournament was started three years ago so players and friends of Pat White, a 12-year-old player in Quincy Youth Baseball Junior League and a cancer survivor, could show their appreciation to The Jimmy Fund and Dana Farber. The tourney has raised $42,500 over the past three years.

Quincy, North Girls Advance In Volleyball Tourney

The Quincy and North Quincy high school girls' volleyball teams each swept their matches last Saturday night at home in the first round of the Division I Central tournament.

The second-seeded Presidents (18-3) knocked off 15th-seeded Waltham, 30-19, 30-7 and 30-25, while the eighth-seeded Red Raiders (15-8) ousted ninth-seeded Boston English, 30-18, 30-12 and 30-9.

In the quarterfinals Tuesday night, Quincy hosted seventh-seeded Lincoln-Sudbury (14-5) and North Quincy traveled to top-seeded Doherty (20-0). The semifinals are scheduled for tonight (Thursday) and the final Saturday night.

In Quincy's contest, junior middle hitter Nicole O'Sullivan tallied four blocks, five digs and 19 kills, including a seven-for-seven run of kill chances in the second game.

Junior setters Rebekah Sorensen (17 assists, two service aces, five digs) and Andrea Pettinelli (14 assists, three aces) also powered the offensive attack.

Senior outside hitter Bonnie Hirtle registered five aces, eight digs and five kills, while junior middle hitter Nicole Cahill totaled four aces, four digs and eight kills.

"In the first game we came out a little slow, a little nervous," said Quincy head coach Christine Barrett. "But the kids worked hard and were definitely prepared. In the second game we just turned it on. It just took a while to get going. We took the third game handily."

In North Quincy's matchup, senior middle hitters Maria McGinness (two blocks) and Megan Sidorowicz (two digs) had nine and six kills, respectively. Sophomore outside hitter Erin Connolly added seven kills.

Senior outside hitter Jamie Mullen registered 19 service points (seven aces). Freshman Maria DeLaCrocce also played a strong game.

"It was a pretty easy match," said North Quincy head coach James Rendle. "We got a lot of players in the game and the underclassmen got some varsity experience in a tournament match."

Presidents In ACL Race After Win Over Sandwich

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School football team could very well be playing for the Atlantic Coast League championship and a playoff berth in a showdown with Plymouth North Nov. 14 at home.

The only thing that stands in its way is another trip to the Cape—the third straight week—tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 against a pesky Dennis-Yarmouth squad.

"We have to take another long ride to play a tough Dennis-Yarmouth team," said head coach Bob Noble. "If we can come out with a win, that would be a tremendous accomplishment, winning these three road games."

If the Presidents (5-1-1) knock off the Dolphins Friday, they'll be playing the Panthers the following week for at least a part of the ACL crown.

And with a little help they could be playing for a bigger prize. If Whitman-Hanson, which lost to Nauset last Saturday, falls to Plymouth North this week, then the Presidents will receive a postseason invitation if they defeat Plymouth North.

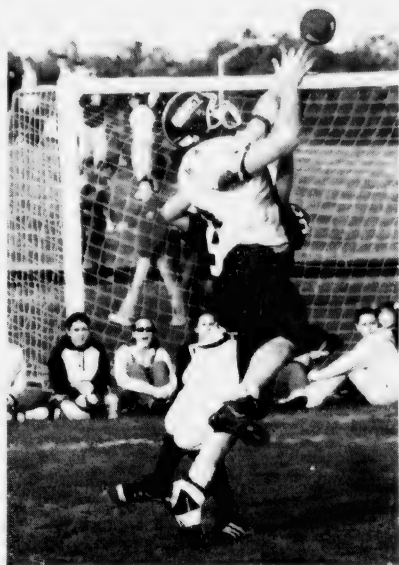

"It's certainly exciting," Noble said about the league race. "It's within our grasp. It's in our control to a certain degree."

Quincy remained alive in the ACL race by pulling out a 35-14 victory at Sandwich last Saturday afternoon.

Senior tailback J.J. Niamkey rushed for 169 yards and four touchdowns on 14 carries to power the offense. For the season, the quad-captain has gained over 700 yards and scored nine TDs.

Sandwich jumped out to a 7-0 lead on tailback Anthony DePaulo's 5-yard TD run in the first quarter.

Quincy evened the score in the second when Niamkey broke free for a 15-yard TD run. Senior Steve Costigliola kicked the first of five extra points and remains a perfect 8-for-8 in that department.

The Blue Knights, though, found the end zone again on DePaulo's 4-yard run to take a 14-7 lead at halftime.

"It was tough for us in the first half," Noble said. "I think we suffered from a little bus lag. They outplayed us offensively in terms of moving the football."

In the second half, Quincy came up with a huge defensive stand when it forced Sandwich to go three-and-out on the first series. The Blue Knights mishandled the snap on the punt and Quincy recovered the ball at the Sandwich 25.

The Presidents capitalized when senior quarterback Josh Giordani fired an 11-yard TD pass to senior tight end Justin Thorley to tie the game at 14-14. Giordani completed 9-of-13 passes for 100 yards.

After Sandwich punted on its next series in the fourth quarter, Niamkey jetted 77 yards for a TD with the help of senior Roger Palermo's crushing block to hand the Presidents their first lead, 21-14.

Quincy's defense then came up with two clutch plays to cement the victory. Costigliola picked off a pass on Sandwich's ensuing series and Niamkey soon found paydirt with a 14-yard gallop.

Senior linebacker James Hutchins intercepted a pass on Sandwich's next possession, and on the first play from scrimmage Niamkey scored on a 23-yard jaunt for a 35-14 advantage.

"We made some defensive adjustments in the second half," Noble said. "A lot of credit goes to defensive coordinator Bill Reardon with help from assistant coach Dan Morrell. We completely shut down Sandwich's attack."

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Start Your Family Exercise Routine Now

A Well-Rounded Fitness Regimen Is Important

(ARA) — Now that the heat of summer has passed and winter is around the corner, it's time to hibernate, right?

Wrong!

It's the perfect time to get in shape. Conditions are pleasant for exercising, and with the kids back into their new school schedules, it's more convenient for families to fit in a regular daily workout.

Life Time Fitness, a national Healthy Way of Life Company, offers the following tips for involving the whole family in a new fitness routine.

1. Seize the moment Time, or the lack of it, is often cited as the biggest challenge to sustaining an exercise regimen. When the kids return to school, what better way to use some of that precious time than getting in shape?

Your workout doesn't have to take a lot of time. Even a half hour walking your neighborhood pays off in increased energy and stamina. Most fitness center aerobics classes are just an hour long, yet offer big fitness dividends. Taking care of yourself is one of the best things you can do for your family.

2. Enjoy the year's most beautiful season In many parts of the United States, autumn is a near-sacred season, with its warm, sunny days, cool evenings and postcard perfect colors. Get outside and enjoy the season by bicycling, walking, hiking, jogging, playing tennis, or any other outdoor activity.

Explore parks in your area, find a new bike path through the woods, take a walk around a lake. The time spent out in nature will do as much good for your mind as for your body.

3. Return to your club or gym It takes 30 days to make fitness a habit, and supplementing outdoor exercise with increasingly frequent visits to your health club will help diversify your exercise regimen and set the stage for regular workouts once autumn's leaves have fallen.

A well-rounded fitness regimen is important. While aerobic activity such as running or bicycling is good for your heart, resistance training is also a critical component of a balanced program, so be sure to take advantage of your fitness center's weight lifting equipment.

4. Make it social One of the great things about exercise is that it doesn't need to be done alone. By exercising together, family members can keep one another motivated, and it will be more fun.

5. An easy way to tackle these goals and be ready when winter comes is to join a health and fitness center. Life Time Fitness, with locations in Minnesota, Michigan, Ohio, Virginia, Illinois, Indiana, Arizona and Texas, offers the widest range of programs and activities for the whole family.

Offering spacious health and fitness centers with more than 110,000 square feet of space, a 1-plus acre workout area including more than 400 pieces of cardiovascular, resistance and free weight equipment, multiple group fitness studios offering hundreds of classes per week, a wide range of athletic leagues, rock climbing walls, kid's camps, and much, much more. Life Time Fitness provides something for everyone. The entire family also can enjoy indoor and outdoor aquatic centers which feature multiple water slides, children's play areas, lap pools, relaxing whirlpools, and complimentary towel services, along with swimming, diving, scuba and kayaking lessons for all ages and skill levels.

Have young kids? Life Time Fitness' large childcare centers offer a safe, fun environment for kids from three months to 12 years old. Facilities include a playmaze, children's theater, gym and computer center, and a dedicated area for infants. Better still, childcare is free to members.

"Since inception, Life

Time Fitness has placed a unique emphasis on serving families," says Mike Brown, senior vice president of operations. "Serving families with kids is a priority, not an afterthought. Each of our centers is founded upon providing an unparalleled set of services and amenities that meet the health and fitness needs of the entire family."

STEMMING FROM BABY TEETH

While most baby teeth end up under the pillow for the tooth fairy, primary teeth may be put to better use. Scientists have recently been able to coax stem cells from the pulp that clings to baby teeth that are shed. They then converted those stem cells into fat, brain cells, precursors of teeth and bone, and other body tissues. While stem cells hold considerable potential in treating a wide range of diseases from Parkinson's to diabetes, many people have objected to the use of embryos as a source of these versatile cells, which are able to become virtually any cell in the body. On the other hand, stem cells derived from baby teeth raise no such concerns.

We provide quality, comprehensive dental care for both children and adults, and we're always happy to discuss improving your smile, and thus, your total feeling of self-esteem. Getting More From Your Doctor Visits (NAPS) — 1. Take responsibility. Your health care is a partnership between your doctor and you, in which you have responsibility for working with your doctor to manage the various aspects of the care you receive. This is not as daunting as it may seem. Credible, independent health information is now readily available at your fingertips through a physician-respected web site (MerckSource.com).

2. Make it a priority to understand your health status and risk factors. Studies show that doctors base up to 80 percent of their diagnoses on what patients tell them about their symptoms, history and lifestyle. MerckSource.com is a reliable source for patients interested in preparing for their doctors visits or learning more about their health.

3. Keep a health journal. Once you start playing an active role in your own health management, it helps to be organized. Keeping a health journal can help you do that. MerckSource.com can help you gather information to record in your journal, including an immunization record and preventative tests.

4. Make time to prepare for office visits. With preparation your doctor visits can be more productive. Preparing may help you feel confidence and informed, and help you in articulating your symptoms or posing health questions.

5. Ask the right questions. Asking meaningful questions about your symptoms or risk factors may help your doctor diagnose a condition or provide information that can help you be more healthy.

Everyone deserves to have a little bliss in their life.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Since the birth of the republic, millions of Americans have died for their country on the field of battle. Millions more have placed themselves as a living shield between their country and her enemies, emerging unscathed through the benevolence of a Merciful Creator.

On Veterans Day, we honor the dead and the living whose actions have testified to their courage and devotions to our country. We honor their heroism. . . . We give thanks for their sacrifice, and we share it only briefly and inadequately — the grief of loved ones who survive them.

Let us on this Veterans Day remember that we have preserved our freedom only through the continued willingness of brave men and women to risk the sacrifices of their lives for its sake.

On Veterans Day, we honor them all; those who wore a uniform in days past and those who wear it today. We honor them with a recognition of a debt that can never be repaid. It is beyond price . . .

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You enjoy the attention in the early part of the week, but it might be a good idea to opt for some privacy by week's end so that you can have more time to consider an upcoming decision.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You unearth some surprising facts. Now you need to consider how to use them to your advantage. Meanwhile, it might be best to keep what you've learned secret for now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A comment by a colleague piques your curiosity to know more. Best advice: You'll find people more likely to offer information if you're discreet when making your inquiries.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your energy levels begin to rise by midweek. This allows you to catch up with your heavy workload and still have plenty of get-up-and-go to go out on the town this weekend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You're probably roaring your head off about a perceived slight from a longtime critic. Ignore it. That person might just be trying to goad you into doing something you might later regret.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The early part of the week is open to spontaneity. Then it's time to settle into your usual routine to get all your tasks done. A personal situation could require more attention from you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A meeting of the minds on a workplace project might well develop into something more personal for Librans looking for romance. Aspects are also favorable for platonic relationships.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A more positive mood might be difficult to assume in light of a recent problem involving the health of someone special. But by week's end, your emotional barometer should start to rise.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Look for a changed attitude from a former adversary once he or she realizes you have your colleagues' full support. Now you can refocus your energies on that workplace project.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This time, a difference of opinion might not be resolved in your favor. But be patient. It could all ultimately work out to your advantage, as new information begins to develop.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A tug of war develops between the artistic Aquarian's creative aspect and his or her practical side. Best advice: Prioritize your schedule so you can give appropriate time to both.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You could be entering a career phase awash with job-related demands. But avoid being swamped by the overflow and, instead, keep treating water as you deal with demands one by one.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are an exceptionally loyal person, and you're respected for your ability to keep secrets entrusted to you.

Phelan Rolls, Gardner, Kelly, McCarthy Win

Houghs Neck, was returned to the Ward 1 council seat he had held for 10 years from 1974 to 1983.

Kelly won the seat with a 268-vote margin over Quincy police officer Joseph Keegan, 32. Kelly's vote was 1,901 to Keegan's 1,633.

Veteran Frank McCauley, 71, making his last run, led the city council at large field to win an eighth term.

Joseph G. Finn, 47, took the second spot for a second term. John E. Keenan, 39, was third to retain the seat he was appointed to fill after Finn's death left the council to become state treasurer.

McCauley's vote was 9,870, Finn 9,748 and Keenan 8,827.

School Committeewoman Jo-Ann Bragg, 48, trying to cross over to the city council, was runner-up with 7,310.

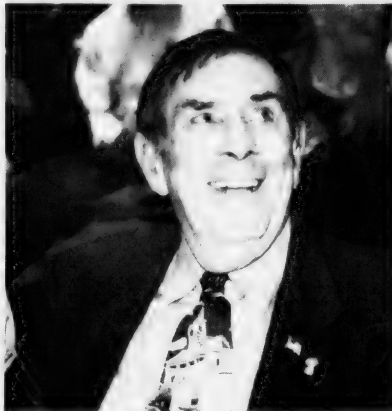

Jimmy Liang, 26, the city's first Asian-American candidate, polled 6,654, just 686 behind Bragg. Robert J. Boussy, 48, trailed with 897.

McCauley, a four-term mayor with 30 years municipal elective office, said going into the election that this would be his final run.

"And, it is," he said. "I'm keeping my word on that."

Although elated over leading the at-large field, he said: "I would have been happy with third place, but we had a great group of people helping us. We have a city council in transition, and I think the people have shown they want someone on the council with experience and know how."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin J. Coughlin, 48, had no trouble winning a second term, rolling by challenger John C. Cam, Jr., 58, with 82 percent of the vote. Coughlin's vote was 2,400 to Cam's 519.

"I'm ready to jump back into whatever needs to be done," Coughlin said. "I will continue to maintain focus on public works projects for the ward and on fiscal issues. I think I played a significant role in keeping the city on an even keel. I will certainly work to keep the city moving forward."

Daniel Raymondi, 56, won an eighth term in Ward 2 and Douglas S. Gutro, 38, a second term in Ward 5, both without a challenger.

James H. (Jay) Davis, 38, was elected unopposed to the open Ward 4 council seat Bryan Connolly is leaving.

Raymondi's vote was 2,055, Gutro's 2,615 and Davis, 1,779.

"I'm very excited at the opportunity to serve the residents of Ward 4," Davis said. "I will continue to listen to the concerns of the neighbors. My plan is to try to hold neighborhood meetings to try to give more access."

Incumbent Linda K. Stice, 54, soared to the top spot in the school committee field piling up a strong 9,532 vote.

Elaine Dwyer, 48, won the seat she had been appointed to after Phelan became mayor two years ago, taking second place with 7,083.

David F. McCarthy, 42, director of security at General Dynamics in Needham, won the seat Christine Cedrone, vice chairwoman, is vacating. McCarthy was a surprise winner considering his sixth-place finish in the preliminary election seven weeks ago.

Brian H. Buckley, 52, was the runner-up with a vote of 6,445, followed by Theresa M. Lord-Piatelli, 46, chairwoman of the Quincy College Board of Governors with 6,176 and Ronald P. Iacobucci, 48, with 5,953.

"I am very pleased — this is the first time I've topped the ticket," Stice said. "I am extremely grateful for the trust that Quincy's voters have shown me. All of the candidates were very qualified and they all care about the kids."

Just 35.20 percent — 18,545 — of Quincy's 52,684 registered voters turned out to vote.

MWRA Pipeline Rehab Project Begins In Blue Hills Area

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) will begin construction work in the Blue Hills Reservation this week to repair the 50-year old Southern Spine Water Mains supplying Quincy and Milton.

Phase one of the project includes the rehabilitation of 11,000 feet of pipeline from the Blue Hills Reservoir to Furnace Brook Parkway at Copeland St., scheduled over an 18-month period.

The pipes will be cleaned and lined with cement mortar. Underground work will take place approximately 15 access pits located largely in the Blue Hills Reservation with a few pits on or near Furnace Brook Parkway and at the rotary at Route 93. The rotary will not be used for staging or laydown, but work in existing water valves at this location is necessary.

For the next several months, work will occur in the Blue Hills Reservation only. While MWRA has a 100-foot wide easement for the pipeline in the Reservation, tree removal will take place only within a 150-foot wide buffer. The trees that have been sprouted and grown since the last clearing, will be removed over a two-week period. Work on Furnace Brook Parkway and at the rotary is not scheduled to begin until Spring, 2004.

'Fast Lane' Transponders Sign Up At City Hall Nov. 10

Quincy residents will be able to register for and pick up "fast lane" transponders for use on the Mass Turnpike Monday, Nov. 10, from 3 to 7 p.m. at City Hall.

Turnpike officials will be at the city clerk's office to provide assistance to those who want to sign up for the Turnpike Authority's electronic toll collection system. Fast Lane is operational the length of the Turnpike and anywhere the E-Zpass is accepted in New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and, coming soon, Maine.

City Seeking Volunteers For Downtown Cleanup Day Nov. 15

The city is seeking volunteers to participate in a cleanup effort of the downtown area on Saturday, Nov. 15 from 8 a.m. to noon.

Termed "Quincy Renaissance," the volunteer effort will begin in the parking lot of the Thomas Crane Public Library, according to Health Commissioner Drew Scheele.

Volunteers will be asked to scour the downtown area for trash and debris. Trash bags and gloves will be supplied by the city, said Scheele.

The cleanup project is one of 26 recommendations put forth by the mayor's downtown task force.

"This is a small piece of the puzzle, but it is a necessary step toward making Quincy Center more attractive," said Scheele, a member of the task force who will take part in the cleanup day.

Thomas Largey, the mayor's executive secretary and chairman of the task force, said Mayor William Phelan would like to make the cleanup effort an annual event.

"The mayor assembled a very able group of business folks, city officials, neighbors and human service providers to advise him as to ways of making downtown Quincy a more secure and inviting destination for residents, visitors and shoppers," said Largey. "The mayor is pleased to implement this recommendation in the hope that it will become an annual event."

Lines Up More Than Enough Votes McCauley Wins Council Presidency

By HENRY BOSWORTH
Veteran Frank McCauley will enter his 31st year in Quincy elective office as president of the city council.

Sources close to the behind-the-scenes campaigning to succeed outgoing Daniel Raymondi said McCauley early this week lined up more than enough colleague votes to assume the presidency Jan. 5.

McCauley needed four votes in addition to his own. He reportedly has close to eight and his election in January could very well be unanimous.

McCauley, 73, has held every municipal elective office including mayor but the council presidency had eluded him until now.

Two other councillors — Kevin Coughlin and Douglas Gutro — who were interested in the presidency reportedly stepped aside and moved into the McCauley camp.

The council presidency is considered second in political power only to the mayor and a springboard, for some, to that office.

But McCauley won't be using it as a springboard. He has already been a four-term mayor and has no thoughts of returning to that office. He served from 1982 to 1989.

This is his "last hurrah." When he completes the next two years in the council he will step into political retirement.

When it comes to public office, McCauley could say, "been there, done that."

Last week he was elected to his eighth city council term, topping the at-large field for his 15th city election victory.

He is the only person in Quincy's 114-year history as a city to hold all four municipal offices: mayor, councillor-at-large, ward councillor and school committeeman.

As mayor, he served in the dual role of chairman of the school committee.

Coughlin, 48, and Gutro, 38, will be serving their second terms in the council. Coughlin turned back challenger John Cain to keep his Ward 3 seat. Gutro was unopposed for re-election in Ward 5.

Both have gotten off to impressive political career starts. And the feeling is that both are young enough to win the council presidency down the road.

Although McCauley will have 32 years in elective office when he retires he will not be the longest serving.

Dr. Nathaniel Hungtin holds the longevity record with 36 years service, all on the school committee.

McCauley has built a Jack Benny-like penny-pinching reputation as the council's fiscal watchdog. He is expected to continue in that role while running a tight ship as council president.

McCauley, because of his long service, was considered a sentimental favorite for the council presidency.

And now he will soon have that political feather in his cap.

From Quarry Hills Membership Fees Council Approves Creation Of Fund For Streets, Sidewalks

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The city will have a dedicated revenue stream worth millions of dollars for the sole purpose of repairing the streets and sidewalks and upgrading aging DPW equipment, under a measure approved by the city council Monday night.

By an overwhelming 9-0 vote, the council signed off on Mayor William Phelan's proposal earmarking half of the funds generated from the Quarry Hills golf course to the repair of the city's streets and the purchase of new DPW equipment.

According to city officials, the measure will eventually generate millions of dollars for the purpose of repairing the city's streets and sidewalks and purchasing new equipment for the DPW.

The home rule petition, introduced by Phelan and amended by Councillor John Keenan, moves to the state Legislature and Governor Mitt Romney's desk for approval.

Thomas Largely, the mayor's executive secretary, said he expects quick approval of the measure.

"This is a great thing for the city," Largely said after the council vote. "The condition of the streets and sidewalks has always been one of the biggest issues for the citizens of Quincy, and now we have a dedicated revenue stream that will be used for the sole purpose of addressing that issue."

Earlier this year, the city renegotiated the lease with Quarry Hills Associates. As part of the new lease, the city is entitled to 10 percent of the club's gross revenues.

Under the renegotiated contract, Quarry Hills Associates has until 2007 to complete the project, which includes the construction of a clubhouse, banquet hall and athletic fields. The city is guaranteed minimum pay

Hearing On Tax Classification Dec. 1

The city council will hold a public hearing on Monday, Dec. 1 at 6:30 p.m. to listen to the pros and cons of the tax classification for Fiscal 2004.

Classification is the percentage of the tax rate paid by business and industry compared to 100 percent of true valuation paid by residential owners.

State law permits the city to tax commercial property at 175 percent or residences, but most cities and towns choose not to tax business at the full rate.

McNamee To File For Ward 6 Council Recount

Mayor, School Committee Picks Same As Parents' Students' Vote Differently In Councillor-At-Large, Ward 1, Ward 6 Races

If the city's schoolchildren had their way, the next inauguration of the city council would look much different than what their parents envisioned.

During last week's Kids Voting USA program, students mirrored their parents' choices for mayor and school committee, but they diverged on their picks for the city council.

On Election Day, students went to the polls with their parents to cast ballots in their own ballot boxes. High school students were able to vote at their respective schools.

In total, 1018 students cast their ballots. "re-electing" Mayor William Phelan by a more than 3-to-1 ratio over challenger Joseph Newton. The final tally in the mayor's race was 747 votes for Phelan to 223 votes for Newton.

But students had a different vision for the makeup of the next city council. Councillor Frank McCauley, the top vote getter in the At Large race, was a distant fifth place with kids. Instead, Jo-Ann Bragg made the cut by finishing third in the kids' vote. Overall, the kids cast their ballots as follows: John Keenan - 624, Joseph Finn - 507, Jo-Ann Bragg - 368, Jimmy Liang, 339, Frank McCauley - 276 and Robert Bousy - 56.

In Ward 1, kids chose youth over experience, with Joe Keegan defeating Leo Kelly, 427 to 243 votes. Kelly beat Keegan in the actual race, however.

Students voted for Brian McNamee over Alicia Gardner in the Ward 6 race for city council. McNamee came out ahead by a mere 10 votes, beating Gardner 249 to 239. Gardner defeated McNamee by 26 votes in the actual election.

In Ward 3, kids agreed with their parents as incumbent Kevin Coughlin beat back a challenge from John Cain. Coughlin garnered 266 votes to Cain's 239.

The other Ward races saw the incumbents unopposed, with Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi receiving 414 votes, and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro picking up 437 votes. Ward 4 Councillor-elect Jay Davis garnered 450 votes.

In the school committee race, the students choices mirrored their parents', with David McCarthy, Linda Stice and Elaine Dwyer picking up the top three spots. McCarthy received the most votes, 473, with Stice getting 399 and Dwyer picking up 377 votes. Theresa Lord-Piatelli came in fourth with 355 votes, Brian Buckley finished fifth with 319 votes and Ronald Iacobucci came in sixth with 273 votes. In the actual race, Buckley finished fourth and Piatelli fifth, with Iacobucci duplicating his sixth place finish.

David McCarthy has seven children, five of which are adopted.

Kids Voting USA is a nation, non-profit nonpartisan organization that teaches students how to choose candidates and vote.

Korean War Medal Of Honor Recipient Warns: 'Northeast Asia Is A Perilous Situation'

By COURTNEY PAQUETTE
Quincy veterans and other dignitaries gathered Tuesday at the Korean War Memorial to remember and reflect on the contributions of the country's veterans and honor those who served and continue to serve in the Armed Forces.

The annual Veteran's Day Parade, which marked the 50th anniversary of the end of the Korean War, started at Quincy College and, fittingly, ended in the ceremony at the Korean War Memorial on Hancock Street and Merrymount Way.

"The Korean War might be known as the forgotten war but it is the forgotten victory," said the keynote speaker, retired Navy Capt. Thomas Hudner, a veteran of World War II, Korea and Vietnam, who won a Congressional Medal of Honor in Korea. The ceremony included the local unveiling of a commemorative Korean War stamp, depicting the Memorial in Washington covered with snow; and the award of high school diplomas to seven veterans who left school early to fight in the war.

Hudner recapped the Battle of Chosin Reservoir in North Korea, in which he won the Medal of Honor for his attempt to rescue a comrade trapped behind enemy lines.

"The battle was fought in almost unimaginable conditions," he said. Not only were the Americans outnumbered eight to one by the Chinese but they had to battle snows three feet deep and temperatures 30 below zero. The battle lasted 10 days.

"It typified most of the fighting that went on in Korea," he said, calling the war "every bit as savage as World War II and Vietnam. But people have forgotten — or never knew."

Hudner drew a parallel between the Korean War and the current situation in North Korea where Kim Il Jong threatens the use of nuclear weapons.

"Northeast Asia is a perilous situation that threatens the peace of Asia, if not the whole world," he said.

He highlighted the importance of defending freedom, adding, "Our cause is the cause of all mankind. When we fight for their liberty, we fight for our own."

Congressman William Delahunt, in his remarks, stressed the importance of honoring veterans through health care programs and funding, saying "the sad truth is we are not keeping our promises to our veterans."

"What is especially poignant is the disparity between words of love (for veterans) and our actions when the veterans come home," he said. "This does not reflect well on this nation. We are

If you just go by what you hear or read in the mainstream media, you might think that the refinancing "window" has slammed shut. But that's a simplification that's simply not true. Here are the facts: Mortgage rates are still bouncing around near 50-year lows. So if you want to refinance for whatever reason — to be mortgage-free before you retire, to pay for tuition, to consolidate other loans and debts or just to lock in a low rate before the window does close — you still have time. But possibly not much. So don't wait. Come see us or call 617-471-0750.

The Council Presidency And . . .

DAN RAYMONDI, council president the past two years, was not a candidate for another term. Under council rules, the president is limited to two one-year terms. But that was not always the case.

TOBIN

Arthur Tobin served a record eight one-year terms from 1970 to 1977. And for him, the presidency was a springboard to the mayor's office. He challenged and defeated incumbent Joseph LaRaia that final year as president.

RAYMONDI

WHEN IT COMES to commitment loyalty there has never been anything like the vote in 1962.

That was the year Charles Shea was elected council president and John Quinn could have.

Quinn had pledged his vote early to Shea. And when it came to the actual voting at the council's organizational meeting, Quinn found himself Shea's rival.

The nine councillors voted in roll call alphabetical order — as they do today — with Quinn being the last because his name started with a "Q."

By the time the vote got to Quinn, he and Shea were tied at 4-to-4. All Quinn had to do was vote for himself and he would be the council president.

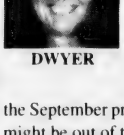

Temptation may have been there but loyalty was much stronger. Quinn said he had committed to Shea and voted for him, making Shea — and not him — the council president.

It took awhile after that but Quinn, who died in 1986, eventually became council president in 1978 — 16 years later.

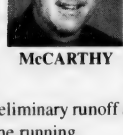

QUINN

ELAINE DWYER and David McCarthy walked off with the "come-back" honors in last week's city election.

DWYER

The two had finished fifth and sixth in the school committee field in the September preliminary runoff and looked like they might be out of the running.

But both stepped up their campaigns and came back strong to take the second and third spots behind front-runner Linda Stice.

Stice had to be elated over topping the field for the first time with an impressive vote of 9,532.

But Dwyer and McCarthy must have been just as pleased with their comeback performances.

Dwyer had been elected at a city council-school committee joint convention to complete William Phelan's term after he was elected mayor two years ago. Now she has won the seat on her own in a city-wide election. Her vote was 7,083.

For McCarthy, who took the seat Christine Cedrone is leaving, it was victory in his first run. His vote was 6,911 only 172 behind Dwyer.

STICE

IT WAS A sentimental election night for Alicia

Gardner who (pending a recount) will be Quincy's first woman councillor in 10 years and only the fourth in 114-year history as a city.

GARDNER

TOLAND

Gardner was a close friend and supporter of the late Patricia Toland, the last woman to serve in the council.

There were some tears mixed with the smiles at the victory get-together at the Adams Inn. Among those there were Pat Toland's three children, Liz Bates, John and Brendan Toland and longtime friends such as former School Committee woman Mary Collins.

"Pat was my role model and friend," said Gardner, who had worked in her campaign right out of high school.

She was elected to an at-large seat in 1981 and re-elected to five terms, serving as council president in 1988-89, the only woman ever to hold that post. She left the council in 1993 to become assistant city clerk. She died in 1994.

Edna Austin was the first woman councillor elected in 1943 and served 15 years at-large under both the Plan A and Plan E city charters. She died in 1979 at age 93.

Joanne Condon Walsh was the second woman elected, winning the Ward 6 seat in 1978.

Gardner and Walsh are friends and Gardner says she is pleased to follow Walsh as the second woman to hold the Ward 6 seat.

Walsh served eight years, leaving in 1985 to unsuccessfully challenge incumbent Frank McCauley for the mayor's office.

Public Hearing Dec. 3 On Proposed Smoking Ban

The city council will hold a public hearing on the city's proposed smoking ban on Wednesday, Dec. 3 at 7:30 p.m. in the council chambers. In June, Health Commissioner Drew Scheele proposed an ordinance making all city workplaces smoke-free, including places people go to eat or drink.

But the council put off the issue in anticipation of passage of a statewide ban. Prospects of a statewide ban, however, remain unclear at this time.

Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly pushed for the Dec. 3 hearing date, saying the council should address the issue sooner rather than later.

Employers or businesses violating the proposed ban would be hit with substantial fines, according to the measure.

A $100 fine would be given for a first offense. A second violation within 24 months of the first would result in a $500 fine. Three or more violations within 24 months of the second would result in a $1,000 fine.

Each calendar day represents a separate violation, Scheele said. As a result, the fines could pile up in a hurry.

Various city departments — including police, fire, inspection services and health — would enforce the ban.

We need you.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1910 real photo postcard view of the square at the end of Sea Street in Houghs Neck. The view is from the Quincy Yacht Club. Nothing in this scene exists today. The yacht club building had just been moved over the water from this location on the right. The construction materials on the right were being used to build a two-story addition on the back of the club. Arthur Dunham's store and the post office were at the Moxie sign in left center. Norteman's Pavilion I right center was famous for their shore dinners that included locally caught clams, oysters, fish and lobsters. The site of Norteman's is now the club's parking lot at the foot of Sea Avenue that goes up Great Hill to the right.

Would Like Granite Ball Back At City Hall

In the Sun's Oct. 16, 2003 "Scenes From Yesterday," there was a remarkable 1920s photo of the Quincy Granite Gazing Ball located so majestically in the city center.

The article states that "the highly polished ball of beautiful dark blue Quincy granite attracted everyone who passed by it."

Maybe 60 years ago someone thought it made sense to move it to a now-inaccessible traffic rotary. But if the Gazing Ball attracted everyone who passed by it once, it might do it again; and with a desperate need to increase Quincy's tourism dollars, such a thing back downtown might help peak their interest.

Advisory Group Asks City To Look Into Canada Prescription Plan

At its meeting on Nov. 4, the Insurance Advisory Committee voted unanimously to request the city to investigate a voluntary plan to purchase prescription drugs from Canada in a "mailaway" program.

The city of Springfield has the only government importation program offered to their active and retired employees. The cities of Boston, Cambridge and Brockton are also investigating their involvement for a similar move. The states of Minnesota, Illinois and Iowa and the commonwealth of Massachusetts are also pursuing the idea more vigorously. All of the above are attempting to save large amounts of money for both the government agency and also the participating employee or retiree.

At the present time the programs have been declared "illegal" under present law. The main argument against is the oversight by The Federal Drug Administration on foreign imported Rx's. It has been reported that the approval of prescription drugs in Canada are tightly controlled by the Canadian Government and the process sometimes takes almost a year or longer for acceptance.

The major drug manufacturers in the United States have reacted to the issue by limiting shipments of prescription drugs to Canada in order to serve Canadian citizens only. They are, in effect, attempting to "stone-wall" the Canadian Rx mail away programs. Current newspaper articles have indicated there is a possible 40 to 50 percent saving by purchasing the prescription drugs in Canada.

The Senate and the House of Representatives in Washington are taking a hard look at changing the laws and regulations in this regard.

The Battle Of The Bulge Monument

I was dismayed to read in your paper, Henry Bosworth's article, Aug. 28, of veteran Elmer Fagerlund's insensitive objection to the Battle of the Bulge monument dedicated in McIntyre Park.

Although he says he is a veteran of the "Bulge," his objection smacks of "sour grapes," most likely because he, being a resident of Quincy, had no part in the planning of either the reunion or placing of the monument in Quincy.

It may surprise Mr. Fagerlund to know that there are 65 chapters of the VBOB nationwide, many of which have dedicated monuments in cities where they exist, including: Staten Island, N.Y.; Ft. Monmouth, N.J.; Valley Forge, Pa.; Arlington, Va.; Orlando, Fla.;

Texas, Akron, Ohio; San Francisco, Calif.; St. Louis, Mo.; Wisconsin, Ft. Monroe, Va.; Tucson, Ariz.; Hyannis, Mass.; and most recently Worcester, Mass. Oct. 11, bringing three monuments in number in the commonwealth.

There has never been one objection to the VBOB monuments placed in these communities — only plaudits of the veterans. "The Bulge," labeled a "battle," was more like a war in itself and should be memorialized as such. Over 1 million men participated on both sides. We shall continue to place monuments in the cities and towns across our proud nation.

Quincy's Yesterdays Teachers Seek $500 Increase

The 400 members of the Quincy Teachers Association asked the School Committee for a permanent raise of $500 a year, retroactive to Sept. 1. The current median salary of the teachers was about $2,400.

The formal request was made to the School Board by a committee composed of Miss Elizabeth Lawrence, David Meaney, Miss Bernice Stiles and Felix Cutler.

They pointed out that the cost of living had risen 45 percent since 1941 when the median teachers' salary was about $1,900.

TAX HIKE COMING

Mayor Charles A. Ross said the Quincy tax rate probably will go up in 1947 for the first time in five years.

The rate had been pegged at $30 since 1943.

The mayor said the big reason for the predicted increase was a general pay raise given to 1,800 city employees.

But City Councillor Carl W. Anderson charged that the rate hike was not really necessary.

He recommended several ways to save money by streamlining the city government, including combining the offices of tax collector and treasurer.

The city was planning a "day" Nov. 19 for Ruth Gordon, who left her home in Wollaston 32 years ago to seek and find success on the stage.

Among the visitors expected to arrive with her by train at Wollaston station were members of the cast of her latest play, "Years Ago," including Frederic March, Florence Eldridge and Garson Kanin.

They were to be drive to Quincy Square in a cavalcade of 1914 automobiles, commemorating the year in which Ruth Gordon Jones was graduated from Quincy High School.

The fashion show at the Quincy Marriott was like a thousand other fashion shows but for one small difference.

The models ranged in age from 42 to 85.

They were patients, friends and staff at Granite Medical, which organized the show to call attention to the risks, prevention and treatment of osteoporosis.

As the models walked the length of the ballroom, Maria Walty, general manager of Talbots in South Shore Plaza, which provided all of the clothing, described the details of the outfit.

Cecilia Mullen, a nurse practitioner at Granite Medical, provided a background on each model and gave an overview of osteoporosis, a thinning of the bones that is experienced by one out of two women over 50.

Bone density scans were offered at the show and fashion experts from Talbots

Gas Spill Poses No Threat To Public, Says MassElectric

Lingering vapors from August's gasoline spill in Quincy Center pose no threat to public safety, a Massachusetts Electric Co. official told the city council Monday night.

Joseph Cardinal, MassElectric's account manager, said remnants from an Aug. 21 gasoline spill that sent 11,000 gallons of gasoline spewing onto the city's streets is not a safety hazard.

"Massachusetts Electric Company wants to stress there is not now a public safety threat or has there been a public safety threat since the initial cleanup of the gasoline spill," he told the council.

Cardinal appeared at the council's request after it was discovered that MassElectric installed seven vented manhole covers near the location of the gas spill. The vented manhole covers were installed after employees detected gas vapors in the manhole system.

The electric company is conducting an assessment of its underground Quincy Center conduits. Gas vapors were discovered during the review, Cardinal said.

"These levels are well below the safety range but because of our concern for employee safety we decided that by adding more ventilation to the manhole and duct system it would eliminate any more spikes in the gas vapor levels," Cardinal said.

MassElectric plans to remove a sample of the electrical cable and conduit to determine if the gasoline caused permanent damage to the electrical lines.

Last week, the electrical company began an assessment of its underground Quincy Center conduits. In addition, Cardinal said MassElectric replaced all fireproofing materials in the manholes, eliminating any possibility of further spikes in vapor levels.

Some councillors complained about a lack of communication coming from the electric company.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro said MassElectric should have informed city officials of the work being done in the area.

Gutro also voiced skepticism over Cardinal's words that the gas spill was never a threat after the initial cleanup.

He cited the temporary closing of Quincy College as proof there were problems after the cleanup.

"I'm not 100 percent convinced that we are out of the shadows of this gas spill," Gutro told Cardinal.

Goodwill Industries Seeks Winter Clothing Donations

With winter closing in, Goodwill is urging Quincy residents to dig through their unwanted and unneeded cold weather clothing for donations to the Goodwill store at 625 Southern Artery.

"Fall is the time when people go through their closets and determine their winter clothing needs," said Joanne Hilferty, president and CEO of Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries.

"We are appealing to people early this year because we want to make sure we have warm coats and clothing available in advance of the frigid weather. And if this winter is anything like last winter, we will need to have a large supply on hand."

Donations to Goodwill also benefit guests at the Pine Street Inn, the shelter for homeless men and women in Boston. Goodwill now provides clothes for Pine Street as part of a unique collaboration effort formed last spring to maximize resources.

"The coat drive is an important component of the Goodwill-Pine Street Inn collaboration, which has been a very positive step in allowing both organizations to fulfill their missions in a way that provides more value to the community," said Hilferty.

Quincy residents can donate coats or winter items to the Goodwill store at 625 Southern Artery. Items should be in clean, wearable condition with no rips, holes or stains.

Window Replacements, Heating System Repairs Rebates From KeySpan, Citizens Energy Corp.

Energy Conservation Grants To Help Father Bill's Place

Shelter residents staying at Father Bill's Place in Quincy will sleep more warmly this winter thanks to energy conservation grants under a program recently announced by KeySpan and Citizens Energy Corporation.

The grants will provide more than $300,000 in energy upgrades to 59 shelters throughout Eastern Massachusetts, including Father's Bill's Place in Quincy, said KeySpan Chairman Robert B. Catell.

The total value of the improvements amounts to over $1 million in lifetime energy savings, allowing shelters to use their funds to provide other basic services.

The energy improvements financed with the help of the New York-based gas utility include rebates to Father Bill's Place for window replacements and heating system repairs.

The Rev. Bill McCarthy, founder of the shelter, opened the news conference which announced the grants with a prayer after Citizens Energy Corporation Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy II asked him to come forward.

Flashing a grin, Fr. Bill stepped up to the podium. "Heavenly father, please bless all of us here who are working together to help the homeless in our midst," said the priest. "We also thank you for the good work of KeySpan and Citizens Energy as they work to make shelters warmer and safer places in our communities."

Sen. Michael Morrissey (D-Quincy) reminded the audience that in spite of public perceptions, homelessness has been growing throughout the state, not just in the cities.

"People don't realize that so many of the problems of the homeless extend into the suburbs. It's not just an urban problem," Morrissey said.

Fr. WILLIAM MCCARTHY

According to the Massachusetts Coalition for the Homeless, homelessness in the suburbs has increased over 10 percent in the last

"The good news is that shelters across the region are embracing the efficiency message," said KeySpan's Catell. "Winter is just around the corner. We don't have a crystal ball on what the weather will bring or what energy prices will be, but thanks to the foresight of shelter administrators, we are in a better position to serve their needs."

Catell also thanked Citizens Energy Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, II for initiating the program

Kennedy said he asked KeySpan two years ago to provide energy audits and upgrades to shelters receiving aid through the Citizens Energy Shelter

Winter Assistance Program, which helps cover the winter heating costs of 160 emergency shelters in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, including Father Bill's Place.

"It just doesn't make sense to provide energy assistance to see it disappear through leaky doors, windows and roofs, or get wasted in inefficient heating and hot-water systems," said Kennedy, chairman of the Boston-based non-profit.

Citizens Energy's ties to Catell date back 25 years, said Kennedy, citing the utility executive's willingness to buck industry resistance and become the first to contract with the non-profit to provide cheap gas to Brooklyn Gas customers.

"Bob Catell and KeySpan have a long record of innovation and standing up to the plate to help those in need," said Kennedy.

As young residents of the family shelter shyly peered through the shelter's soaring front doorway, Kennedy and Catell held up a double-paned, energy-efficient window, which framed the gaggle of elected officials, shelter administrators, and energy honchos behind them.

The window represented energy upgrades that will save shelters thousands of dollars in heating costs over every winter season

Sausage, Pepper Bake

We recently had a family reunion and what a great weekend weather wise. And what fun they had tasting all of the different foods served buffet style.

I decided to make two main entrees, rigatoni lasagna and sausages and peppers. Today's recipe for the sausages requires no frying whatsoever, but everything is made in the oven and then blended altogether. How easy is that!

First, poke each sausage with a fork or tip of a knife. Place in a baking pan with about an inch of water on the bottom. Bake uncovered in a 350 degree oven until almost cooked. Let cool and then cut in bite size pieces. Then cut up the peppers, onions and place them in a baking pan with about two or three tablespoons olive oil, salt pepper and garlic powder. Cook until peppers are about half cooked.

While these are cooking, sauté the potatoes in a frying pan with oil until they are also browned and almost cooked through. The potatoes are optional and sometimes I prepare this dish without them, but they turned out to be a nice addition. I cooked all of these three ingredients the day before and stored them in clear gallon plastic bags and refrigerated them. Mostly because there was no room in the fridge for another dish!

- salt and pepper to taste
- garlic powder
- 3 medium sized potatoes (cut in pieces for sautéing.) (optional)

The next day, I put all of this together in one big baking pan and baked it covered in a 315 degree oven for about a half hour, and then uncovered for a few minutes. What I liked about this was that the peppers did not get soggy and everything else was cooked through.

Fontbonne Academy Presents 'Inherit The Wind' On Nov. 19, 21, 22

Fontbonne Academy's Good Fountain Players announce their fall dramatic production, "Inherit The Wind," for three shows on Nov. 19, 21 and 22.

The powerfully-moving play deals with such issues as censorship, faith, education and one's right to free thought. A 35-member cast spans all grade levels, and includes several Quincy residents: Lauren Barbadoro as Melinda Loomis, Brianna McKinney as Rachel Brown, Bridget Austin as Mrs. Krebs, Kate Hewitt as Mrs. Blair, Jackie Torres as Mr.

Bannister Liz McEvoy as Hot Dog Man and Erin Cain as Judge.

"Though it is impossible to recognize all those who contribute to the beautification, we applaud the Neat Neighbors winners, nominees and those who took the time to nominate them for their efforts that continue to make Quincy such a desirable community to have a home."

The contest was conducted under the supervision of the Park Department.

"Year after year we are amazed by the response that the Neat Neighbor contest receives," said Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry & Cemetery Departments.

"This contest was designed to acknowledge those who go above and beyond to display such a pristine appearance. In turn, we also hoped to generate a greater interest and awareness, ultimately creating an example to appreciate and emulate. Judging from the considerable increase in nominations over the past six years, we feel we are achieving that goal."

The properties were nominated during a period between Memorial . The winners were chosen at random from all the nominees that met the requirements. There was no competitive judging.

10 Tips To Save Money, Energy At Home

The Farmer's Almanac predicts that this winter will be particularly blustery, even by Northeast standards. Before you crank up the heat, the experts at Massachusetts Electric Company, in conjunction with the Northeast ENERGY STAR® Appliance and Lighting Initiative, have some tips on how you can save money and energy and still stay warm and cozy during winter months.

1. Save Money and Energy by Switching to ENERGY STAR Qualified Lighting

ENERGY STAR qualified fixtures and compact fluorescent light bulbs (CFLs) last six to ten times longer than traditional incandescent models, and operate on two-thirds less energy. How much difference does a light bulb make? If each household in the U.S. switched the lighting in just one room to ENERGY STAR, we would save enough energy to light more than 34 million homes for an entire year.

2. Shop Smart For Appliances

When you are in the market for new appliances, look for the ENERGY STAR symbol. ENERGY STAR has been created by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Department of Energy (DOE) to designate appliances, such as refrigerators, clothes washers, dishwashers, room air conditioners, and dehumidifiers that use less energy. They work just like other appliances, but use new technologies to be more efficient. There are often great rebates available that you can check out at www.myenergystar.com. Not only do you save money every month on utility bills, but nationally, if everyone bought products with the ENERGY STAR symbol, the environmental impact would be the same as taking 17 million cars off the road.

3. Timing is Everything

Timers are available for central heating and cooling systems as well as on room air conditioners. They allow you to program your systems to keep the house comfortable while you're home, and to automatically adjust the temperature to save money while you are at work or away.

4. Make the Most of

Your Efforts

One of the best ways to save energy at home is to run your clothes washer and dishwasher only with a full load. Full loads help save energy in any washer, but you can increase the savings even more by buying the most efficient appliances. ENERGY STAR qualified clothes washers and dishwashers use today's latest technology to adjust load size and water temperature. For example, compared to a 10-year-old model, an ENERGY STAR qualified clothes washer can save about $100 on average per year on your utility bills because ENERGY STAR qualified clothes washers use up to 50% less energy and save about 25 gallons of water per load. Similarly, if you use a dehumidifier, make sure that it uses the most efficient technology. ENERGY STAR qualified dehumidifiers remove water from the air while using less energy than conventional models. Without all the moisture, your home will feel more comfortable at any temperature.

5. Tackle Routine Maintenance

recommends addressing routine maintenance of your home systems to save energy.

"Most furnaces and forced air heating and cooling systems include a special filter which needs to be changed annually," he explains. "You should check your manuals and replace furnace filters for forced air systems for cleanliness and efficiency. If your heating or cooling system is more than 10 years old, you should consider replacing it with a higher efficiency model."

6. Consider the Whole House

When buying or remodeling a home, simple steps can make a big difference in energy efficiency. Consult your contractor about energy efficient insulation and duct sealing as well as the most efficient heating, cooling and hot water systems. You'll save 30-40% on your monthly bills!

7. Try A Home Tune Up

Homes can benefit from a tune-up just like cars. You can call in a professional to make sure that your air conditioner, furnace, dehumidifier and other appliances are working properly. This will ensure that all the filters are clean and that everything is running as efficiently as possible.

8. Get Ready For Winter

Before the weather gets cold be sure to properly install all storm windows. Locking double hung windows ensures that the windows are properly sealed. If you don't lock the windows often the top window can still be open a crack and cause cold air to leak in. You may also want to install weather stripping around a leaky doorway to keep your home cozier.

9. Keep That Refrigerator Clean

You should vacuum the coils underneath your refrigerator annual to ensure that it will run as efficiently as possible. If your refrigerator is more than 10 years old, you may want to consider replacing it. Some of today's ENERGY STAR labeled refrigerators use less electricity than a 75-watt bulb. More efficient operation means that newer models are quieter than older versions; redesigned doors provide better insulation to keep food fresher; and deeper doors provide more space for commonly used items.

10. Get Educated

For more information about residential energy efficiency, including details on rebates that may be available, please visit www.myenergystar.com.

Did You Know?

(NAPS) - Park of your chores should be checking your home's doors and windows for areas where cool air can leak in, and warm air can escape.

To make them draft free, make sure to maintain and upgrade weather stripping. All sorts of do-it-yourself materials are available: rope caulk, self-stick foam, and rubber weatherseals (www.duckproducts.com). The goal is to ensure that your windows and doors are snug but still operative.

The non-profit Institute of Inspection, Cleaning and Restoration Certification (IICRC) recommends that homeowners with a mold problem contact a certified professional to ensure that mold is removed correctly and occupants are protected throughout the job.

For more information on preventing mold in your home or business or to locate an IICRC Certified near you, visit www.iicrc.org or call (800) 835-4624.

For Scott Desmond Italy Scenic But:

Quincy Airman's Fighter Wing In Major Military Roles

By JOHN B. DENDY IV
Special to the Quincy Sun

AVIANO AIR BASE, Italy — For the son of a Quincy couple, the view from the backyard holds sights most people have to play a small fortune to see — the Italian Alps, lush vineyards and the gorgeous countryside of northeastern Italy.

On top of that, it's just a day's drive or less away from dozens of beautiful and historic European locations.

But Air Force Senior Airman Scott Desmond, son of Thomas and Eileen Desmond, Northfield Avenue, Quincy, pays rent for these choice digs in more than just dollars.

Desmond and other members of the 31st Fighter Wing soon realize that life in Italy is far from a European vacation, as they found themselves as major players in Operations Enduring and Iraqi Freedom, as well as helping keep the peace in places like Bosnia and Kosovo. At any given time, Aviano airmen can find themselves drilling with troops in Israel, hunkered in the field of a NATO inspection or involved in operations that span most of southern Europe, the Middle East and northern Africa, said the precision measurement equipment laboratory technician.

"I am a quality assurance augmentee for our lab. I make sure the other technicians are turning out quality equipment," said the 1998 graduate of Quincy High School. "We work on all of the equipment on the base that measures things. We run tests on the equipment to make sure the equipment is measuring things properly."

The end of the Cold War should have eased tensions at NATO bases such as Aviano, but with the break up of Yugoslavia and other Soviet satellite states, ethnic hatreds soon flared and bloodshed throughout the region brought new and even more critical missions. Construction cranes and buildings rising from once vacant pastures show that a U.S. presence in the region is far from over.

"All of the construction on base can be a hassle sometimes, but, in the long run, it will only make this a better base to live and work," said Desmond. "This is already a great base to be stationed at. The surrounding area is beautiful and the nearby mountains are magnificent."

Between plotting trips to ancient Rome, Switzerland or any other of the many culturally-rich locations easily within his reach, Desmond said he loves experiencing the different language, culture, sights and sounds of living in a foreign locale.

"The Italian culture takes some getting used to and if you don't know the language, it can be pretty hard to get things done off of the base," he said. "But I enjoy it here. One of the most interesting days I have had in Italy was swimming in the mountains in the morning and then going swimming in the Adriatic Sea in the afternoon."

When he has the time, Desmond enjoys taking it easy enjoying the many sights, sounds and tastes that Italy has to offer, but when the rent comes due on this European dream, he's off to make the U.S. and the world a safer place.

AMERICAN F-16 Fighting Falcons stand ready for launch from the NATO runway at the Italian-run base. Aviano continues its mission of flying air support for the peacekeeping operations in the Balkans.

THE EXOTIC ITALIAN city of Venice is a favorite haunt for the airmen who live 40 minutes from the famous city that has canals for streets and gondolas for taxis.

A local residence is among more than 80 homes in Massachusetts recently selected for weatherization and other renovation projects as part of the first Statewide Day of Community Service Friday, Nov. 21.

The community service day, with the support of five neighborhood community organizations, is a joint volunteer effort organized by FleetBoston Financial and the Massachusetts YouthBuild Coalition.

More than 400 volunteers from Fleet and YouthBuild will complete these community improvement projects Nov. 21 at locations in Boston, Brockton, Cambridge, Chelsea, Lawrence, Lowell, New Bedford, Springfield, and Quincy.

Locally, eight units at 111-114 Doane St. will be resided for the Quincy Housing Authority.

"Fleet is proud to be associated with YouthBuild and this statewide volunteer effort," said Brian Moynihan, executive vice president and head of Regional Commercial Financial Services & Investment Services at FleetBoston Financial and YouthBuild Boston board member. "These projects directly benefit the community, while also helping foster a strong sense of unity and giving among Fleet's employees."

The Statewide Day of Community Service is funded with a combined $50,000 grant from three FleetBoston organizations: $25,000 from Regional Commercial Financial Services, $12,500 from the FleetBoston Financial Foundation, and $12,500 from Fleet Community Relations and Sponsorships.

In addition, more than 200 employee volunteers from Fleet will work along side 200 students and staff from the Massachusetts YouthBuild Coalition.

"Fleet is demonstrating its leadership in giving back to the community through its sponsorship of the Statewide Day of Community Service," said Dorothy Stoneman, president of YouthBuild USA. "Fleet truly understands the meaning of community engagement, providing its employees with an opportunity to work together with YouthBuild students in their communities in a demonstration of teamwork and success, while helping low-income people."

Projects were selected based on financial need and location and were recommended by representatives from local YouthBuild chapters.

"We are delighted to participate in the Statewide Day of Community Service with Fleet and YouthBuild USA," said Susan Rabbitt, chairperson. Massachusetts YouthBuild Coalition. "This event clearly demonstrates our resolve to work together statewide to improve our communities, and spotlight an ongoing commitment to youth."

Seven Who Left High School For Korea Awarded Diplomas

Seven resident who left Quincy and North Quincy High Schools early to join the armed forces in the Korean War were awarded diplomas 50 years late at the Veteran's Day Ceremonies.

Anthony V. DiGiacomo, Mohammed M. Hassan, Robert C. Preble, Gerald F. Sheehan, Fred J. White and Robert P. Wirtz received their diplomas personally while that of Dominic Mignosa, who died two weeks ago, was accepted by his widow.

Mayor William Phelan and Dr. Richard DiCristofaro, superintendent of schools, and School Committee members Elaine Dwyer, Christine Cedrone, Michael McFarland and member-elect David McCarthy presented the diplomas.

DiGiacomo left Quincy High in his freshman year to join the Marines before his 17th birthday. At Quincy High he played football and did "a little bit of goofing off." He said he wanted to join the Marines since he was 13. He returned home in 1953, married and has three sons and one grandchild.

Hassan left Quincy in his senior year to join the Navy. He, too, played football and baseball. On returning home after four years in the Navy, he adopted a daughter and now has a grandson.

Preble was in vocational school at Quincy High when he left to join the Army where he was a signal corps worker. He left the Army in 1953, married and had three children. He has four grandchildren.

White joined the Navy to become a radioman during his third year at Quincy High. He said his fondest memory of high school was football practice. He earned his GED but, he said, he was happy to have his diploma. He has three children, six grandchildren.

Wirtz attended North Quincy High School for the 10th and 11th grades but attend Quincy High for his senior year. He enlisted in the 187th Airborne during his senior year. He has four children.

Mignosa left Quincy High School to join the Air Force in 1950.

All the diploma recipients helped unveil the Korean War commemorative stamp. The U. S. Postal Service, the largest employer of veterans, awarded them a pin and a certificate of honor.

too good a people to forget."

Mayor William Phelan paid particular attention to the sacrifices made by veterans, including a special remembrance for Sgt. Todd Caldwell of Quincy, who was killed in Iraq.

He also remarked about the sparsity of the crowd that lined the way for the parade on a day which he called equally as important as the Fourth of July or Flag Day.

"The somber recognition of this day may be why the streets are not lined with crowds," he said. City Council President Daniel Raymondi called on the crowd to honor the services of the armed forces "in times of war and in times of peace. He urged them to "think about how different America would be without their service."

John "Jake" Comer, former National Commander of the American Legion, stressed the importance of remembering the veterans not only in words but in deeds, "when we hear, we forget; when we see, we remember; and when we do, we understand."

Henry "Hank" Bradley, director of Veteran's Services and co-chairman of the parade, said showing veterans gratitude means continuing "to push for the benefits so richly deserved."

Robert LeFleur, past commander of the Quincy Veteran's Council (QVC), was officer of the day, assisted by Thomas Eames, Kenneth Menz, commander of the QVC, was parade marshal. Tom Stansbury, past commander of the QVC, was parade chairman.

John Rake, QVC chaplain, read the Veteran's Day, Prayer for the invocation and John Booker, assistant chaplain, gave the benediction.

The parade include a stop at the Doughboy Statue at the Adams Academy, where Mayor Phelan and Capt.

Hudner laid yellow flowers and a red and white wreath.

At the Korean War Memorial, the 2nd Marine Division fired a volley. Phelan, Hudner and Stansbury placed a red, white and blue wreath while a bugler sounded Taps and the National Anthem was played in the background with the crowd singing along.

Other parade participants included City Councilor-elect Leo Kelly. City Councilors Kevin Coughlin, Douglas Gutro, Frank McCauley and Joseph Finn; State Reps. Steven Tobin and Bruce Ayers; State Sen. Michael Morrissey, and former mayor and current clerk of court Arthur Tobin.

Philip and Carol; Austin of Quincy brought their children, Grace, 4, and Bryden, 2, to the parade.

"We thought it would be good for the kids to see it," said Carol Austin. "To remember the 11th is important."

190,000 Smokers Expected To Quit For The Day No. 20

American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout

Back in 1977, when the American Cancer Society launched its first Great American Smokeout, few could have guessed it would spark a movement that would lead to smoke-free laws from California to New York City to Boston. Now for the 2003 Smokeout, the Society is calling on the estimated one million smokers in Massachusetts to go smoke-free for the day, and to consider giving up smoking completely for the day. If those results matched this year, some 190,000 of the state's one million smokers could be expected to smoke less or not at all on Nov. 20.

Currently, 93 Massachusetts communities, including Boston, Cambridge and Somerville, have imposed local smoking bans. Further, the Massachusetts House of Representatives recently approved a bill banning smoking in bars and restaurants across the state. The House bill passed by an overwhelming 125-25 margin, and the bill now heads to the state Senate for approval. If passed and signed into law by Gov. Mitt Romney, the bill would take effect in July 2004, and the state would become the sixth with a statewide smoke-free workplace law, joining California,

New York, Connecticut, Maine and Delaware.

Currently, 8.6 million Americans living with an illness caused by smoking.

"In Massachusetts alone, tobacco alone kills 9,000 people every year, or 25 people every day," said Deborah Smith, Society area director for cancer control. "But the good news is that these deaths are preventable."

Even though smoking rates have dropped dramatically in the 27 years since the first Great American Smokeout, tobacco continues to be a major cancer killer. Consider:

- 46.5 million Americans are addicted to tobacco;
- Smoking will cause about 30 percent of 2003's estimated 556,500 cancer deaths;
- Smoking causes many cancers besides lung cancer. It is a major cause of cancers of the mouth, larynx, pharynx, esophagus, kidney, bladder, pancreas, and cervix, and has more recently been associated with colorectal cancer, myeloid leukemia, as well as cancers of the liver, stomach and nasal sinuses;

- Tobacco is as addicting as opiates, amphetamines and cocaine;
- Smokers who quit by age 35 can avoid 90 percent of the risk from tobacco;

• Nearly half of US adults who ever smoked are not former smokers.

The American Cancer Society offers support and information for smokers who want to quit during Smokeout and every other day, 24 hours a day, by calling 1-800-ACS-2345 or logging on to www.cancer.org. In addition, 33 states including Massachusetts now use the Society's Quitline, which is expected to field 48,000 calls in 2003.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

ANTIOXIDANT PROTECTION

New research indicates that those with serious gum disease have lower levels of antioxidants in their mouths than people without the condition. This suggests that one way to protect people with serious gum disease would be to boost their intake of antioxidants, which help protect the body against dangerous molecules known as "free radicals." The new research shows that people with serious gum disease had low levels of antioxidants in the fluid that seeps from the crevice under the gums into the mouth. Antioxidants were also found to play an important role in the fluid in the lungs, as well as samples from the cervix. This suggests that these surfaces need extra protection from environmental damage caused by free radicals. Unless you have regular dental checkups, you may not be aware you have periodontal disease. We are currently accepting new patients. If you know of anyone in need of quality dental care we would appreciate your referrals. We're located at 44 Greenleaf St., where our purpose is to help people reach and commit to the highest level of dental health personally appropriate to them. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com. P.S. Antioxidants include vitamins C and E, as well as beta carotene and alpha lipoic acid.

Winner Heads To Div. 3 Playoffs Quincy, Plymouth North ACL Showdown Friday

By CHRIS POISSON

The race for the Atlantic Coast League championship continues.

The Quincy and Plymouth North high school football teams will cross paths tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 at Veterans Memorial Stadium in pursuit of the top prize.

A ticket to represent the league in the Division 3 Super Bowl playoffs.

"We're excited," said Quincy head coach Bob Noble, whose team will also clinch a share of the league title with a win. "This is why you play. You play for championships. It should be a lot of fun on Friday night. There should be a lot of excitement in the school and in the city."

Tomorrow's showdown was set up last Friday night when Quincy (5-1-1 overall, 4-1 league) held onto a 35-30 victory over Dennis-Yarmouth to complete a Cape Cod sweep and Plymouth North (8-1, 5-0) crushed Whitman-Hanson, 30-0.

"You win this and you go to the playoffs," said Noble, who is in his fifth season. "We've never been in that position since I've been head coach. This is the biggest game probably in at least 10 to 15 years, if not more."

After opening the season with a loss to Duxbury, Plymouth North, which lost in the playoffs last year, has reeled off eight straight wins. The Blue Eagles are led by a veteran offense line and senior quarterback Greg Borsari.

"They're an exceptionally good football team," Noble said. "They're the best team in the league, as of today. They have some primary players back from last year and they've been a part of their success."

Coincidentally, Quincy was the last ACL team to defeat the Blue Eagles — a 21-14 triumph way back on Nov. 9, 2001. In that game,

Lynda Wilson Leads RWU Cross-Country

Senior Lynda Wilson of Quincy played second to lead the Roger Williams University women's cross country team to a recent 29-38 victory over Gordon College for the Commonwealth Coast Conference championship.

Wilson clocked in with a time of 25:34 — her highest finish in the conference meet of her career. She earned All-Conference honors. It was the fourth straight conference title for the Hawks.

FOOTBALL

senior standout tailback J.J. Niamkey, then a little-known sophomore, had his breakout game with 101 yards and the game-winning touchdown.

And that leads us into last Friday's Dennis-Yarmouth game.

Niamkey delivered a mesmerizing performance, accounting for 460 total yards and five touchdowns. He returned a kickoff and two punts for TDs, rushed for a score and passed for another.

"In terms of all-around performance, that ranks as one of the best in the history of the school," Noble said. "You'll be hard pressed to find anyone that disputes that. He had a season in one night. Most people would be happy to have that over 10 games."

"Your star players are supposed to do that in the big games," he added. "We really needed that because defensively we did not have a particularly good game."

D-Y struck first on the opening possession when senior Miguel Robinson scored on a 14-yard touchdown run. Robinson shredded Quincy's defense for more than 200 yards.

On the ensuing kickoff, Niamkey jetted 85 yards up the middle, untouched, behind great blocking for a score and senior Steve Costigliola's extra point tied the game at 7.

In the second quarter, Niamkey tossed a 69-yard TD strike to senior Roger Palermo (168 all-purpose yards) on a half-back option pass. Senior quarterback Josh Giordani rushed for the two-point conversion for a 15-7 lead.

Later in the half, Niamkey returned a D-Y punt 75 yards for a score. Costigliola's extra point made it 22-7.

The Dolphins cut the deficit to 22-10 when they hit a 25-yard field goal as time expired in the first half.

D-Y orchestrated a long drive on the opening series of the second half, capped by quarterback Mike Rose's 1-yard TD run to make it 22-17.

The Presidents answered with a 73-yard march of their own, highlighted by Niamkey's 6-yard TD run. The extra point was partially blocked and Quincy led 28-17. Niamkey (130 rushing yards) had runs of 14, 20 and 19 yards on the drive.

In the fourth quarter, Robinson concluded another long drive by the Dolphins with a 6-yard TD run. Rose rushed for the two-point conversion to pull his team within five, 28-23.

Niamkey scored what turned out to be the game-winner with a 71-yard punt return, aided by a great block from senior Angelo Venturini, to increase the Presidents' lead to 35-23.

With six minutes left in the game, D-Y found the end zone on Rose's 1-yard plunge to make it 35-30.

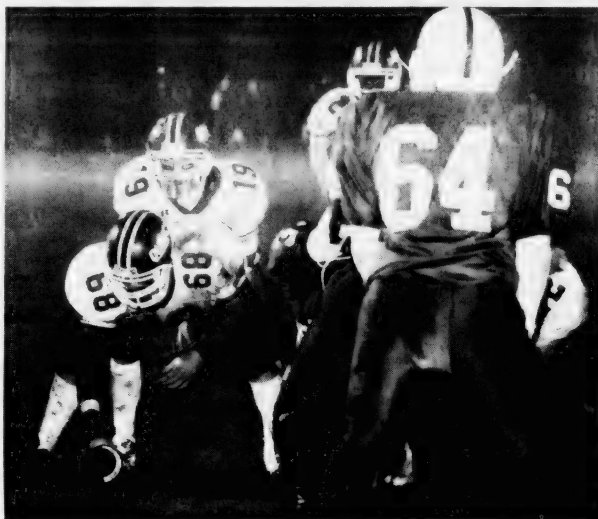

And after Quincy fumbled on its ensuing series, the Dolphins had the ball at their 25 and a chance to win the game with three minutes remaining on the clock.

With the ball on their 47, Rose threw a swing pass to Robinson, who was greeted with a thunderous pop by senior linebacker James Hutchins, jarring the ball loose. Sophomore defensive end D.J. Andrews scooped up the loose ball and returned it to the D-Y 20. Quincy got a first down and then took a knee for the win.

"Special teams won the game for us," Noble said. "Special teams coach Dan Morrell got the game ball. We don't usually give out game balls, but special teams got us to the championship game."

SENIOR ROGER PALERMO (20) stiff arms a Dennis-Yarmouth defender for a 25-yard gain in the first quarter.

QUARTERBACK JOSH GIORDANI (19) scans the Dennis-Yarmouth defense before taking the snap from center Scott Pagington (68) in last Friday's 35-30 win on the road.

AVOIDING CONFUSION

Bear in mind that your vehicle runs as much on electricity as it does on gasoline. Thus, it should come as no surprise that nearly every electrical accessory and system in your vehicle is protected by a fuse. The next time that your radio, lights, or other electrical device stops working, the chances are that a blown fuse is at fault. It pays, therefore, to know where your vehicle's fuse box is before a blown-fuse crisis arises. In most cases, forty or more fuses are usually grouped in two or more places, sometimes in or around the instrument panel near the dashboard or under the hood. Each fuse cover should have a diagram listing each device and the corresponding fuse.

It makes sense to carry a few spare fuses of each amp rating in your glove box. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO invites your inquiries about most anything connected with the care of your car. Our ASE Certified technicians are highly skilled so they can do everything necessary to keep your car in excellent running condition. We're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

North Quincy Bows To Bridgewater-Raynham Two Great Stories But Only One Winner: North

The North Quincy High School football team dropped a 42-0 decision to Bridgewater-Raynham last Friday night at home.

The Red Raiders (0-8) will travel to Canton Saturday afternoon at 1 in search of their first win of the season before the Thanksgiving Day game against Quincy.

"We have two more games left and the kids are still working hard," said head coach Tony Green. "I'm proud that they are still hanging in there."

Bridgewater-Raynham scored on all five first-half possessions as it stormed out to a 35-0 lead at halftime.

After North Quincy turned the ball over on its first series, the Trojans scored on their first play when sophomore tailback Kevin Moynihan rumbled 35 yards into the end zone. Junior Billy Whittington kicked the first of six extra points.

The Trojans made it 14-0 when senior quarterback Brett LeClere found paydirt from 16 yards out. In the second quarter, LeClere fired a 27-yard touchdown pass to senior Chris Joyce.

Moynihan added a 5-yard TD run and senior U.D. Nwosu plunged in from 1 yard out with 1:45 remaining in the half for a 35-0 advantage.

The Trojans added a touchdown in the second half to account for the final score.

Sophomore running backs Akil Benjamin and Donny Hayes, senior quad-captain and quarterback Jimmy Burke and senior linebacker Mike Dolbear (eight unassisted tackles) played well.

Unfortunately, someone had to lose in last Saturday night's Division 1 Central sectional volleyball final.

The City of Presidents matchup, played in Hudson of all places, featured two great stories.

There was North Quincy, in midst of a rebuilding year, coming together down the stretch to make a run at an unlikely state title. Six players from last year's state championship team graduated and went on to play at the collegiate level.

And there was Quincy, enjoying its best season in a decade, zeroing in on a state championship. It had won its first league trophy since 1990 and also swept North Quincy in the regular season for the first time since '90.

In the end, the Red Raiders (18-8) dug up their championship magic of the past to eke out a tough 3-2 win over the Presidents (20-4) by scores of 30-27, 13-30, 30-23, 21-30 and 16-14.

"We didn't play well," said Quincy head coach Christine Barrett. "You can't go into a state sectional final and not play your best. Unfortunately, we made a lot of mistakes that we don't usually make."

North Quincy squared off against North sectional champion Chelmsford (20-3) yesterday (Wednesday) at Chelsea High School in the Division 1 state semifinal. The Red Raiders are aiming for their fourth state title in the past five years.

For North Quincy, senior outside hitter May Ho turned in a sensational game to lead the team. Senior middle hitters Maria McGinness and

GIRLS' VOLLEYBALL

Alyssa Dearani, senior outside hitter Jamie Mullen, senior middle blocker Megan Sidorowicz, junior setter Kristin O'Toole and sophomore outside hitter Erin Connolly all played well in what was a total team effort.

For Quincy, senior middle hitter Bonnie Hirtle tallied 10 kills, 19 digs and five service aces. Junior middle hitters Nicole O'Sullivan (16 kills, eight digs, three aces, two blocks) and Nicole Cahill (10 kills, 10 digs, two aces, two blocks) played well.

Sophomore outside hitter Ashlee Scott added eight kills. Junior setters Rebekah Sorensen and Andrea Pettinelli had 15 and 10 assists, respectively.

"It was a sad bus ride home," Barrett said. "But I told the kids that no one can take away the season and what they accomplished. You have to remember the positives. They made great strides. I'm proud of them for that. They exceeded all expectations."

In the semifinals last Thursday, North Quincy pulled out a 3-2 win at No. 4 Newton North (16-6), winning 30-27, 18-30, 31-29, 22-30 and 15-13.

In the deciding fifth game, the Red Raiders trailed 13-8 before Ho served six straight points to take the lead.

"We had a good run at the right time," said NQ head coach James Rendle. "They started to get a little nervous and we took advantage of it. I was pleased that the kids didn't give up."

O'Toole had seven assists in the fifth game. McGinness (nine kills), Ho (eight), Dearani (seven) and junior outside hitter Kendra Ciccone (four) led the offense.

Mullen had seven aces. Sidorowicz came up with five huge blocks, while senior defensive specialist Elyse Dolbec and Connolly had strong passing and defensive games.

In Quincy's semifinal matchup, the Presidents cruised to a 3-0 win over No. 6 Boston Latin (16-5) at home, winning 30-21, 30-16 and 30-19.

Pettinelli tallied 10 aces, five digs and 12 assists. Hirtle registered 15 digs and five kills and O'Sullivan totaled six aces, four blocks, eight digs and 16 kills.

In the quarterfinals last Tuesday, North Quincy earned a 3-1 win over top-seeded Doherty (20-1)—its first loss of the season—30-27, 29-31, 30-22 and 30-24.

McGinness had 15 kills and Ho had eight kills and three service aces. Connolly turned in a strong defensive game with six blocks.

Quincy swept seventh-seeded Lincoln-Sudbury (14-6), 30-21, 30-20 and 20-24, at home.

O'Sullivan and Cahill combined for 33 kills to power the offense, while Hirtle added 14 kills to go along with seven digs.

Pettinelli and Sorensen tallied 19 and 15 kills, respectively. Senior captain and defensive specialist Caitlin Callahan totaled 10 digs.

Panthers Fall To Milton On Last-Second Touchdown

The Milton Mustangs pulled out an exciting 20-14 victory over the Quincy Point Panthers to capture the Quincy Youth Football championship at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Milton, which returned the kickoff to the Quincy 40-yard line, ground out critical yardage and valuable time on its final series as it found itself at the 1 with five seconds left in the game.

Jared Lloyd just crossed over the goal line against the Panthers' gritty defense as time expired for the game winner.

After a scoreless opening quarter, the Panthers struck first when quarterback Doug Scott fired a 10-yard touchdown pass to Zach Ohlson. Scott rolled left on a bootleg for the two-point conversion and an 8-0 lead.

Scott completed 5-of-5 passes on the drive and 12-of-14 for the game, with Cliff Celeste and Michael Wright being his favorite targets. Desmaris Alexander and David Marx had tough yardage as well.

The Mustangs wasted no time responding as Lloyd jetted 65 yards for a score with less than a minute remaining in the half. They missed the two-point conversion and trailed, 8-6, at halftime.

At the start of the second half, a fired-up Milton defense forced Quincy to punt from deep into its own territory, and Lloyd returned the punt 40 yards for a touchdown. A successful two-point conversion put the Mustangs ahead, 14-8.

In the fourth quarter, the Panthers figured out the Milton's defense and put together a scoring drive. Scott completed passes to Celeste and Wright, with Wright hauling in a 25-yard catch on fourth-and-20.

On fourth-and-inches, Scott scampered 12 yards to the Milton 1 and then scored on a sneak to tie the game at 14. The conversion failed.

Quincy linemen consisted of John Parry, Brendan Cronin, Sal Tortomasi, Steven McCormack and Michael Andrews. Defensively, David Marx, Pat Hamlin, Gary Richards, Wright, Ohlson and Celeste turned in strong games.

Also playing well on defense throughout the season were Danny Sabin, Richard Chan, Derek McFarland, Mike Alessi, Paris Amado, Daron Jones, Jake Klapman, Tim Bryson and Richard Shea.

The coaching staff included John Ford, Chris Mealey, Ken Caldwell and John Fahey.

before making the switch. He is a political science major and hopes to attend law school next year.

"Brendan is a tremendously committed student-athlete," said head coach

Chuck Priore. "He works hard to master the little things. He sets a good example for everyone else. That characteristic helps to make him a great football player, but it will also serve him well in life."

Undefeated 12-Year-Old Travel Team Sweeps Tourney

The Quincy Youth Baseball 12-year-old travel team recently capped off an undefeated season by sweeping the Suburban League's Super 12 tournament.

Quincy (28-0) bested South Weymouth, 5-2, in the final. The Super 12 tournament consisted of the top three teams in each of the league's four divisions.

Quincy also captured the Sandwich Invitational Tournament, winning seven games — four in one day.

And it also won Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament, where tournament honoree Pat White pitched the bottom of the sixth inning in the championship game to secure the win over a feisty Milton National team.

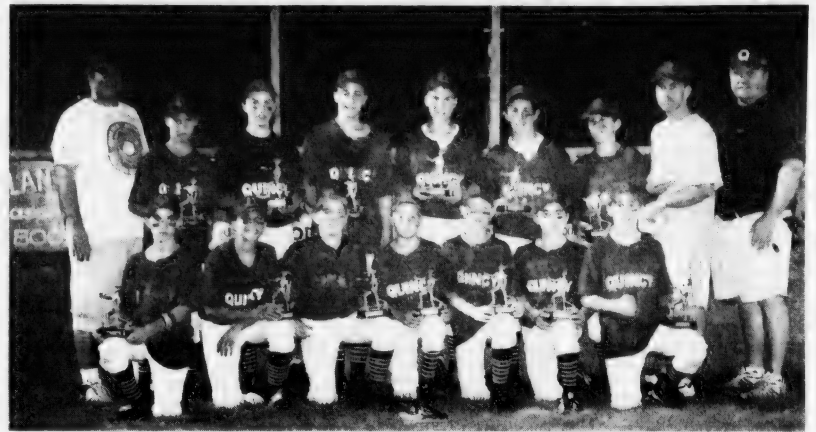

This year's team, according to most pundits, was one of the better groups to represent Quincy and it showed it on the field with dominant pitching, strong hitting and Gold Glove caliber defense. Put the three together and you've got a powerhouse that outscored its opponents 224-38.

Mike Horgan, whose fastball struck out 64 batters in 38 innings, and Mike Lebel, whose off-speed pitches proved too much for opposing batters, anchored the pitching staff that yielded just 97 hits and punched out 185.

Ricky Salvucci, who allowed only three walks in 16 innings, Scott Warwick, Alex Tragellis, Matt Pye and White all took their turns in the rotation.

Offensively, the team sported a .381 batting average with 245 hits and 34 home runs. Joey Vialpando led the assault with 15 home runs, 44 hits, 45 runs scored and 33 RBI. Chris Brown had 44 hits, five home runs and five triples, Salvucci had seven homers and 28 RBI, and Horgan had five round-trippers and 21 RBI.

Complementing the power hitters were eagle-eyed disciplined batsmen Lebel (21 hits, home run), Tragellis (16 walks, six doubles), White (14 hits) and Stearns (13 hits, 14 walks), who legged out a go-ahead inside-the-park home run in Sandwich.

The team proved that defense does indeed win games, frustrating opposing players and coaches with its near flawless play. Outfielders nicknamed "Money" by his teammates for his ability to come through in the clutch, got the job done all summer.

Dave Griffin and Gregg Oulette came up with many big catches in the alleys, while Pye threw out anyone who tested him from center field.

The infield included Horgan and Salvucci at first base, Brown and Stearns at third base, Lebel and

The coaching staff included manager Mark Vialpando, assistant coach Stratton Tragellis and official scorer Paul White.

FAST WORDS

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Decisions involving your finances might seem to be foolproof. But they could have underlying risks you should know about. Don't act on anything until all the facts are in.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're attracted to a situation that appeals to your Bovine intellect. And that's good. But don't neglect your passionate side when romance comes calling later this week.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A recent development enhances that special relationship. Spending more time together also helps make the bonding process stronger. Expect news about a possible career change.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A suspicious situation should be dealt with before it leads to serious problems. Get all the facts needed to resolve it. Then refocus your energies on those tasks that need your attention.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Try to be more open-minded in working toward a resolution of that standoff between yourself and a colleague or family member. A little flexibility now could work to your advantage later.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might feel a bit threatened by a proposed workplace change. The best way to deal with it is to ask questions. You'll find that those involved will be happy to provide you with the facts.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Feeling alone in a crowd during the early part of the week is an unsettling emotion. But your spirits soon perk up, putting you into the right mood to start making holiday plans.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A pesky problem should be dealt with immediately so you can put your time and effort into something more important. Someone from your past could have significant news for you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) High-energy aspects dominate, both on the job and at home. Use this time to put some long-range plans into operation. Things level off later in the week.

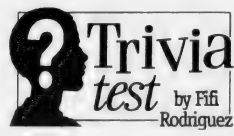

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Even the usually gregarious Goat might feel overwhelmed by a flurry of activities early in the week. Be patient. Things soon return to your normal social routine.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Career choices that seem too confusing to deal with at this point probably are. More information would help complicate them. On the personal side, a friend might need your advice.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your Piscean imagination is stimulated by possibilities you see in a new opportunity. But keep those ideas to yourself until you feel ready to translate them into a workable format.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an ingratiating way of helping people deal with their fears. Have you considered a career in social work or with the clergy?

Bell Rings Again At Houghs Neck Congregational

After a silence of several years, the bell at the Houghs Neck Congregational church on Manet Ave. is ringing once again.

On Sunday, Nov. 2, residents in Houghs Neck heard the bell summon them to church for the first time in more than five years. Rust and neglect had caused the bell to freeze in place.

Martin Gordon, chairman of the Board of Trustees, and his crew, Frank Catrambone, Ralph Jacobs and Rob Gordon, secured an aerial lift to free the bell and performed maintenance on the bell and housing.

The bell, cast by the McShane Bell Foundry in Baltimore, Md., was a gift to the People's Union Church on Bay View Ave., which later became the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, by the friends of Annie I. Acorn in 1913. It was moved to its present location around 1931 when the church on Manet Ave. was constructed.

As in the past, the bell will ring each Sunday morning marking the time to come to the church for the 9:30 a.m. service.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

No funeral director in the country would dispute the right of a family to specify "No visitation" — if that is the way the family desires it. But, if asked, we are sure every funeral director would suggest visitation in most cases.

It has been proved through the years that visitation at the funeral home HELPS the family face the reality of death. It has been proved a family's grief is lessened by the visit of friends who show concern for the family at a time of death. It is only human to want to express feelings. And this applies to most people. It has been proved that shock and surprise, emotional release, loneliness, distress and anxiety are emotional moods that can be HELPED by the appearance of friends. Words are not necessary. Personal appearance is sufficient. Visitation is an act of kindness... These are only a few of the reasons why funeral directors welcome visitation prior to and during a funeral service...

City Council Approves Streets, Sidewalks Fund

ments over the next four years, unless 10 percent of the club's gross revenues exceed that amount.

City officials said Quincy is expected to receive minimum payments of $350,000 next year, $250,000 in 2005, and $350,000 in 2006 and 2007. The home rule petition sets aside 50 percent of the funds generated from Quarry Hills Golf Course and places them in a "Public Works Enhancement Fund." An additional 10 percent of funds generated from Quarry Hills will be used for the purpose of overseeing the operations of the recreational complex.

Largey said he expects an infusion of $200,000 into the fund from Quarry Hills next year.

Peter O'Connell, a developer from Quarry Hills Associates, said he expects the payments to exceed the minimum amount, which means the city could receive more money for the streets and sidewalks fund.

"It is an innovative way for the city to know that there will be a certain amount of money coming in which will be dedicated to the repair of the streets and sidewalks."

said Councillor Frank McCauley.

The council also approved Keenan's amendment compelling the mayor to submit an annual report about design work, street and sidewalk repair and capital equipment expenditures. Also, the amendment asks the mayor to outline anticipated expenditures from the fund for the year.

Keenan said his amendment gives the council some oversight of the mayor's plan.

"The type of equipment needed to perform street and sidewalk work is very expensive," said Keenan. "These types of large purchases should be subject to the review of the city council, just like other expenditures."

DPW Commissioner Jay Fink said funds from the Quarry Hills golf course will go a long way toward upgrading much of the department's antiquated equipment. Fink estimated that the city would spend approximately $1 million to upgrade existing equipment and purchase new equipment.

Joseph McArdle, DPW employee and president of the City of Quincy Laborers Local 1139, praised the mayor's proposal.

"This is long overdue and an opportunity to do something great for the city," he told the council.

An amendment proposed by Council President Dan Raymond earmarking 50 percent of the funds to capital improvements was narrowly defeated, 5-4.

Raymond said the amendment would ensure that funds go to purchasing new equipment and curtailing private contractors, but Fink said the proposal places too many constraints on the mayor. Fink said a "significant amount" of the funds would be spent initially to upgrade equipment.

McArdle supported earmarking a certain amount of funds for the purchase of new equipment.

"The material and manpower doesn't mean anything without the equipment," he said.

Largey took issue with Raymond's amendment, saying the mayor and DPW commissioner should determine the needs of the department.

But Councillor Joe Finn said the department has spent too much money on private contractors for roadwork. Earmarking funds for a specific purpose is within the council's authority, he said.

"Let's face facts, for too long we have gone the route of outsourcing," said Finn. "This vote says we can turn that around. It has nothing to do with a lack of faith in the mayor."

Raymond submitted another amendment seeking to set aside 25 percent of the Quarry Hills funds for open space, but that was soundly defeated.

"I didn't think it was necessary, since the hotel/motel tax is building up, and we just passed the mayor's bond issue," said Councillor Frank McCauley, who voted against it.

Increase 'Sends Wrong Message,' Mayor Says

Phelan: Keep Tax Classification At 169%

Mayor William Phelan is urging the city council to keep the city's tax classification for Fiscal 2004 at 169 percent.

Increasing the tax burden on businesses "sends the wrong message," he told The Sun.

"We have seen a steep decline in revenue coming from commercial businesses," said Phelan. "At a time when we are encouraging businesses to come to Quincy, I believe increasing the tax burden on them sends the wrong message."

By keeping the tax classification at the status quo the city may attract more businesses to the area, he said. This, in turn, would keep residential taxes lower because commercial tax revenues would pick up a bigger piece of the pie, he said.

The city council will hold a public hearing on the matter Monday, Dec. 1 at 6:30 p.m. to listen to the pros and cons of the tax classification for Fiscal 2004.

Classification is the percentage of the tax rate paid by business and industry compared to 100 percent of true valuation by residential owners.

State law allows the city to tax commercial property at 175 percent or residences, but most cities and towns choose not to tax business at the full rate.

UMass Report Prompts Move For Public Hearings City Council Seeks Answers On High Hunger Rate Here

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The city council will hold public hearings on the issue of high hunger rates in the city after UMass-Boston recently released an eye-opening study on issue.

The newly released report documented high hunger rates in the Germantown area, and has prompted the city council to hold hearings on the issue and seek ways to alleviate the problem.

At Monday night's council meeting, Councillor Joseph Finn introduced a resolution urging the council to hold hearings and seek input from the city's various food providers. The council responded by giving its stamp of approval, 9-0.

The report, released by the Center for Survey Research at the University of Massachusetts-Boston, cited the Germantown section of Quincy as having a high hunger rate.

The study was sponsored by Project Bread, the state's largest anti-hunger organization.

At press time, Finn said he did not have a specific date for the first hearing, but he would be pushing for a date in early December.

Finn said the hearings will be designed to raise awareness about the problem and to inform people of the efforts being put forth by local organizations.

"I think it is important to know what resources are out there helping people," said Finn. "This is the time of year most people think of these problems. In addition, it will show people what they can do to help others in a time of need."

Organizations such as the Germantown Neighborhood Center and Interfaith Social Services will be asked to participate in the hearings, he said. Finn is encouraging all non-profit organizations in the city to contact him regarding the upcoming hearings.

According to the report, the Germantown neighborhood had more than one household in four below the federal poverty level of $18,400 a year income for a family of four.

Although the report singles out Germantown, Finn said he wants to approach issue from a citywide standpoint.

"Poverty is a very serious and comprehensive problem, whether it involves fuel assistance, job referral services, or health and housing assistance," said Finn. "I think the various agencies throughout the city can contribute to raising awareness about the problem and provide much-needed information to the residents about poverty."

Finn said the hearings may also help to reveal the difficult plight of food pantries and other non-profit organizations.

"This would be a good time to help build up some of their resources," said Finn. "Many of these organizations are struggling to meet their food demands and operational costs."

Nominations Open For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Nominations are now open for The Quincy Sun's 19th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, the late Paul

Harold was honored posthumously for dedicating his life, public service and talents to serving his community with integrity and the highest principles while putting people first.

Harold was selected from among 24 nominees submitted by Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final decision.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on Page 19 of this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

After nominations close Wednesday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN (left) marks the arrival of a refurbished ambulance that was recently donated to the city's Emergency Management Agency. Donation From Rotary Club, Fallon Ambulance Emergency Management Agency Receives Ambulance

A refurbished ambulance was recently donated to the Emergency Management Dept. from the Quincy Rotary Club and Fallon Ambulance.

The ambulance - restored by the Rotary Club and Fallon - will be used by the department in both emergency and non-emergency situations.

"This new vehicle will serve as a primary command post for the Quincy Emergency Management Agency," said Tom Gorman, the department's executive director. "Most of the training and grants administered by the federal government come through the local emergency management agencies. Our role is to assist the city in obtaining resources in the event of a natural disaster or other event."

Mayor William Phelan praised the organizations for aiding the city.

"Due to their assistance, our Emergency Management department will now have a mobile command unit that will assist the people of Quincy in times of great need," he said.

The donation is part of a national effort to commemorate the upcoming 100th anniversary of the Rotary, an organization of business and professional leaders united worldwide who provide humanitarian service, encourage high ethical standards and help build goodwill and peace in the world.

As the anniversary approaches, chapters throughout the United States are performing a variety of good deeds to assist in the celebration.

Gorman said the vehicle would be used in the event of an emergency or loss of power, such as a hurricane. The ambulance could deliver supplies to residents and individuals as needed, he said.

"In these tough economic times, under other circumstances the city would need to go out and purchase a vehicle that can do all of what this one can," said Gorman. "With budget cutbacks, it's not likely that this would have happened - we are grateful to Fallon Ambulance and the Quincy Rotary Club for their efforts in making this happen."

In non-emergency settings, the vehicle will be used in city events, such as the Christmas Parade and Flag Day Parade. The ambulance will be equipped with life-saving equipment and radios, he said.

Peter Racicot, vice president of Business Development at Fallon Ambulance Service, also serves as president of the Quincy Rotary.

"Fallon has long had a history of donating retired ambulances for a good cause, and the Rotary's record of service to communities is something we can all look to with pride," said Racicot.

Phelan Seeks To Boost Reserves

Council Denies $525,000 Infusion To Stabilization Fund

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The city council Monday night denied Mayor William Phelan's request to boost the city's stabilization fund by $525,000.

Auditor Richard Fitzpatrick told the council that the city has produced a surplus of $525,000 in revenues for Fiscal 2004. Much of the increase can be attributed to local receipts, including the water/sewer revenues, he said.

Phelan wanted to use the surplus to increase the city's stabilization fund.

But the council shot down Phelan's request on a 7-2 vote, with most saying they wanted a clearer view of the city's revenue picture, especially with regard to local receipts.

The stabilization fund, also called the reserve fund or "rainy day fund," is established for the purposes of protecting the city's finances in cases of economic emergencies or unforeseen circumstances.

Based on estimates thus far, Fitzpatrick said local receipts from the sewer/water bills are expected to increase by nearly $2 million over fiscal 2003.

But some councillors indicated they wanted to hold off on Phelan's request until they see more proof that local receipts are coming in as advertised.

Councillor John Keenan called it "premature" to assume revenues will come in at such a clip.

"It may be wise to wait a little longer and see what we get from the sewer/water receipts," said Keenan. "I'm a little concerned right now."

Councillor Frank McCauley said the administration has "blown up the estimated receipts."

"It makes more sense to see what we get and build the reserves toward the end of the fiscal year," he said. "It's a stretch right now, as far as I'm concerned."

McCauley also said the excess levy capacity would ultimately help taxpayers.

"The council is forcing the mayor to be more conservative. It's not going to cripple the city - it will do something for the taxpayers," he said.

But Thomas Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, said the administration "has some confidence" in the estimates for local receipts for Fiscal 2004.

He urged councillors to approve the request, saying the city's reserve fund is much too low. In addition, money placed into the stabilization fund would not be readily spent because a two-thirds majority from the council is needed to approve any appropriation, said Largey.

Fitzpatrick said boosting the fund only helps the city as it navigates through tough financial times.

"It demonstrates that you have been able to tuck money away," he said. "If something should come up, like a cut in state aid, you have a source of revenue along the way."

TOYS FOR TOTS - Members of the U.S. Marine Corps mark the upcoming holiday season and Toys For Tots drive with a visit to Mayor William Phelan's office Monday. JFK: The Secret Service And Nagging Questions

It will be 40 years ago Saturday that the world shocking shots rang out in Dallas.

And for those 40 years — and three years before that something has bothered me. Something about the Secret Service.

On this 40th anniversary of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy Nov. 22, 1963, my thoughts again go back to his election and the night of Nov. 10, 1960.

It was a night in many ways to fondly remember. But a night that also still bothers me.

It bothered me as I stood there in the living room of former Ambassador Joseph Kennedy's home in the Kennedy compound in Hyannis Port waiting for the President-elect.

Where were the Secret Servicemen I wondered? I wasn't supposed to be there. But no one had checked on me.

I was a reporter. But I could have been a Lee Harvey Oswald standing there waiting for Kennedy with a gun in my pocket.

The word was that 18 Secret Service agents had been assigned to protect the next President of the United States. And that they had moved in swiftly after Richard Nixon finally conceded in the see-saw election.

But if they were around his father's house — inside or outside — that night, they weren't to be seen. And they weren't checking on anyone.

I've written this account before. But now, on the 40th anniversary of that fateful Friday in Dallas, I think that night is worth another look.

Let me go back to Nov. 10, 1960 and maybe you, too, might wonder more about Nov. 22, 1963.

Earlier that day, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, at 48 the 35th and youngest President ever elected, had held a press conference at the National Guard Armory in Hyannis which had served as the press headquarters during the election.

The headlines kept coming:

"Hoover, Dulles To Stay"

"Ike Asks JFK Meet Him Soon On Takeover"

"Kennedy Says Election Repudiates No One."

The Kennedy clan was there as the President-elect made a short victory statement. Standing at his side was Jacqueline, 31, radiant and expecting their second child in a few weeks.

On the rostrum were his parents, Joseph and Rose Kennedy; his brother, Bobby, with Ethel, Ted, sisters Eunice Shriver, Jean Smith, Pat Lawford. And somewhere in the background reportedly, brother-in-law Peter Lawford.

In what sounded like a little preview of his inaugural address theme, Kennedy said:

"The election may have been a close one. But I think that there is general agreement by all of our citizens that the supreme national effort will be needed in the years ahead to move this country safely through the 1960s. 'Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country.'"

Kennedy thanked "all those who worked so long and so hard in this campaign."

I was replaying that scene in my mind as I stood there in Joseph Kennedy's living room that night waiting for PRESIDENT-ELECT John F. Kennedy and Quincy Sun publisher Henry Bosworth chat at Barnstable Airport Nov. 11, 1960 after Kennedy's election and "a night to remember." Behind them are Kenneth O'Donnell, Kennedy aide, and his press secretary, Pierre Salinger.

JFK to appear. Waiting with me were other newsmen.

But at least three of us weren't supposed to be there. The invitation to the compound party had been extended to members of the press that had traveled with Kennedy throughout the campaign. Not to the local press.

I was covering the election for the Boston Traveler and Dave Farrell for the Boston Herald. Traveler photographer Frank Kelly of Wollaston was taking photos for both papers.

The three of us agreed that this was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity and we weren't going to miss it. So we decided to crash the party.

The bus to take the invited press to the Kennedy compound was parked outside the Hyannis Armory. The three of us had press credentials but only for the armory for the actual election coverage.

After getting a bite to eat, we walked up the street and stepped aboard the bus. No one questioned us. No one asked us for identification. Others got on and the bus drove off to the compound. We entered Joseph Kennedy's house. No one checked us.

None of the Kennedys were in sight when we arrived so we started browsing around the living room. On the wall were framed letters written by President Franklin D. Roosevelt to Joseph Kennedy, who had served as his ambassador to England.

On the fireplace mantle was a model of the USS Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr., the destroyer named after the oldest son whose planned political career went down with him in flames in a World War II mission plane explosion.

The dining room connected with the living room. On the dining room table was a punch bowl and cups. Someone told us to help ourselves. So we did.

We then headed back into the living room. I didn't care too much for the punch and was returning my cup to the dining room table when a screen door leading into the room swung open and in stepped John F. Kennedy.

He walked over to me and we shook hands. "Congratulations, Mr. President," I said. It wasn't correct protocol. He was still Senator Kennedy. But he seemed to enjoy being called "Mr. President" and smiled.

We were alone in the room for a few moments. The other newsmen then spotted him and we were quickly surrounded.

Close-up, Kennedy looked tired. His eyes were bloodshot red apparently from a sleepless night and the agonizing final hours of the election, which could have gone either way.

A reporter asked him what he thought made the final difference in the election.

"He (Nixon) stayed around too long in the South," Kennedy replied. (Stayed wasn't the exact word he used.)

Soon other members of the Kennedy family appeared: Jacqueline, beautiful and pregnant with John, Jr.; Rose Kennedy, looking as trim as the Kennedy sisters; Bob and Ted Kennedy, brother-in-law Sargent Shriver. But Joseph Kennedy did not join them.

JFK revealed he was flying to Palm Springs, Fla., the next morning. He said he planned to relax and "maybe play a little golf."

"But don't mention the golf," he laughed. He didn't want the country to think it was getting another golfer right after Dwight Eisenhower, a golfer.

Although I wasn't supposed to be there, I guess I didn't look out of place. Rose Kennedy and I struck up a conversation and when she heard I was from Quincy, she wanted to know all about Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and Abigail also.

I told her as much as I could and said when I got back home I would ask Quincy's historian, William C. Edwards, to send her more information. (Which he did.)

Later someone reached under a kitchen cabinet and came up with Christmas gift-wrapped bottles of bourbon, scotch and whiskey. And then a sight you could never forget: the next President of the United States pouring drinks and carrying ice cubes for the press.

It was a night to cherish and remember but also to wonder.

The following morning the Kennedys gathered at the Barnstable airport in Hyannis to board the family plane "Caroline" for the flight to Palm Springs.

Joseph Kennedy was there. And I remember seeing Caroline, not then quite three, and looking like a little Shirley Temple.

I got one more chance briefly to talk to the President-elect before the plane took off. Pierre Salinger, his press secretary, and Kenneth O'Donnell, his top aide, were standing behind us as we chatted.

"Good luck, Mr. President," I said to him again in farewell as we shook hands. "Thank you," he said, breaking into a wide grin being called Mr. President for the second time.

After the plane was airborne, I told Farrell and Kelly that I someday would write about how we crashed the Kennedy compound. But I would wait until Kennedy was out of office to honor the fact the party that night was "off the record."

I figured that would be eight years. I thought for sure Kennedy would be re-elected to a second term. And, of course, being so young he would be a world famed figure for many years and sought after for his comments and opinions on issues.

Ironically, I said to Farrell and Kelly:

"And do you know what I'm going to write after he leaves office? I'm going to tell how we got by the Secret Service that night. I'm going to tell how I could have assassinated John F. Kennedy over the punch bowl in his father's house."

Painful words, now.

But who could have even imagined back then what was going to actually happen just three years later!

I still wonder about the Secret Servicemen that night in Hyannis Port. And still wonder about them that day in Dallas.

Twenty years later I had another occasion with Secret Service agents. It was 1980 when Senator Edward Kennedy was campaigning for the Presidency against sitting President Jimmy Carter.

Kennedy decided to visit The Sun office as he had done several times before.

But now he was running for President and Secret Service agents were assigned to him. A couple came by to check out the office before Kennedy's arrival. They especially noted the stairway to the production department and rear exit. And they even poked through desk and cabinet drawers. They were joined by other agents who arrived with Kennedy.

And all kept a watchful eye on Kennedy and the staff and anyone who came into the office while he was here. This time they were certainly doing their job.

But I still feel they weren't doing it in Hyannis Port. Were they doing it in Dallas? Could it have been a different Nov. 22, 1963?

Those questions have nagged me for 40 years.

Scenes From Yesterday

Wellington, Mass.

THIS IS A 1912 postcard view of the old Wollaston School on the corner of Winthrop Avenue and Beale Street. The small building with the cupola in the foreground was the original build built in 1873. The larger wings were added in 1890. This school was demolished in 1912 when a new brick school building opened across the street. This site is now known as Safford Park.

Suggests Moving Granite Ball To New Recreation Area At Merrymount Park

(A copy of the following letter to Mayor William Phelan was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

Your honor, I have been following with a great deal of interest the development of the new recreation area at Merrymount Park.

Its completion should provide a beautiful surrounding for relaxation and enjoyment.

The planned fountain will provide a great meeting place.

I would like to make a suggestion to add to the plans for the park and at the same time address another subject that affects the entire populace of the city.

Much attention has been given recently about the beautiful granite sphere that now rests at the rotary at the foot of the Fore River bridge where it is unapproachable and unappreciated.

Why not move it to a location within the new park where it can be viewed as it was originally intended and be easily accessible to the general public.

After all, it was a great gift to the city by the granite workers as a memorial of part of Quincy's historic past for everyone to enjoy.

Respectfully yours,
James F. Rooney

City Manager Says Quincy Failed Plan E

"Plan E did not fail Quincy," City Manager Donald H. Blatt told the Women's Republican Club. "Quincy failed Plan E. I hope that the people of Quincy rally and bring back plan E for the benefit of our children."

This Week
48 Years Ago

Blatt attributed the defeat for the city manager-council form of government in the Nov. 8 election to certain antagonisms that have been built up over the past six years and skillfully used by the politicians.

Any city manager will build those antagonisms, he said, "because he must say, 'No,' where nobody has said 'No,' before and he must offend people who, for various reasons, have not been offended before."

Meanwhile, Rep. Clifton H. Baker proposed amendments to the city's new Plan A charter that would restore the ward councillor system and set the salaries of the mayor at $8,000 and the city councillors at $1,000 each per year.

And George A. Yarrington, head of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, said he plans to file a bill that would permit the Plan A charter to operate like Plan E with an executive director appointed to assist the mayor.

NEW PLANNING DIRECTOR

Regis J. Harrington of Hingham, a planner in the state Department of Commerce, was named Quincy planning director, succeeding William G. Farrar, the city's first full-time planning director who resigned a year ago.

City manager Blatt said Harrington would start work Dec. 26 with a salary based on $5,700 a year the first week (the same as Farrar) and the newly authorized rate of $7,000 a year after Jan. 1.

City Councillor Carl W. Anderson, a staunch opponent of the city manager and the Plan E form of government, said he was of the opinion that Blatt "can expect trouble" over the $1,300 a year raise.

HOUSES MOVED

Public Works Commissioner Charles R. Hebert issued permits for the use of city streets to move two buildings in West Quincy to make way for construction of the Southeast Expressway.

Augustino Volpini was authorized to move his house from 33 Willard St. to a site on Furnace Brook Parkway next to the library. John Meenan of Dorchester was permitted to move a building from Willard St. to Bunker Hill Lane.

AUSTIN GAINS

With four wards and five precincts in Ward 5 complete, City Councillor Edna B. Austin increased her lead to 165 votes over David J. Crowley in a recent recount. Austin had defeated Crowley by 93 votes in the first count of the Nov. 8 election.

Upset Over Lack Of Kids Voting At Atlantic School

I am a resident of Ward 6, Precinct 4 (Atlantic Middle School) and am really ticked off that no Kids Voting was available because, according to the staff, no one showed up to hold the Kids Voting.

I had to force my son, a 7th grader, to view the candidates, their positions and make decisions about his vote prior to going to the polls.

My son did not want to participate this year because he is old enough now to realize that "my vote doesn't really count" (in the general election). I tried to explain to him that his vote does count in that the candidates look at how the kids vote and take that seriously for the future. I told him that it's important to vote, and we have the right in this country, unlike some other countries, and that he will learn about the voting process. I made him study and decide on whom he would vote for.

I made him go through all of this because I thought it was important and the person(s) responsible for the Kids Voting at Atlantic Middle School did not show up.

How ironic, discourteous and disgraceful is that? Guess what his reaction will be to Kids Voting next year?

Support The Nation's Hospice Workers

On behalf of The Deware Funeral Home and all our Affiliated Dignity Memorial funeral and cremation service providers nationwide, I wish to recognize the 25th anniversary of National Hospice Month and the extraordinary contributions of hospice professionals.

At the Deware Funeral Home we respect the quality care and compassionate assistance that you provide, which is a source of spiritual and emotional strength to the patients and families you serve.

The Deware Funeral Home and Dignity Memorial supports the nation's hospice workers, who were justly recognized in a recent proclaimed by President George W. Bush: "Caring for a terminally ill patient can be emotionally painful, physically exhausting and financially difficult. I call on all Americans to honor the professionals and volunteers who dedicate their lives to aiding the terminally ill through hospice."

As our country celebrates Thanksgiving with thoughts of gratitude, we know that millions of families will reflect on the contributions made by hospice caregivers. Thank you for doing so much to better the lives of so many.

By WANDA JACOBS

Drum stick to drum stick, musical groups of college-aged students, showed off their hard work and talent in Eastern Nazarene College's "Battle of the Bands," organized by the Student Government Association.

Held recently in the Mann Student Auditorium center, the atmosphere was that of a light-hearted musical showdown.

Students cheered their peers on and chanted to the familiar songs. A few of the bands performed original compositions, created by band members.

In order to keep the audience alert and ready for each act, student organizers held audience responsive games, such as "Name that tune." Winners received a CD. Higher in numbers than expected, the outcome was a pleasant surprise to new students and other attendants.

The crowd's enthusiasm also was a bonus.

"Loud crowds and bands are why I don't always attend these kinds of things, but I enjoyed the crowd pleasing antics and the guys with the guitars," laughed ENC student Lissa M. Tovar.

The instruments were in wide variety such as guitars, hand drums, spin tables and a xylophone. All were used with skill to charm the audience. Drums kept the beat and the audience clapped along to the rhythm.

A little different, the band Ca$ (cash) dressed mainly in black, stirred the crowd up with their foot-stomping country music, influenced by the late Johnny Cash.

Using rap in a style of their own was the winning group called "The Band," a group made up of five guys with soulful voices. Fast pace and booming, the music was a hit with the students. Lyric after lyric, beat after beat, the band continued their self-produced music until the clapping drained away the last notes.

The band members and the instruments they played were: Kyle Sousa, guitar; Sam Durat, bass guitar; Dave Thomas, drums; Jude Chery, keyboard; and Jackson Francois, vocals.

"We're always jamming," said Jackson, referring to another rap band that he and Chery play in outside of school. Most members of the winning band have been playing for a long time. Jude is skilled with multiple instruments and has played since age of five. Sousa has been playing multiple instruments since high school as well.

"He's really good," said Jackson of Sousa.

The band creates all the original pieces its members perform. Were they surprised or confident of winning?

"A little of both," they said. "There were two groups that had us a little shaky, but overall (we were) confident."

They said they felt it was a "really fun experience" performing and listening to others perform. The Band concluded that "every group did really well."

With music there also comes a message.

By influence and an unspoken message, the winning band hopes to "touch people, show them that Gospel can be used to glorify God in any form." Although the prize was cash, the rewards and benefits for all were much greater.

Annual Marie Curry Walk Raises Record $157,000

The sixth annual Marie Curry walk turned out to be the best of all, raising a record-breaking more than $157,000 for the fight against breast cancer.

The total topped last year's previous high by $27,000.

The event benefits the Marie A. Curry Fund, which provides screening and diagnostic mammography and breast care services at Quincy Medical Center (QMC) for women without adequate health coverage.

"The outstanding success of this year's Marie Curry Walk would not have been possible without the strong support of the business and civic community," said Christine Schuster, president and CEO of QMC.

More than 110 businesses, civic organizations and individuals served as sponsors of the sixth annual CHRISTINE SCHUSTER walk, including South Shore Savings Bank and Medical Contracting Services, Inc., each of which donated $10,000.

In addition to the four-mile walk, largely along Quincy Shore Drive, participants enjoyed a day of festivities at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

The family day included pre-walk aerobics, breakfast donated by Dunkin' Donuts, lunch donated by Outback Steakhouse, music by DJ Suzie Cue, and the National Anthem sung by State Trooper Sgt. Daniel Clark.

A highlight of the day was an interfaith "sunrise" service and the second annual "Images of Honor and Memory" visual tribute.

During the tribute, a path of pink and white sand-filled containers filled the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater. More than 500 contained, each inscribed with the name of a person being remembered, represented the impact cancer has had on South Shore families.

Donations to the Marie A. Curry Fund can be sent to the Quincy Medical Center Foundation, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy, MA 02169.

For more information about the Fun, call the outreach services department at Quincy Medical Center, 617-376-5349.

Library Cookbook Features Wide Variety of Recipes

Searching for new cooking ideas or ways to spruce up the holidays?

With the help of local restaurants, authors and librarians, the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library has produced a 98-page cookbook filled with a wide variety of recipes ranging from traditional dishes and breads to salads and tasty treats.

Titled, "Reader's Choice: A Booklover's Collection of Fine Recipes," the cookbook was put together by the Friends' cookbook committee. They are: Chairwoman Janet DiPaolo, Ina Cutler, Marnie Dunn, Kathy Meade, Linda Monaco, Mary Quinn and Nadine Steffan.

"This is the best time of the year for this type of cookbook, with the cooking for the holidays," said Dunn. "And it's a great gift and a good way to show support for the library."

The publication was sponsored by The Bank of Canton, The Colonial Federal Savings Bank and the Quincy Municipal Credit Union.

Dunn said the idea was born by Thomas Crane librarians, who decided to put together their own collection of recipes. After the Friends discovered the idea, they decided to create a recipe book for purchase that would serve as a library fundraising opportunity. The librarians' recipes were used as the core of the cookbook, she said.

Committee members invited local residents, authors and restaurants, as well as members of the Library Board of Trustees, to contribute their ideas to the book.

The cookbook features a wide selection of recipes on appetizers, beverages, soups & salads, vegetables, side dishes, breads and desserts.

Sandra McCauley, chairwoman of the Board of Trustees and wife of Councillor Frank McCauley, contributed a few dishes, including Lobster Bisque featured on page 10. Tracey Phelan, wife of Mayor William Phelan, also supplied some ideas, including a recipe for Sesame Chicken with Ginger Salad on page 31.

The book also contains contributions from a number of local restaurants, including The Common Market Restaurant, Raffael's, Alfredo's Restaurant, Montillio's Baking Co., and Ginger Betty's Bakery.

Cost is $10 each or two for $15. Cookbooks can be purchased at all branches of the Thomas Crane Library, Abigail's Crossing at 1360 Hancock St., or Roseann's at 1091 Hancock St. To purchase by mail, call 617-376-1312. All proceeds go to benefit the library.

Finn Named Executive Director Mass. Housing, Shelter Alliance

Councillor Joseph Finn has been appointed executive director of the Massachusetts Housing and Shelter Alliance (MHSA), a statewide advocacy group consisting of 86 organizations serving the homeless in the Commonwealth.

Finn, recently re-elected to the city council, was the executive director of well-known homeless service organizations in Greater Boston such as Shelter, Inc. and Quincy Interfaith Shelter Coalition and its shelter program, Father Bill's Place.

He has been an active member of MHSA and its board of directors for more than a decade, serving as chair from 1995 to 1999.

Since 1988, MHSA has led federal, state and local public policy and program initiatives that have created new resources to end homelessness.

"I am thrilled to have the opportunity to lead MHSA at such an exciting time," said Finn. "The federal government is calling on state and local government to engage in new strategies to end homelessness through planning and the development of new housing models. I look forward to helping MHSA members participate in these strategies and advocate for the resources to do so."

Finn is a graduate of Siena College and has also earned a Master of Arts de-

Morrissey Bill Would Protect Senior Assets

Sen. Michael Morrissey has filed an amendment to repeal a new law that makes it more difficult for seniors to protect their assets when they enter a nursing home.

"They new law... gives the Division of Medical Assistance (DMA) greater powers to claim the assets of surviving spouses," said Morrissey.

The new law was proposed by Gov. Mitt Romney and passed as part of the state budget for Fiscal 2004.

It allows the DMA to make claims against all the assets that a deceased Mass Health recipient had at the time of death, including the primary residence of the surviving non-debtor spouse.

The primary residence of a surviving spouses has historically been protected from any creditor with a claim against the deceased spouse.

"The new law essentially wiped out long-accepted financial planning tools available to middle class elders," said Morrissey.

His repeal proposal is part of a supplemental budget passed by the Senate.

Body Shop Used Car License Revoked After 25 Years

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

After more than 25 years in business, the License Board revoked the Motor II License held by Al Lebrun, owner of Carl's Auto Body Shop, 65 Holbrook Rd. due to the failure to renew the used car license. The vote was unanimous.

The motion, made by Fire Chief Paul O'Connell followed a discussion regarding complaints from neighbors and a petition by the Montclair, Wollaston Association citing grievances.

O'Connell showed a picture depicting congestion and called it a "hindrance and restriction" for fire apparatus to enter if needed.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the board had sent numerous correspondence regarding the license fee and also a certified letter signed by Lebrun.

Walter White, director of inspection services said he had revisited the site this week and noted cars parked in front and back of the shop and parts piled up against the dumpster as well as a boat.

He called the area a "very dangerous situation in case of a fire" and equated it with the recent fire in Rhode Island commenting that it shows you how fast "fire can jump from one place to another causing a danger to neighbors."

Although his attorney Ray Jennings told the board that it was an "oversight" that Lebrun didn't pay the fee for the license and said he was "sorry for the lapse." He added, "to deny the license for the oversight is a "bit harsh".

He added that Lebrun had sent someone down to pay the fee, but encountered long lines and didn't wait.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the problem had gone back and forth for some time and that he "certainly could have found us as he did on election day when he asked to be on the agenda." Shea said he called it a "little insulting" to say that the line was too long to wait.

Police Chief William Falco read a letter from 1998 which he said had "endless complaints" and said he would vote against the renewal of the license.

Lebrun will still be allowed to repair cars, but cannot sell used cars. Shea urged Lebrun to seek a higher venue.

Ward 6 City Council Seat Recount

A recount of the close Ward 6 city election between Alicia Gardner and Brian McNamee was scheduled to start Wednesday at 11 a.m. in the second floor conference room at City Hall.

This week's Quincy Sun had gone to press before the start.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said he expected to have the recount completed that day.

Gardner won the open Ward 6 seat by 26 votes in the Nov. 4 city election. The seat is being vacated by incumbent Joseph Newton.

McNamee filed for the recount because he said his volunteers wanted him to do so.

"My volunteers think there is something left on the table," McNamee said. "Many of them spent a lot of time and energy on my campaigned and in all fairness to their efforts, I think they deserve it (the recount)."

Gardner also filed after McNamee did to "protect my interests."

Gardner's vote in the election was 1,740 to McNamee's 1,714. There were also 143 blanks cast.

McNamee acknowledged that the blanks were also a factor in his decision to seek the recount.

The Ward 6 recount is the first since the famed mayoral recount in the 2001 election.

The results that election night showed challenger William Phelan in a 15-vote upset win over six-term incumbent James Sheets.

Sheets filed for a recount which gave Phelan two more votes and a 17-vote victory in the closest mayoral election in the city's history.

Quincy Clients Face Difficulties As Local Welfare Office Closes

The financially strapped state tightened its belt a little more at Quincy's expense Friday.

The welfare office at 1515 Hancock St., Quincy Center, was closed, leaving 3,600 clients a year to make new connections and wonder what is next for the city.

Welfare cases from Quincy were being sent to an office at 1010 Massachusetts Ave., Dorchester, but there were hints that the Department of Transitional Assistance may retain a "limited presence" in Quincy.

But what that "limited presence" would entail was vague.

"We're negotiating with the DTA right now to assure they will maintain a presence in the city," said Beth Ann Strollo, executive director of Quincy Community Action Programs.

"But it's not going to be anything remotely like it has been. We've worked with them almost from the day we started in 1965. It's been a close relationship, particularly in child care."

Strollo said getting to the new office in Boston is going to be difficult from many Quincy clients.

"It's no big deal to you and me," she said, "but if you have a debilitating illness or a couple of kids in tow, getting on the T and transferring to buses can be difficult."

Linda Strice of the Mayor's Office of Constituent Services said her department deals with the welfare clients almost daily, especially the homeless.

"During the 2001-02 school year," she said, "we had 144 homeless kids in Quincy schools. Many of the families looked to the office for shelter."

"It used to involve a personal visit to the office to meet a caring caseworker who knew the sources of help to keep the kids in school. Now the family is expected to go to Dorchester among Boston clients.

"They expect to do a lot of business over the phone but they can't. The logistics of getting kids to Boston for interviews is difficult when you have no car. It just adds to the stress."

Closing the Quincy office is part of a plan by Gov. Mitt Romney to save $3 million in the Office of Human Services. Rent for the Quincy office was $360,000 a year.

There were no layoffs among the 56 staffers who worked in Quincy. Three retired, including manager Jim McCarthy of Hanson, and 53 were transferred to other offices.

Public Hearing Nov. 24 On Proposed Mooring Fees

It may cost a little more money to moor your boat in Quincy, under a proposal introduced by Mayor William Phelan's administration.

On Nov. 24 at 6 p.m., the city council will hold a public hearing regarding changes to the city's boating regulations that would include fees for mooring boats along the city's coastline.

Quincy and Boston are among the only coastal communities in Massachusetts that don't charge mooring fees.

According to the proposed regulations, annual mooring fees would be $2 per foot for boats longer than 17 feet owned by Quincy residents, and $4 per foot for non-Quincy residents.

Boaters who fail to obtain a mooring permit would be hit with a $50 fine per offense. Each day that a violation continues shall be deemed a separate offense. Boaters who use a fraudulent, stolen or transferred permit would be hit with a $300 fine each day that the offense occurs.

A vessel located in Quincy waters for at least 14 days is considered moored, under the proposal.

Harbormaster Andrew Ayer said approximately 1,500 boats are docked annually in Quincy waters.

Thomas Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, said the city stands to gain approximately $150,000 in additional revenue if the mooring fees are instituted.

The council's ordinance committee postponed taking action on the matter Monday night after some councillors expressed the need for a public hearing.

Council President Dan Raymondi said the council shouldn't act on the proposal until it has heard from boat owners, yacht club officials and other interested parties.

The city wants to give notice of the new fees along with boat excise bills within a month.

C Of C To Hold 'Business After Hours' Session Tonight

Those attending can talk business with South Shore business leaders or football with former Patriots defensive back Tim Fox.

A new Nokia 6200 GSM World Phone and a full year of wireless service from Cingular Wireless, valued at $700, will be given away.

The Chamber will also hold a holiday food and wine tasting Monday, Dec. 8, from 5:30 to 8 p.m. at Lombardo's in Randolph.

Home Prices Rise For 41st Straight Quarter

Sales Of Single-Family Homes Sizzled In Summer

Sales of single-family homes sizzled this summer across the Bay State.

Rising mortgage rates early in the third quarter, along with an improved housing supply and strengthening in the financial markets, drew a record number of buyers into the market from July to September, according to a report by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MAR).

The surge in sales activity kept pressure on home prices, which rose for a 41st consecutive quarter, but the rate of appreciation continued to moderate, an indication that growing inventory is contributing to a more balanced market.

The MAR data shows sales of detached single-family homes rose 16.1 percent in the third quarter compared to the same period last year, climbing from 13,263 units in the third quarter of 2002 to 15,402 in the comparable quarter this year.

In addition, condominium sales rose 30.8 percent this past summer, increasing from 4,194 units in the third quarter a year ago to 5,486 in the same three-month period this year.

The total of 20,888 detached homes and condos sold in the 2003 third quarter sets a new state record for most single-family homes sold in any one July-September period.

During the second quarter, sales of detached single-family homes rose in every region of the state, with year-to-year sales growth of 9 to 11 percent in the Cape Cod and islands, southeast and west regions; 13 to 15 percent in greater Boston and Worcester County; and 23 to 24 percent in the northeast and South Shore regions.

Condominium sales increased in all seven regions as well, with sales gains of 30 percent or more occurring in the central, greater Boston and South Shore regions.

tion, southeast and west regions. Elsewhere, sales improved 15 percent on the Cape and islands, 17 percent on the South Shore and 24 percent in the northeast.

The increase in detached single-family home sales across the state is the first in three quarters, following sales declines of 10.6 percent and 4.9 percent in the first and second quarters of 2003, respectively.

Meanwhile, condo sales have risen for two consecutive quarters. Sales were flat in the first quarter, but then rose 6.5 percent in the second quarter.

The recent jump in interest rates is the first quarter-to-quarter rise in over two years (dating back to the second quarter of 2001), with the rate on a 30-year fixed mortgage climbing more than a half point between the spring and summer quarters, from an average of 5.69 percent in the second quarter to 6.27 percent in the third quarter.

While sales activity is likely to slow a bit during the final quarter of the year due to the seasonal nature of New England's housing market, current demographic and social trends should keep buyer demand strong, according to MAR President Peter Casey. Additionally, with the events of Sept. 11, 2001 and the losses on Wall Street fresh in consumers' minds, many people just want a safe place to retreat to, so more and more are investing in a first or second home, said Casey.

A larger selection of homes to choose from also is helping to entice buyers into the market. The number of single-family listings (detached homes and condos) available across the state has increased 20.4 percent over the past year, from a monthly average of 33,412 units in the third quarter to 40,220 in the same quarter this year.

In spite of this large increase in homes for sale, a similarly sharp increase in unit sales has kept the number of months supply relatively consistent as there was 5.8 months of supply in the third quarter of 2003 vs. 5.7 months of supply last summer.

As inventory levels continue to strengthen, supply and demand have become more balanced and that's led to more modest home price appreciation during the past year. In the detached single-family home market, the MAR report found that the statewide average selling price has increased 6.8 percent, from an average price of $365,553 in the third quarter one year ago to $390,395 during the three months from July-September 2003.

Additionally, since last summer, the statewide average selling price for condos has climbed 9.3 percent, from an average of $251,065 in the 2002 third quarter to $274,528 in the comparable quarter this year. It's the smallest annual quarter-to-quarter price increase for condos in over four years, since the second quarter of 1998 when the average price rose 6.1 percent from the second quarter of 1997.

Regionally, in the detached single-family home market, prices rose 2 to 5 percent in the greater Boston, northeast and South Shore regions; 10 to 12 percent in central and western Massachusetts; 16 to 17 percent on Cape Cod and the islands and the Greater Fall River-New Bedford area.

In the condo market, prices were flat in west Massachusetts, but climbed 5 to 10 percent in greater Boston, the northeast and South Shore regions. Meanwhile, on the Cape and islands and in southeastern Massachusetts condo prices rose 24 percent and 45.4 percent, respectively, due to strong demand for second homes.

Police Dept. Receives $12,000 Grant For Traffic Enforcement

Police Chief William Falco announces the Quincy Police Department has received a $12,000 grant to conduct extra traffic enforcement during the second year of the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau's (GHSB) "Click It or Ticket" and "You Drink & Drive You Lose" campaigns.

The program is part of the Massachusetts Executive Office of Public Safety and provides approximately $2.2 million in grant funding for these two campaigns to 217 local police departments and to the State Police.

The first "Click It or Ticket" mobilization will take place until Nov. 30. The first "You Drink & Drive You Lose" mobilization will be from Dec. 15 to Jan. 4, 2004.

"This Click It or Ticket mobilization will reduce the danger we all face from motor vehicle crashes during the heavily-traveled Thanksgiving holiday period," said Falco. "In addition to preventing aggressive and impaired driving and speeding, this mobilization will allow us to increase compliance with the Massachusetts safety belt and child passenger safety laws so more people will be protected."

The campaigns, made possible by federal highway safety grants, combine traffic enforcement, public information, as well as community education.

"We strongly urge those using the Massachusetts roadways, in particular over the Thanksgiving holiday period, to drive sober and well-rested, to obey posted speed limits, to allow extra travel time for emergencies, and to make sure everyone is properly buckled up," Secretary Edward A. Flynn. "This Click It or Ticket mobilization will encourage safe driving that will help to reduce the more than 400 fatalities, 91,000 injuries, and $6.3 billion in economic costs from motor vehicle crashes that annually devastate Massachusetts families and our economy."

Falco provided the following information on safety belts, booster seats and child safety seats:

- Safety belts reduce the risk of death or serious injury in a motor vehicle crash by up to half. Yet a 2003 state-wide survey conducted by the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau found only 62 percent of front seat occupants wear safety belts in Massachusetts as compared to 79 percent nationwide. The lowest usage rate was among teen drivers at 58 percent.

- Massachusetts' law requires all drivers and passengers to be properly restrained in a safety belt, booster seat or child safety seat. A driver may be stopped by police solely for having a child 12 years of age or younger improperly restrained ($25 fine per unbuckled occupant).

- Massachusetts' law requires children under five and weighing 40 pounds or less to ride properly secured in a child safety seat. Children five and older and weighing more than 40 pounds must wear a safety belt. For maximum safety, children 40 to 80 pounds should ride in a booster seat. Children over 80 pounds and taller than 4'9" are ready for an adult safety belt.

- Children 12 years of age and under, especially those riding in a rear-facing child safety seat, should always ride properly restrained in the back seat away from an air bag.

Henry (Hank) Bradley, director of Quincy Veterans' Services, for his compassion, dedication, commitment and humility as veterans' services director and for his volunteer work for many civic and charitable causes, 2001.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

13-10 Win Over Plymouth North
Sends Quincy To Postseason

Presidents Playoff-Bound

By CHRIS POISSON

Senior J.J. Niamkey never took the trip down memory lane. Not once, in the days leading up to last Friday night's league showdown with Plymouth North or during the game, did the thought cross his mind.

On Nov. 9, 2001, Niamkey, a little-known sophomore who was still wearing uniform No. 80 after switching from receiver to tailback, rushed for his first varsity touchdown — an 11-yard game-winner against Plymouth North that marked the turning point of the Quincy program.

"Actually I didn't think about that until right now," said Niamkey, following last Friday's emotional 13-10 triumph over the Blue Eagles. "That was my first varsity touchdown."

"I remember it was in that corner of the end zone over there," he said, pointing to the right corner of the south end zone. "I believe that was the last time Plymouth North lost a league game until now."

Although he didn't score the game-winner this time around, he was very much a factor in senior quarterback Josh Giordani's go-ahead TD that earned the Presidents a share of the Atlantic Coast League championship and, more importantly, an invitation to the Division 3 Super Bowl playoffs. It marked Quincy's first league title since the 1970 squad won the Greater Boston League.

On first down from the PN 12-yard line, Giordani ran an option to his left. He read the Blue Eagles over pursuing Niamkey, found the lane opened by his line and darted into the end zone with 2:05 left in the game for a 13-10 advantage.

"They were expecting J.J. to get the ball so I figured I'd tuck it in and go," Giordani explained. "The line made good blocks. I couldn't have done it without them."

"It was an option and Josh took it the whole way," Niamkey said. "I was right behind and I saw the whole entire thing. It was amazing. He had a lane, made the read and scored."

"The quarterback is just reading it," said head coach Bob Noble. "He's coached up. If you don't see the numbers, you keep it and run. He read it correctly, stayed with the ball and made a great run into the end zone. We got some great blocks to seal it inside."

As the final seconds ticked away, excitement quickly engulfed Veterans Memorial Stadium like a five-alarm fire. The faithful remained in the stands to cheer the players, who celebrated on the field in euphoric fashion.

"I can't tell you how I feel," Noble said. "This is fantastic. This is great. We're down 10-0 and to come back to win the game in the fourth quarter is just...you know, that's these guys. It hasn't really set in yet."

PLAYOFF-BOUND — The Quincy High School football team celebrates end zone of Veterans Memorial Stadium following its 13-10 win over Plymouth North last Friday. With the victory, the Presidents earned a share of the league title and a berth in the Division 3 Super Bowl playoffs.

And now there will be football after Thanksgiving in the city of Quincy.

Quincy and PN each finished with 5-1 records in the league, but the Presidents (6-1-1 overall) won the head-to-head tie-breaker and will represent the league in the playoffs, scheduled for Tuesday night, Dec. 2, at home against Hockmuck champ Mansfield (10-0).

"Four years ago we were 1-10 and had lost 20 straight games and now we're going to the playoffs with a chance to play for the state title. It's just a testament to these kids. I couldn't be happier for them."

With about five minutes left in the game, Quincy came up with a huge defensive play to get the ball back and set up the winning drive.

Facing a fourth-and-11 at the Quincy 32, PN senior quarterback Greg Borsari threw a screen pass to junior Shamel Shorter, who reached the first-down marker only to fumble when tackled by senior defensive back Steve Costigliola and junior line-backer Mark Hutchins.

The Presidents marched 79 yards in 3:08 on the winning drive. After Niamkey (18 carries, 106 yards) gained 18 yards on the first play, they sputtered and faced a fourth-and-7 at their 42. Decision time: Punt and hope to get the ball back or go for it?

"You have to go for it," Noble said. "We give them the ball back and they're going to run out the clock. They're a great running team."

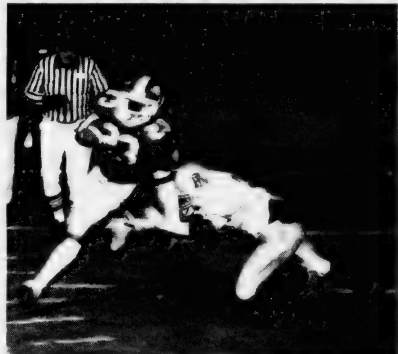

Giordani dropped back and fired a strike to senior wideout Ian Jorgensen across the middle for a 15-yard gain and a first down at the PN 43 — keeping their playoff hopes alive.

"The winning drive was just a tremendous drive," Noble said. "Again, the 'Little General' came up big when we needed him. What he lacks in size he certainly makes up with gut and guile. He and Jorgensen made a huge fourth-down play for us."

On the Blue Eagles' final drive, they reached the Quincy 44 before the Presidents' defense tightened. On second-and-7, they pressured Borsari into an incomplete pass. On third down, Palermo tripped up tailback John Brouillard for a 1-yard gain. On fourth down, sophomore defensive lineman Pat Stroud sacked Borsari for a 6-yard loss to seal the win.

On the opening series of the game, Giordani was picked off by Ryan McLean when he tried to throw a deep ball into a fierce wind. The Blue Eagles capitalized, chewing nearly eight minutes off the clock before Scott Savastano kicked a 28-yard field goal.

In the second quarter, Hutchins recovered a PN fumble at the Quincy 43.

J.J. NIAMKEY (23) rushes for a 9-yard gain on Quincy's game-winning touchdown drive late in the fourth quarter.

Running the two-minute offense, the Presidents set up a 32-yard field goal attempt for Costigliola, but they botched the snap and hold and trailed 3-0 at halftime.

In the second half, PN pounded the ball on the ground and orchestrated a 70-yard scoring drive on the opening series. On fourth-and-9, Borsari connected with a wide-open Andrew Voci on a screen pass for an 11-yard TD and a 10-0 lead with 5:25 left in the quarter.

"We have a bunch of kids that don't quit and just keep playing," Noble said. "That's why we're here today. The game's not over till it's over. I hate to use a cliché but it's true. We have a pretty good football team here. We can move the football against anybody."

And Quincy moved the ball 61 yards on eight plays on its next series. On third-and-9 at the PN 45, Giordani hit Jorgensen for 28 yards on a slant. Niamkey then carried twice to set up Giordani's 1-yard plunge. Costigliola's extra point cut the deficit to 10-7.

"I'm overwhelmed," Noble said. "We beat a fine football team. We earned this. I couldn't be more happier for these kids. This is just a tremendous evening for Quincy High School and this football program."

Thanksgiving The Season For Raider Football

The North Quincy High School football team suffered a 44-6 loss at Canton last Saturday afternoon.

Some good news for the Red Raiders, though. They snapped a four-game scoring drought by finding the end zone on their first series of the game.

"We came out of the block well," said head coach Tony Green. "The kids were all fired up and took it to Canton for the first series. But Canton figured out what we were doing and adjusted."

North Quincy (0-9) remains winless as it heads into its final game of the season — the annual Thanksgiving Day game against Quincy.

"I'm proud of the kids for playing hard," Green said. "It's not the most exciting year for them, but they're hanging in there. They're mentally tough."

The Red Raiders marched 74 yards on their scoring drive, converting three fourth-and-1 plays along the way. Senior quarterback and head-captain Jimmy Burke tossed an 8-yard pass to senior quad-captain Brandon Neves for the touchdown.

Senior Tim Sommers played a strong two-way game at offensive and defensive tackle. He recorded seven tackles and three QB hurries. Junior cornerbacks Dave Djerf and Brendan Linnane also played well.

TORQUE AND HORSEPOWER

Horsepower, a measure of the work that an engine can do, is a term coined by a Scottish inventor who wanted to know how many horses his invention, the steam engine, would replace. He found that a robust horse could lift a 150-pound weight 220 feet in the air (using a pulley) in 60 seconds. Thus, horsepower is the force needed to move a specific amount of weight a specific distance in a specific amount of time. Torque, on the other hand, is a measure of force that produces rotation around an axis. Torque, then, is the force that propels it down the road, while horsepower is the force that determines how fast the force (torque) makes it happen.

No matter what the horsepower you can count on for most all types of service for your car, van, or light truck, from replacing your wiper blades to major repairs. Our customers continue to tell us they find our ASE Certified professional service staff to be superior. We also use the AllData CD-ROM based systems for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is proud of that, and we want you to know we will continue to work toward improving our record. We are located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). We are 'A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer.'

HINT: By knowing how much torque an engine produces, and at what rpm the engine is generating the torque, you can determine the engine's horsepower.

'Rebuilding' North Girls' Volleyball Exceeds Expectations

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School girls' volleyball team did not capture its third straight state title this year.

And that's OK with head coach James Rendle.

The Red Raiders, in what was considered a rebuilding year, exceeded all expectations by reaching the Division 1 state semifinal last Wednesday in Chelsea.

And that's when their November run ended, dropping three close games to North sectional champ Chelmsford by scores of 28-30, 30-32, 26-30.

"All the games were very close," Rendle said. "We were right there with them. They were just a little bit better than us."

"I was pleased that we made it that far," he added. "We weren't anywhere near the athletic talent we had the past two years, so to get as far as we did is a real credit to the kids."

Senior middle hitter Marie McGuinness (13 kills) and senior outside hitter May Ho (nine kills) led the offensive attack, with junior setter Kristin O'Toole (28 assists) running the show.

Junior outside hitter Kendra Ciccone (22 digs, five kills), Ho (22 digs) and O'Toole (14 digs) turned in strong defensive games.

Senior middle blocker Megan Sidorowicz tallied six kills, two blocks, two aces and 13 service points. Sophomore outside hitter Erin Connolly, senior outside hitter Jamie Mullen and senior defensive specialist Elyse Dolbec also played well.

The Red Raiders graduated six players from last year's championship squad, who all went on to play at the collegiate level. With a new cast aboard this season, they struggled early against strong teams.

"It was a building process all year," Rendle said. "We were losing a lot of matches to really good teams. But we were patient. We learned our strengths and weaknesses and we got a lot of experience. The kids jelled and understood their roles. They know the game far better than they did at the beginning of the year."

The Red Raiders closed out the regular season with losses to Quincy and Bourne, but played well against both of those quality teams. And once the Division 1 Central sectional tourney started, they rediscovered their magic.

North Quincy knocked off Boston English, Doherty and Newton North to set up the showdown with Quincy for the sectional championship. The Red Raiders, which lost to the Presidents twice in the regular season, pulled out a 3-2 victory.

Coming off that emotional win over their neighbors, the Red Raiders put forth a better outing against Chelmsford but came up short.

"There was no letdown," Rendle said. "We were coming off a big win against Quincy and we had to play at the next level. The kids responded to that. We played our best volleyball at the end of the year. Our best match was against Chelmsford. I never enjoy losing, but I enjoyed watching the kids perform at that level."

North Girls Place Second At X-Country League Championship

The North Quincy High School girls' cross country team turned in its best performance of the season with a second-place finish in varsity and first-place finish in junior varsity at the recent Old Colony League championships at Plymouth South.

Freshmen Kerry Regan and Jenna Furey and sophomore Kayla Martin went 10-11-12. Claudia Vega was 18th with Caitlyn Dow, 26th and Lisa Mulligan 28th.

The 77 points put them 20 behind Barnstable, which won with 57. Previously unbeaten Plymouth South had two girls drop out of the race and finished fifth behind Marshfield and Falmouth.

In the junior varsity race, Giandra Rivera placed first with Lily Luo and Jessica Johnson third and fourth, respectively. Christine Caples was ninth with Meredith Palmer 13th, Michelle Budukiewicz 14th, Adrienne Doucette 17th and Linda Man 20th.

The team scored 23 points, far ahead of second-place Barnstable's 86. Lou is the lone senior. Doucette is a junior and all others are freshmen.

Trooper Charles McGrail Receives State Police Award

Colonel Thomas J. Foley, superintendent of the Mass State Police, announces Trooper Charles E. McGrail, of Quincy has been awarded the Mass State Police Medal of Valor.

Trooper McGrail was recently honored during a ceremony at the State Police General Headquarters in Framingham.

On the morning of April 4, McGrail and Leominster Fire Deputy, Lieutenant Charles LeBlanc were the first persons to arrive on the scene of a tragic aircraft accident in the woods, in the vicinity of Rte. 2 in Leominster. Although the aircraft was engulfed in flames, both with total disregard for their own safety, approached the aircraft and entered it repeatedly to remove injured passengers. As a result of the crash, six individuals lost their lives. The efforts of these two men were nothing short of heroic.

Trooper McGrail is a three-year veteran of the State Police. He is currently assigned to the State Police Milton barracks. He is a 1986 graduate of North Quincy High School, and currently working towards a bachelors degree at Western New England College. He was previously awarded the Trooper of the Year award, from the Former Troopers Association. Trooper McGrail is a biking, skiing and camping enthusiast.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Quit Smoking: You Know Why, Now Find Out How

If you smoke, you probably know why you should quit. You are surrounded by "smoke-free" signs everywhere. Restaurants and other businesses that no longer allow smoking inside. But you continue to smoke because tobacco is addictive, and quitting isn't easy.

There are only a few people in this country who don't know the dangers of tobacco use," says Tom Glynn, director of science and health at the American Cancer Society. "But you can't smoke forever. So how can you stop?"

Get motivated

Many people have a lot of cigarettes and don't quit, but they know it's bad for them. Motivation is a commitment to change. The commitment to quit is a difference between a person who would like to quit and a person who looks in the mirror and makes a commitment to himself. "In one month, I will be a nonsmoker," the smoker who finds the motivation to make that statement has a greater chance of success.

Finding that motivation isn't easy. Glynn suggests making a list of specific benefits of quitting, including things like living to see your grandkids, saving money and having a better quality of life.

"Another good motivator is to think about the fact that there are now just as many former smokers in this country as current smokers," he notes. "This shows that even though quitting is difficult, it can be done. It's not impossible."

Make A Plan And Stick To It

After you find that motivation to quit, devise a plan. Resources such as telephone counseling can be very powerful tools. Trained counselors can help you stay motivated and overcome the symptoms of withdrawal. More than 30 states have some type of free smoking cessation hotline available. And organizations like the American Cancer Society can connect you with these types of support and other resources.

New developments in smoking cessation have brought about medications, patches and gums that, when used in a combination, aid success rates as well. Talk with your doctor or pharmacist to determine what might work best for you.

A strong support system is equally important. Because nicotine is addictive and withdrawal can cause irritability, involve your friends and family in your plan from the beginning so they can be more prepared to help you through the rough periods. Their support will also help you sustain your motivation and commitment to kicking the habit for good.

And if you aren't successful in your first attempt, don't consider it a failure. Glynn encourages, "Jump right back in and try again. Use what you learned the first time to make the second try successful."

Contact the American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345 to find out about the resources available to help you quit successfully.

The Impact Of Quitting

Within the first minute of quitting:

- Your blood pressure goes down.
- Your heart rate goes down.
- Your lung capacity increases.
- You can taste your food better.

And, over time:

- You can walk up the stairs easier because you have increased energy and stamina.
- Your clothes won't smell like smoke.
- You'll save a lot of money.
- After a year of not smoking, your risk of heart disease decreases by half.
- You lower your risk of cancer.

Joshua Dubin Finishes Great Floridian Triathlon

Joshua Dubin has treated many elite triathletes as a member of Team USA Triathlon's medical staff for more than nine years.

Last month, he experienced a triathlon not from the doctor's viewpoint but from the athlete's perspective.

Dubin earned respect from his patients and colleagues by fulfilling a longtime goal — finishing the Great Floridian Triathlon in Clermont, Fla., in 14 hours, 12 minutes, placing 240 out of 600 entrants.

He traveled to Florida with Rosie Leonard of Quincy and Tim Snow of Brockton, who also competed in the triathlon.

"It's something I've seen other athletes do. I never thought I could do it," said Dubin, a chiropractor and owner of Dubin Chiropractic, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Triathlons consist of three successive events, usually swimming, bicycling and running in varying distances. Races can be sprints, Olympic distance, half-ironman or full-ironman distance.

Dubin has been competing in short-distance triathlons since his first race in the 1996 Massachusetts Triathlon in his native town of Sharon.

The Great Floridian Triathlon was his first full-ironman race, which included a 2.4-mile swim, followed by a 112-mile bike ride and culminated with a 26.2-mile marathon. Not even the Florida weather, a blistering 86 degrees, slowed Dubin on this day.

This triathlon required much more rigorous training. Dubin trained for a year, six days a week, in preparation for the event.

His training schedule: Monday and Wednesday

DR. JOSHUA DUBIN, owner of Dubin Chiropractic, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center, completes the Great Floridian Triathlon in 14 hours, 12 minutes. It was his first full-ironman distance race. He is also a member of Team USA Triathlon's medical staff.

nights, swim; Tuesday and Thursday mornings, bike; Tuesday and Thursday nights, lift and run; Fridays, off; Saturdays and Sundays, long-distance biking (70 to 100 miles), swimming (90 minutes) and running (18 miles).

To also prepare for the triathlon, Dubin ran the Boston Marathon in April as part of the American Liver Foundation fund-raising team.

Then in August, he participated in his ninth Pan-Mass Challenge, a two-day, 196-mile bike ride from Sturbridge to Provincetown, as a fund-raiser for Dana Farber cancer research and the Jimmy Fund.

The swim training he did on his own, with helpful hints from local professional triathletes Candy Angle and Andy Noble, both of Weymouth.

At the end of August, Dubin took time off from his training to travel with Team USA Triathlon to Switzerland for the Duathlon World Championships. Dubin is the only New England member of Team USA Triathlon's medical staff.

Dubin Chiropractic is celebrating its fifth year. Over the past five years Dubin has compiled a book containing 13 common sport-related injuries, including detailed artwork to aid patients in understanding treatment techniques and injury prevention. This month, Dubin wrote a paper on ankle sprains as part of his Injury Management Update series. The articles can be viewed at www.dubinchiro.com.

FLUORIDE'S BENEFICIAL EFFECTS

According to recent statistics from the U.S. Surgeon General, more than half of children between ages 5 and 9 have at least one cavity or filling, and tooth decay has affected 78% of 17-year-olds. These statistics point out the importance of fluoride, which combats tooth decay in two ways. First, it strengthens tooth enamel. This is the hard substance that protects teeth so they can better resist the acid formed by plaque. Fluoride also allows teeth that are damaged by acid to repair (rem mineralize) themselves. Fluoride cannot repair cavities, but it can reverse low levels of tooth decay and, thus, prevent new cavities from forming. These benefits are critically important to the health of children's developing teeth.

This column about fluoride has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. We believe in preventive dentistry. We know that you wish to receive your general dental care from a highly trained, caring staff; therefore, professionalism is very important to you. Our promise to you is that our office will provide you with dental care of the highest quality, available, utilizing the most modern procedures and an extremely qualified staff. P.S. Tooth decay occurs when the bacteria found in plaque (the sticky substance that adheres to teeth) breaks down sugars and produces damaging acids as a byproduct.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

The dictionary defines the word "creed" as "any system of belief or of opinion."

The value of any creed lies in its use, not in its possession. What we believe is important, but the diligence with which we give ourselves to the keeping of any creed may have is vastly more important. The world is interested no so much in the creed we profess as in the creed we live by. The creed we leave at the church door or at home will not do us nor the world much good. The question is not only, Do you have a creed?, but, Do you have it with you?...

Someone once said that Ralph Waldo Emerson had a short creed, but he took it with him... The same thing was said of a certain business man. His creed might have been summed up in the word "honesty." It was short, but from the time he awoke in the morning until he went to bed at night, he carried it with him; and everyone recognized this...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although your energy level is high, be careful not to commit to too many projects at this time. You'll do better focusing on just a few tasks rather than spreading yourself too thin.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your heart might be leading you in one direction, but pay attention to your keen Bovine intellect. I'm cautioning you to think things through before making any commitments.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your "serious" Twin has been dominant in your life for quite a while. It's time now to let that "wilder" half take you out for some good times — perhaps with someone you've special.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Career aspects are high for Moon Children who make a good impression. Show people not only what you can already do, but also how you can be more valuable to them in the future.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Things start to brighten for the Lion's immediate financial future. But be careful to resist the urge to splurge. You need to tuck something away to help you through another tight period.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Having to do too many tasks in too short a time could lower your mood to just above the grumbling level. But if you handle things one at a time, you'll get through it all soon enough.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your usually carefully made holiday plans could be subject to change later this month. Use this week to prepare for that possibility by starting a Plan B just in case you need it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Be careful about joining a colleague's plan to solve a workplace problem. Investigate it thoroughly. Otherwise, you could find yourself in a predicament with other associates.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Slow down that high-paced whirl you've been on. Spending quiet time alone or with people you care for can be both physically and spiritually restorative.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Make suggestions, not demands. You'll be more successful in getting people to follow your lead if you exercise quiet patience instead of strong persuasion to get your ideas across.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You still need more facts before you can make an informed career choice. One note of caution: Be careful about whom you ask for that information; otherwise, you could be misled.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Changing situations through the 21st could lead to some challenging opportunities for those perspicacious Pisceans who know how to make them work to their advantage.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of being both daring and cautious, traits that could make you a research scientist or maybe even a rocketship designer.

QMC's Cancer Program Gets 3-Year Approval

Quincy Medical Center has received unconditional three-year approval as a Community Hospital Cancer Program from the American College of Surgeons' Commission on Cancer (COC).

During the two-day survey under the COC's new rating system, QMC received the highest possible quality rating and no deficiencies, a distinction shared by less than one-third of all COC-approved programs.

"It is a great honor for the cancer care program at Quincy Medical Center to receive the American College of Surgeons' highest level of approval and the Cancer Care Committee is to be commended," said Dr. Paul Musto, co-chairman of the CCC.

"Quincy Medical Center's oncologists and surgeons have dedicated their lives to providing patients with the best possible cancer care in the community," said Christine Schuster, president and CEO of the hospital.

The medical center's cancer program offers compassionate care and state-of-the-art diagnostic and treatment services.

Margin Changes From 26 to 25

Recount Confirms Gardner In Ward 6, 4th Woman Councillor

A recount has officially cleared the way for Alicia Gardner to take the Ward 6 seat in January as Quincy's first woman city councillor in a decade.

The four-hour recount by hand conducted by City Clerk Joseph Shea and the Board of Voter Registrars changed the final outcome by just one vote.

Results election night Nov. 4 gave Gardner a 26-vote victory margin over Brian McNamee.

In the recount Gardner picked up two votes and McNamee three, shaving the margin by one vote to 25.

The final vote was 1,742 to 1,717.

Shea said the recount cost about $4,500 because it was held on a city hall working day. The cost, he said, would have been about $7,000 if held on a Saturday.

McNamee filed for the recount at the request of his campaign supporters because of the closeness of the vote and the fact there were 143 blanks cast.

"It was accurate, it was fact and it went smoothly," said Gardner, who also filed for the recount after McNamee did to protect her interests.

"The process works and I'm just thrilled. I look forward to working on the council in January."

ALICIA GARDNER

Gardner said she would have "seriously considered" calling for a recount if the 26-vote margin had been reversed in favor of McNamee.

"It is something I would have seriously considered," she said. "You work very hard and come that close and I don't begrudge that at all."

McNamee told The Sun: "The recount was something that was asked by the volunteers and those people that supported the campaign. They deserved to know whether those blanks were, in fact, blanks."

"The recount afforded them the opportunity to reach a comfort level with that. The recount lays to rest any future conjecture about blanks. It brings closure to the election process. We stand behind the voters' will. It's clear the voters wanted Alicia and we wish her the best. We respect the will of the voter."

"Blind ambition is unbecoming of a politician. The voters have indicated some interest in the McNamee candidacy but it's not quite there. We will have to see what develops."

Gardner will succeed Joseph Newton who decided not to seek re-election and then later unsuccessfully challenged Mayor William Phelan.

Gardner will be only the fourth woman councillor in the city's history, and the second to hold the Ward 6 seat.

Edna Austin was the first woman councillor elected in 1943 and served 15 years at-large under both Plan A and Plan E city charters.

Joanne Condon Walsh was the second, winning the Ward 6 seat in 1978.

The last elected before Gardner was Patricia Toland, a close friend, for whom Gardner campaigned. After serving in the school committee, Toland was elected to an at-large seat in 1981 and re-elected to five terms. She served as council president in 1988-89, the only woman ever to hold that post. She left the council in 1993 to become assistant city clerk. She died in 1994.

Gardner, a Squantum resident, is constituents serve aide to Sen. Michael Morrissey.

• On Nov. 28, 1582, William Shakespeare, 18, and Anne Hathaway, 26, pay a 40-pound bond for their marriage license in Stratford-upon-Avon. Six months later, Anne gives birth to their daughter, Susanna, and two years later, to twins. Little is known about Shakespeare's early life.

• On Nov. 26, 1922, in Egypt's Valley of the Kings, British archaeologists Howard Carter and Lord Carnarvon become the first souls to enter King Tutankhamen's tomb in more than 3,000 years. Inside was a collection of several thousand priceless objects, including a gold coffin containing the mummy of the teenage king.

• On Nov. 27, 1940, Lee Yuen Kam, later known as Bruce Lee, is born in San Francisco. After graduating from the University of Washington, Lee starred in numerous martial-arts films, many of which were filmed in Hong Kong.

Three New Lawyers

Quincy will soon have three new Quincy lawyers — three familiar faces and names.

Christine Cedrone, Bryan Connolly and Joseph Keegan have all passed the Massachusetts Bar exam and will be sworn in at ceremonies next month in Boston's historic Faneuil Hall.

CEDRONE

Cedrone, vice chairwoman of the School Committee, is a graduate of the New England School of Law and presently a para-legal in the Quincy law firm of Thomas Williams. She will be leaving the school committee at the end of the year, deciding not to seek a third term.

Connolly, who is stepping down from the Ward 4 city council seat after one term, is a graduate of Boston College Law School. And is associated with Piper Rudnick, a law firm with offices nationwide, including Boston.

Keegan, a Quincy police officer, is a graduate of New England School of Law and an Army veteran of Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

He made his political debut this year winning one of the two nominations in a field of five candidates for the Ward 1 council seat but losing in the final election to former councillor Leo Kelly.

Keegan is still on disability leave from the police department with a back injury suffered last Dec. 6 while rescuing a drowning woman being swept into Quincy Bay from Black's Creek. Doctors have not indicated when he will be able to return to duty.

SPEAKING OF LAWYERS. George Burke will be going to his 60th consecutive Quincy-North game Thanksgiving morning. And wonders if any other Quincy or North fan can top that.

Burke started the streak in 1944 in his first year at then Central Junior High School and hasn't missed one since.

He was on the Quincy jayvees team in 1947 and the late Coach Munroe MacLean told him a few days before to dress for the game.

And George likes to tell the rest of the story on himself: "I was the only guy on the Quincy team with a black helmet. Imagine a Quincy player with a black helmet in a game against North. They didn't have a helmet that fit me. So, my mother went out to buy one for me. She couldn't find a blue one, so she bought a black one. That maybe why I didn't get into the game."

Across the field was North Quincy, a team with black helmets.

Burke went out for the baseball team but couldn't get a cap to fit him. They didn't have the flexible adjustments back then.

So, he gave up baseball and football and turned to basketball. "There was no problem there," he muses. "No hats on the basketball team."

WHAT'S OPEN WHAT'S CLOSED

On Thanksgiving Day
Thursday, November 27

Retail stores, supermarkets closed.
Liquor stores closed.
Taverns, bars open.
Banks closed.
Stock market closed.
State, county, municipal offices closed.
Schools closed.
No mail delivery.

And he went on to become a basketball star at UMass/Amherst where his number 32 was retired twice.

Once for him and once for Julius Erving. Both had worn the number.

George has been a generous benefactor to his alma mater where the Sports Hall of Fame was named in his honor.

That black helmet started it all.

A READER, Jim Bryson of Squantum, takes a little issue with the recent column on our pet peeves.

Especially the one about "the pollster who wants to know who you're going to vote for."

Bryson dropped us a note expressing his feelings:

"I was surprised to read that you included pollsters (i.e. campaign workers) in your list of pet peeves. I can understand the annoyance created by an ill-timed phone call, but I don't believe it's fair to cast these workers into the same group that includes drivers who operate their cars on the brink of vehicular homicide and those who inappropriately park in the reserved spaces for the physically challenged.

"I share your feelings about those who behave disrespectfully towards our nation's flag and national anthem, but I also believe that free elections with active participation serve as an essential foundation for those symbols.

"Campaign workers serve their candidate, but they also serve their community by contributing to an active election process. I admit to being one of those callers with whom you have a pet peeve. I apologize if my call to you or others was ill-timed, but I don't apologize for making the call.

"Printing your pollster pet peeve didn't help residents increase their appreciation for the election process. We should shift our focus from the annoyance of a momentary interruption to the bigger problem of improving voter participation. Therefore, I offer a replacement for your pollster pet peeve with a pet peeve we all should share: Important local elections with only 35 percent participation."

Jim, I'm still not going to tell a pollster who I am going to vote for. That's my business. But I agree with you that 35 percent voter turnout qualify for a pet peeve rating.

In the city election earlier this month the turnout was 35.20 percent. There were 52,684 eligible registered voters. Only 18,545 actually voted. That means 34,139 stayed home.

A pretty sad peeve.

AND A NOTE from Jean Patten, NQHS alumnus now living in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla.:

"I know I've written about the great Scenes of Yesterday, Tom Galvin's nostalgia — also how much we enjoy the Sunbeams and the Years of Events. Now I have another favorite.

"Please extend to Marie D'Olimpio my thanks for all the great recipes. My favorite is her Quick Lamb Stew, published in June. I've made it several times and it satisfies my craving for lamb.

"A tiny lamb roast, about two pounds, was $13.92, in our supermarket last week: Over the years I've wanted to find a perfect lamb stew recipe and this is it!

"Keep those Quincy Suns a-coming!"

MILESTONE: Former newspaperman Ed Spargo will mark his 96th birthday Thanksgiving Day — a young 96th.

Ed, who lives in Wollaston, is known nation-wide as Quincy's Ambassador of Good Health. For years he has been distributing at his own expense literature on good health.

And, he obviously, practices what he preaches.

Happy birthday, kid.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920'S postcard view of the old National Sailor's Home that was located near the junction of Fenno and Kendall Streets in Wollaston. The rest home was opened shortly after the Civil War and served indigent US Navy veterans for over 50 years. After its demise the home was demolished in 1931 and the Model Homes company of Boston developed the site into the Beechwood Knoll neighborhood.

The Thanksgiving dinner at the Howard Johnson's Restaurant in the Granite Trust Building Quincy featured:

Fresh fruit cup, cream of celery soup with croutons, roast stuffed young turkey, giblet gravy, cranberry sauce, baked potato, hearts of lettuce with French dressing, sweet mixed pickles, hot rolls and butter, mince pie, coffee, Tokay grapes, apple cider, mixed nuts and after dinner mints.

All that for $2.25.

CURB SOUGHT ON DRINKING

Drinking, particularly among teenagers and war workers, captured the attention of official Quincy.

The Council for Alcohol Education called on the city to reduce the number of liquor licenses available and control the hours of sales.

"Some bars in Quincy are open 110 hours a week," Mayor Charles A. Ross was told, and the easy access to intoxicating beverages "impairs the efficiency of war workers."

Meanwhile, Capt. George W. Fallon, head of the Quincy Police Criminal Investigation Bureau, promised swift prosecution of bartenders and cafe owners who sell liquor to minors.

Teenagers who falsify their ages to obtain alcoholic beverages also faced court action.

"There is all-together too much drinking and drunkenness in Quincy among teenage boys," said Capt. Fallon.

LEBANESE PROTEST

Peter S. Antoon, president of the Quincy Sons of Lebanon, wired Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Sen. David I. Walsh (D-Mass) to protest "hasty and oppressive measures on the part of the French military authorities" in Lebanon.

Learn To Live Together As Brothers

In America, Armistice Day (Veterans Day) is celebrated at the beginning and Thanksgiving at the end of November. These two festivals are related not only by proximity of celebration, but also thematically.

United Americans plead with God to give repose to those who have gave their lives to their country as well as to protect the living from all calamity. War, apart from disease, is the greatest calamity for all mankind.

Armistice Day, that we celebrated on Nov. 11, took place almost 100 years ago. We prayed to God on Armistice Day and will pray on Thanksgiving Day again, to grant us a very badly needed contemporary Armistice Day with all our enemies, not matter who they might be and no matter where they might be. Such an Armistice would stop not only the extermination of our enemies by us, but would also stop our extermination by our enemies.

I would like all "My fellow citizens of the world" to love America as the most patriotic

"My fellow Americans." To achieve that I would like once more to offer to my President, President George W. Bush, this Political Compass: "Glory to God in the Highest, Peace on Earth, Good will towards men."

I think that it would be also useful for all of us, if we remembered Dr. Martin Luther King's warning: "If we don't learn to live together as brothers, we would surely perish together as fools."

Thanksgiving Day Dressings

I had what you would call a "dry run" last Sunday when I cooked a Thanksgiving dinner for our daughter Ann Marie and son-on-law Dave and their extended family. Sometimes when a family grows to such capacity, there is more than one way to celebrate a holiday.

Anyway, because some like a stuffing with the giblets (as my husband does), and some like plain stuffing I ended up making two kinds with two large frying pans sizzling away on the stove.

The first stuffing with the giblet is as follows:

GIBLET STUFFING

Giblets from turkey cut in small pieces.
8 ounces of ground beef
5 slices of bread (soaked and squeezed)
4 cups of stuffing mix, (I used Pepperidge Farms)

1/4 cup white wine
1 small onion (cut up)
1 large stalk celery (minced)
oil for sautéing
1-2 tablespoons Bell's 'Seasoning

In a frying pan, sauté the onion and celery. Add the giblets and the ground beef and cook until giblets are done. You may have to add a bit of water or chicken broth as I did when you add the rest of the ingredients if mixture is too dry. Otherwise take the heat off and blend until mixture is done.

This giblet stuffing wasn't the one I stuffed the turkey with, but instead cooked it in a casserole dish in a 350 degree oven for one hour.

I first pre-heated the oven to 425 degrees and then when I place the turkey in the oven I lower the temperature to 350 degrees.

The recipe for the other stuffing is as follows:

SAUSAGE AND BEEF STUFFING

2 sausages (peel off the skin) or 8 ounces of ground pork.

8 ounces of ground beef
6 slices of bread soaked and squeezed
5-6 cups stuffing mix
1/4 cup white wine (optional)
1 tablespoon Bell's Seasoning
1 small onion (cut up)
1 large stalk celery (minced)
oil for sautéing
about a cup of chicken broth

In a frying pan, sauté the onion and celery. Add the sausage meat the beef and the wine until cooked. On low heat, add all the other ingredients until blended.

Since I prepared this the day before, it cooled overnight in the refrigerator before I stuffed the turkey. Always make sure the stuffing is completely cool before stuffing. I notice that when roasting a stuffed turkey that when the popper comes out I always allow another half hour before I remove the turkey from the oven.

On Thanksgiving Day I won't have to cook another turkey because we have been invited to our daughter Sue and son-in-law Anthony's home for Thanksgiving!

PS. Every recipe I give to all of you can be varied because when I prepare these foods, I don't always measure exactly, but the ingredients are all the same. Happy Thanksgiving!

Quincy-Born Author Tells Tale Of Old Houghs Neck

If you called James Green of Swampscott "a Renaissance Man," you'd be right.

A native of Houghs Neck, he has a doctorate in international relations, has written articles on clamdigging and once finished third in the Boston Marathon.

The 70-year-old Green will be at the Thomas Crane Public Library Sunday, Dec. 14 at 2 p.m. to talk about his first novel, "Hangman: A Tale of the Boston Harbor Islands," a story set in Quincy.

The program is free and open to the public.

"Hangman" is the story of Michael Farrell, who immigrates to the Mass Bay Colony in the 18th century and settles in Houghs Neck among the fishermen.

The conflict between the Puritan leadership and the defiant fisherfolk reaches a climax when gold coins are found on the Boston Harbor Islands.

In the resultant wave of disorder, Farrell becomes a target of the Puritans' revenge.

Green, the author, grew up in Houghs Neck, one of eight children of a fruit and vegetable vender. He worked as a clamdigger in his teen years.

He has a Ph.D. in international relations from American University, a master's in government from UMass-Amherst, and a bachelor's in political science from California-Berkeley.

He used a master's in teaching from Boston State to teach history in Beverly, Saugus and Salem and political science at Holy Cross.

Through it all, Green found time to run 22 Boston Marathons, finishing third in 1960, and making the Olympic track team as first alternate in 1960 and 1964.

Right now he's working on his second novel, also set in Quincy, this time in the mid-19th century.

Officials, Former Students Help Esther Gizzarella Celebrate Her '100th'

About 100 people bearing flowers and plants showed up at the William Rice Eventide Home Sunday to help Esther Gizzarelli celebrate her 100th birthday.

She was born in Brockton, Nov. 17, 1903, when Teddy Roosevelt was president and taught at Quincy's former Central Junior High School for 43 years before her retirement in 1969.

Former Mayor James Sheets turned up at the party with a bouquet of flowers and Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro came with a birthday proclamation from the city.

But many of well-wishers were Ms. Gizzarelli's old students who recalled with her the days they shared at Central and regaled each other with remembered stories.

After her retirement from the Quincy schools, she became a visiting nurse and many of the celebrants that gathered with her at the Rice

Home were her friends from those days. The birthday party, which lasted a couple of hours, was organized by Mary Cuthbert, a friend from the VNA days.

Guarino Brothers Open Goodfellas Traditional Barbershop

By SHEILA HALLORAN

Growing up, Robert and Vincent Guarino didn't fantasize about being firemen or professional baseball players as most young boys do.

Instead, since the age they started school, Robert and Vinny knew what they wanted to be and they knew who they wanted to be like.

They wanted to follow in their father Vito's footsteps, they wanted to be barbers.

Robert and Vinny recently carried out their lifelong dream of owning their own barbershop. Earlier this month, the Guarino brothers, along with their father Vito, opened Goodfellas Traditional Barbershop at 1552 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

Vito Guarino has been a barber in Quincy for the past 35 years. He started out by working at Gino's Barbershop in Quincy Center. After two years, he moved to John's Hair Styling, also in Quincy Center.

Vito has been at John's for the past 33 years. He will join his sons at Goodfellas at a later date.

Originally from Sicily,

VITO GUARINO and sons, Vincent (left) and Robert (right) recently opened Goodfellas Traditional Barbershop at 1552 Hancock St. Vito Guarino has been a barber in Quincy Center for 33 years. His sons became barbers to follow in his footsteps.

Italy, Vito began working in a barbershop in Sicily at the age of 11. He started out by sweeping up after the other barbers in the shop, which led to giving shaves, and eventually, after many years, cutting hair.

"It was a slow apprenticeship," said Vito, "but it was the best way to learn."

Vito's son, Vinny Guarino has been a barber for 10 years. He attended Massachusetts School of Barbering in Quincy from 1993-1994. Like his father, Vinny started out sweeping floors in a barbershop.

Although Vinny is also a musician, he said he has always wanted to be a barber.

"I've been thinking about owning our own place since I went into the business. It has been my dream for 10 years," said Vinny.

Vinny is formerly of John's Hair Styling in Quincy Center and Hairway

GOODFELLAS is a traditional barbershop with a modern atmosphere at 1552 Hancock St., Quincy Center. Goodfellas offers both traditional and contemporary services ranging from shoe shines and steam towel shaves to hair coloring and cap highlights.

to Heaven in Wollaston.

Vinny's younger brother, Robert Guarino, has been a barber for three years. He also attended the Massachusetts School of Barbering, which required the successful completion of 1000 hours of training. He is formerly of a Wollaston barbershop and a Braintree Salon.

Although Quincy Center is home to several barbershops and hair salons, the Guarino's are not worried about competition.

"This is the first barbershop of its kind," said Vinny. "It's traditional yet modern and we offer steam towel shaves and shoe shines."

Vito and Robert agree that competition will not be a factor that they need to worry about.

"If you offer the best you can offer, you shouldn't have to worry about competition," said Vito. "Give them the best and they will come back."

According to Robert, customers are already agreeing that Goodfellas is distinctive.

"Customers tell us they've never seen a barbershop like this," said Robert. Goodfellas offers the traditional barbershop services of steam towel shaves, razor cuts, and shoe shines as well as the more modern services of hair coloring and cap highlights.

The decor of Goodfellas is contemporary with a blend of traditional aspects, namely the classic Italian music to perhaps evoke nostalgia on their clients. The furniture is black leather, the color scheme is beige and dark gray, and the walls are adorned with Italian movie prints, including framed posters from the 1990 film GoodFellas.

Goodfellas Traditional Barbershop's grand opening celebration is slated for Saturday, Dec. 6.

There is abundant free parking in the rear of the shop in the municipal parking lot opposite the Court House.

Goodfellas is open Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays from 8 a.m.-5:30 p.m., Wednesdays from 9 a.m.-7 p.m. and Saturdays from 8 a.m.-5 p.m.

Phone number is 617-774-0006.

Conway College of Real Estate Knowledge Grad Ged Phelan Completes Advanced Real Estate Training Program

Ged Phelan recently completed an intensive education and training program sponsored by Jack Conway & Co., the Bay State's largest independent real estate company.

Phelan, a member of Conway's Quincy sales team, graduated from the Conway College of Real Estate Knowledge, a program that provides licensed agents with advanced instruction in the practical aspects of selling real estate.

Prior to entering the realty industry, he was a letter carrier with the U.S. Postal Service in Milton from 1980-2003. Mr. Phelan is a 1974 graduate of North Quincy High School and is a member of the NQHS Basketball Hall of Fame. He returned to his alma mater to coach JV basketball from 1985-1995 and varsity soccer from 1987-1999. He is currently the head varsity basketball coach at Archbishop Williams High School.

Phelan served as manager of the successful campaign of his brother, Quincy Mayor William Phelan, in 2001.

He said he joined Conway because of the company's tradition of excellence and educational programs offered to agents.

Phelan lives in Hingham with his wife, Julie and his two sons, Patrick and Casey.

Customers can contact him at Jack Conway & Co.'s Quincy office, 253 Beale Street, (617) 479-1500.

Founded in 1957, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independent real estate firm in Massachusetts, with more than 710 associates in 41 offices from Boston to Cape Cod. The company, with more than $1.53 billion in sales last year, is ranked among the top 100 real estate firms in the United States by National Relocation and Real Estate Magazine.

A fundraiser to benefit the Sullivan family, who have maintained Sullivan Real Estate, 1245 Hancock St., Quincy, for more than 35 years, will be held Saturday, Dec. 6 from 6 to 9 p.m. at the First Parish Church in Milton, 535 Canton Ave.

The Sullivan Family Celebration of Life will honor Elizabeth Sullivan and her two young daughters, Caroline, age 10, and Macy, 5, all of whom have been diagnosed with Mitochondrial Disease.

The rare genetic disorder can affect the body's ability to metabolize and maintain the energy to complete even simple tasks. It often leads to heart, muscles, kidney, respiratory and cerebral failure.

Those who suffer from this disease may lose their ability to walk, see, hear and breathe. Every day can become a challenge just to survive.

Elizabeth Sullivan, who has a particularly virulent and malignant form of this disease, has spent the past few years undergoing several operations, numerous hospitalizations, drug treatments and blood transfusions leaving her weak, relying on oxygen and unable to walk without assistance. Although there is no treatment or cure for this disease, Elizabeth and her family continue to remain optimistic that one day there will be a cure.

Proceeds from the Dec. 6 fundraiser will be used to assist the Sullivan family in making their home more "handicap friendly" thereby extending her life.

Greg, Elizabeth, Caroline and Macy live in Milton. Greg and his family have maintained Sullivan Real Estate for over 35 years in Quincy.

All proceeds will go directly to The Sullivan Family Fund.

The benefit will feature hors d'oeuvres, wine, drawings, jazz and a silent auction.

For tickets, donations or sponsorship information, call Sandy Cavanaugh at 617-698-4384 or pick up a flyer at Papa Gino's, Granite St., Quincy.

Lunch will be provided.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend this educational workshop. Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the homebuying process, how a home inspection works and other presentations from real estate professionals.

Down payment grants up to $10,000 per family are available for first-time buyers who are purchase-ready and income-eligible. Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

Advanced registration is required. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31 or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

Use Shelves, Storage Units To Conquer All That Stuff

(NAPS) — Stuff! Stuff! Stuff everywhere! The clutter starts to overwhelm. However, life can be simplified and clutter tamed with a few organizational hints and a good shelving or storage system.

Planning: Determine the purpose and style of the unit. Will it be for display or storage? Units come in varying depths and lengths. Identify a location. Ample room for access once the unit is installed is important. Measure the space and determine how many shelves or what size storage unit will be needed — what depth and how far apart shelves should be to accommodate the largest and smallest items in your collection.

Design: Blending various elements and breaking up long lines can make the completed project more interesting. Try arranging shelves around an important photo or piece of art. Get creative with graph paper and design something pleasing and functional.

Purchasing: Take your final ideas to the local hardware or home center. Everything needed should be readily available. Ask the store's professionals for help optimizing your design.

Layout: Save work by doing layout prior to installation. Begin by identifying walls studs for secure placement of your system. The easiest way to locate studs is with an electronic stud finder, such as the Zircon StudSensor Pro SL-AC. It finds studs without guesswork and includes a new WireWarning safety feature so you won't accidentally nail or drill into live AC voltage.

Level and Plumb Installations: This is the final key to success. Anchor the system to the middle of each stud along the wall, checking to be sure that it is plumb (vertically straight) on the wall. Then make sure the slots are leveled precisely. One of the easiest ways to do that is with the new Zircon iLine that generates plumb and level lines in all four directions. This simple and affordable tool turns a once complicated task into child's play.

Final Touches: With the foundation of the unit level and plumb, all that's left is to position the shelves. Then create interest by personalizing the unit with mementos and other items that add to the décor as well as storage space.

The Donna Marie Puppet Show will begin at 7:15 p.m. A Christmas sing-along featuring Santa will commence at 7:45 p.m.

US Marines Collecting Toys For Tots During Parade

US Marine Reservists will carry on their tradition of collecting Toys for Tots during this year's Christmas Parade.

The custom of collecting and distributing toys for needy children began on a nationwide basis 55 years ago and local Marine Reservists will be marching in Quincy's 51st Christmas parade to receive donations.

Last year, the Toys for Tots program provided more than 13.2 million toys to an estimated 6.1 million needy children. In Massachusetts alone, more than 400,000 toys were distributed. Approximately 111,000 of those toys were distributed to children in the Greater Boston/Quincy area.

In Quincy, the Toys for Tots program is directed by the 1st Battalion, 25th Marines with the cooperation of civilians and former Marines.

To donate to the program, the public is encouraged to bring new, unwrapped, non-violent toys to the parade where they will be picked up by the Marines and trucks passing along the three-mile Hancock St. marching route.

THE ALEPPO CLOWNS – a perennial favorite – was among the attractions at last year's Quincy Christmas Festival Parade. Here a miniature train "chugs" its way down Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

Santa To Land At Pageant Field

Santa will be arriving by parachute Saturday at 12:30 p.m. at Pageant Field, near Veterans Stadium.

The move is a change in venue for Santa, who traditionally parachutes in to Faxon Field.

Costume characters will arrive by fire engine at 11:30 a.m. to hand out candy canes to the children.

After their arrival, Santa, elves and the costume characters will leave by fire engine and be driven through Quincy Center to the Quincy Central Fire Station.

Two years ago, Santa was "grounded" due to Federal Aviation Authority regulations following the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11.

Last year, Santa was able to resume his traditional parachute jump from a plane along with four elves.

Sunday Openings No Boon To Quincy Liquor Dealers

The probability of opening on Sunday 52 weeks a year fell on mostly skeptical ears among Quincy liquor store managers.

The option to open on the Sabbath becomes law next week when Gov. Milt Romney, a tee-totaling Mormon himself, signs the permissive legislation.

Most stores will probably stay open the extra day but with some reluctance.

"Where are we going to get qualified help?" asked Brian Timberlake, manager of Atlas Liquors, 661 Adams St., West Quincy.

If we do open on Sunday, I'll just be forced to work another day. Sunday and Friday have always been my days off. If we open without qualified help, there's more possibility of violations."

George Dunean, manager of the Houghs Neck Package Store, 1585 Sea St., entertained similar thoughts.

"All it will do is spread the business out over another day," he said.

He noted that for the past 10 years Sunday openings from Thanksgiving to New Year's Day have been permitted.

"Business is good for the Christmas season," he said. "But year 'round is not the best idea. There won't be any extra sales but we'll need extra help for the extra day which could mean a rise in prices."

Dennis Carson, manager of the Copeland Package Store, 273 Copeland St., West Quincy, said his is one of the rare liquor stores that doesn't plan to open at all on Sunday.

"I'm not going to open," he said. "I'd have to pay my people time and a half. I couldn't sell enough to make it up. Everybody wants to stay home and watch the football game Sunday."

"If you ask me, it's the supermarkets and the lottery that want Sunday openings. They're the ones that are losing money on Sunday."

John, who declined to give his last name, the manager of Presidential Liquors, 23 Scammel St., said local liquor stores have no choice.

"We have to open," he said. "I'm not happy about it. We'll lose our day off. But we have no choice. Everybody else will be open."

About the only one contacted who found a ray of sunshine in the Sunday openings was Michael Shain, manager of Discount Liquors of Quincy, 603 Washington St., Quincy Point.

"I think it will be good," he said. "We're on Route 3A, the road to the beaches, so business should be up during the summer months."

"It will create an extra shift for our employees. Our part-timers have been requesting more hours and they'll get them with the extra shift."

"Ideally," he added, "no one would be open on Sundays but those days are long gone."

It remained for Atlas' Timberlake to question the necessity for Sunday openings when Saturday sales have been doing just fine.

"If you run out of beer on Sunday," he said, "shame on you."

Quincy Presidents vs. North Quincy Red Raiders

'I Don't See A Letdown,' Coach Bob Noble Says

Quincy Has Plenty Of Motivation Against North

CHRIS POISSON
The Quincy Presidents' season culminated in a victory over Plymouth North and next Tuesday's Division 3 Soccer Bowl playoff game, tomorrow's 1st annual Thanksgiving Day showdown seems like a perfect recipe for a letdown on the part of Quincy.

"I really don't see a letdown on our part," said Quincy head coach Bob Noble. "I'd be extremely surprised and disappointed if that happened. We're here to win the Thanksgiving Day game."

The Presidents should have added motivation this year. If they prevail, it will mark their fifth straight Turkey crown, tying the series record with legendary coach Bill Sullivan's teams from 1954-58.

"Right now I want to win on Thanksgiving," Noble repeated. "I want us to be in position to tie Bill Sullivan and the longest winning streak in the series. That's what we're gearing towards, not anything beyond that."

This year's holiday contest is a mismatch on paper. But don't count on Quincy taking its neighbors lightly, even though North Quincy stumbles into the game with an 0-9 record, having been outscored 366-43.

Noble has been in that situation before. In 1999, his first season at the helm, the Presidents dropped their first 10 games to extend their losing streak to 20 games before they marched out of the stadium with an uplifting 21-13 victory over North on Thanksgiving.

"Thanksgiving is just a different situation," Noble said. "I firmly believe that what has happened prior to this means absolutely nothing. I'm approaching this the same way as my first Thanksgiving when we were 0-10."

"North Quincy has worked hard. It hasn't been successful in terms of wins and losses. But those kids have hung in there. Again, I can only refer to my own situation. I've been there."

"The last thing I'm going to do is let our kids think this is something they should look past. We'd be doing a disservice to everyone involved and to the tradition of the game."

Offensively, Quincy's attack revolves around stud tailback J.J. Niamkey, who's a threat to score anytime he touches the ball. The senior quad-captain has 13 touchdowns (eight rushing) and he's chasing his second straight 1,000-yard season with 930 yards.

Like last year, the Presidents also have a quarterback who could reach the 1,000-yard plateau. In his first year, senior Josh Giordani — previously known for his hockey skills — has far exceeded expectations on the gridiron. He's run the team consistently, passing for 885 yards and nine TDs.

"Josh is a winner," Noble said. "He's been successful at everything he's done. I knew he had great leadership qualities and I had hoped he could come in and demonstrate those and simply run the team."

Noble Would Tie Sullivan Streak With Win

Bill Sullivan is Quincy High School's most successful head coach in Thanksgiving Day games.

He went 6-2 against North Quincy from 1952-59. He also led the Presidents to five consecutive wins from 1954-58, the longest win streak in series history. Sullivan lost to the Red Raiders in 1953 and 1959.

Current head coach Bob Noble has won all four of his Thanksgiving Day games and will match Sullivan's five-game winning streak with a win today.

Recreation Programs At Neighborhood Gyms

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct supervised recreation programs in 11 neighborhood school gymnasiums Saturdays beginning Nov. 29.

The programs are free and open to boys and girls age 8 through high school who are Quincy residents. The time varies for each age group. All programs have walk-in registration at each location. Participants may attend the location of their choice.

Quincy Presidents vs. North Quincy Red Raiders

'A David And Goliath' Game, Says Tony Green Underdog North Quincy Needs Some Magic

By CHRIS POISSON

There's no way the North Quincy High School football team has a chance in tomorrow's 71st annual Thanksgiving Day game, right?

It's the winless Red Raiders, who have lost by an average of 36 points, taking on their robust rivals from the other end of town, the play-off-bound Quincy squad.

"If there's ever been a David and Goliath Turkey Day, this is it," said NQ head coach Tony Green. "The kids know that."

So the Presidents may very well be celebrating in the south end zone of Veterans Memorial Stadium with their fifth straight Turkey title tomorrow afternoon.

But...

Any longtime fan of this city rivalry will warn you that the favorite doesn't always come out on top. Maybe, just maybe, this young, hard-working North Quincy group will come through with a magical moment, erasing 11 painful weeks of defeat and frustration.

"The kids should be proud of what they've done this year," Green said. "Thirty-eight kids have stuck it out and hung in there. Hopefully good things will happen on Turkey Day."

It's possible. Quincy clearly had the better team the past two years, but won by only five points in both games. Thanksgiving truly is a unique game, from all the hype built up from pre-game festivities to the biggest crowd of the season. The atmosphere on this day sometimes levels the playing field.

"We're approaching this game like we have nothing to lose," said Green, who'll be coaching his third Thanksgiving game. "The pressure is not on us. We've been working hard all year. At some point this year it will all come together. And there's only one more game and it should all come together during that game."

North Quincy hasn't had much success offensively or defensively, having been outscored by a 366-43 margin. But as Quincy head coach Bob Noble always points out, every year there seems to be an unknown kid that delivers a huge performance. Maybe it's a North Quincy kid this year.

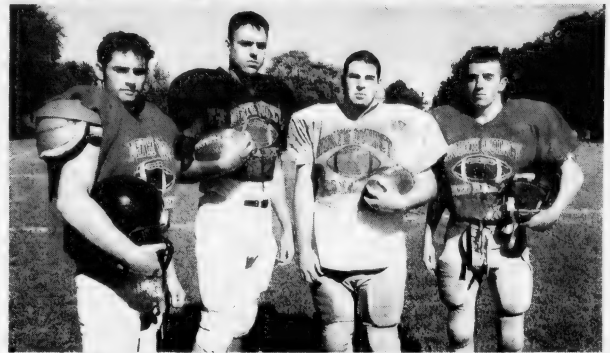

Offensively, senior quarterback and quad-captain Jimmy Burke runs the show and is capable of making plays with both his legs and arm. His targets include senior flanker Kellan Losi, junior split end Tim Kennedy and junior tight end Alex Tringale.

"We have to try to take the air out of the game and slow things down," Green said. "We have to try to keep our offense on the field. Their defense is really good. They're fast, strong, physical. But we're going to try to control the clock and keep the score down. We're keeping Eleven local high school football players received recognition by their respective leagues for their play this season.

Quincy High School, playing in the Atlantic Coast League, had five players honored, three all-stars and two honorable mentions.

Seniors tailback J.J. Niamkey was selected unanimously as a first-team all-star. He has rushed for 930 yards and scored 13 touchdowns.

Burke also received the leagues sportsmanship award.

Top Scorers: Quincy's J. J. Niamkey, North Quincy's Brandon Neves

One familiar face and a newcomer occupy the top spot in the scoring leaders' department in 2003.

Quincy's J.J. Niamkey, the team's leading scorer last year, tops the list for both schools heading into tomorrow's showdown with North Quincy.

The senior tailback with big-play abilities has totaled 82 points, rushing for eight touchdowns, catching two more and returning two punts and a kickoff for scores, in addition to two 2-point conversions.

Senior quarterback Josh Giordani checks in with 26 points with four rushing TDs and a 2-point conversion.

Senior wideout Ian Jorgensen and senior tight end Justin Thorley have 20 points apiece, with each catching three TD passes to go along with a 2-point conversion. Senior wing back Roger Palermo follows with 18 points, rushing for a TD and catching two more.

Senior wideout Jon Banks has a receiving and rushing TD for 12 points and senior Steve Costigliola has booted 12 extra points. Sophomore Everton DeCastro has two PATs and senior Anand Jaggermath one to close out the scoring.

For North Quincy, senior quad-captain and tailback Brandon Neves leads the team with 14 points, rushing and catching a touchdown to go along with a 2-point conversion.

Four players are tied for second with six points. Senior quad-captain and quarterback Jimmy Burke, senior tailback Andy McAllister, junior split end Tim Kennedy and sophomore fullback Mike Regan all scored a touchdown.

Junior tight end Alex Tringale checks in with four points, catching two 2-point conversions. Senior Sean McCormack has kicked an extra point.

CRASH COURSE

About three decades ago, car manufacturers began installing data recorders in vehicles as part of their supplemental restraint systems. Not only do the recorders (and the information that they collect) help improve the performance of airbags, but they also help analyze crashes. This enables anyone with the proper equipment to download pre-crash data and use it to analyze the available information surrounding the crash. With all this mind, federal regulators have been urging the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to mandate the use of data recorders on all vehicles as a means of providing crash data that could help better explain accidents. This would be comparable to the so-called black boxes found on airplanes.

No matter whether your car is a late model or an older car, our ASE Certified service technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will do their part in making sure your car is properly maintained for maximum performance and efficiency. The Series Record:

Quincy 37, North 28 5 Ties In 70 Games

Entering tomorrow's 71st annual Thanksgiving Day game, Quincy High School holds the edge with a 37-28-5 series record.

The contests in 1934, 1937, 1940 and 1983 were scoreless affairs, while the 55th meeting in 1987 ended in a 14-14 stalemate.

The series was last deadlocked at 7-7-3 going into the 1950 game.

The Presidents have won eight of the last nine Turkey Day games and are looking to win their fifth straight in 2003. They won four straight from 1994-97.

The Red Raiders will be trying to rebound after last year's 12-7 loss. They haven't won consecutive games since they three-peated from 1991-93.

Giordani's top target is senior wideout Ian Jorgensen. The 6-foot-5, 215-pound physical receiver has 19 catches for 284 yards, both team-highs, and three touchdowns.

Giordani has spread the ball around, too. Niamkey (15 catches, 221 yards, two TDs), senior tight end Justin Thorley (11-115-3), senior wing back Roger Palermo (10-255-2) and senior wideout Jon Banks (4-60-1) have all gotten in on the action.

Lost in the offense's success is a talented offensive line. This group, which has a combination of size, speed and strength, has opened the holes for Niamkey and protected Giordani, allowing just one sack in a 122 pass attempts.

The league recognized two of them: senior left guard and quad-captain Ed DeWitt was named a first-team all-star and senior right guard and quad-captain Steve Ohlson was an honorable mention. The line also includes junior Marc Hutchins at left tackle, senior Scott Pagington at center and senior Dan Clark at right tackle.

"Our offensive line doesn't get the notoriety," Nobles said. "It was nice for them to receive the recognition. It was deservedly so. Hopefully for the second year in a row we'll have a 1,000-yard rusher and passer. That means something up front is going right."

Defensively, Quincy had its ups and downs, yielding 16 points per game, as it worked in 10 new starters this season. It looked strong in its last outing when it held a potent Plymouth North team to 10 points.

Up front, senior Angelo Venturin and DeWitt are at defensive end, senior Dan Davis and Pagington are at defensive tackle, and senior Ledion Proto is at nose guard.

In the defensive backfield, Niamkey is a shut-down corner and is partnered with a fast and capable Jon Banks. Costigliola is at safety.

The Presidents will try to pressure NQ senior quarterback Jimmy Burke, who has the ability to create offense with his running and passing skills.

"Jimmy Burke has really worked his backside off this year," Noble said. "He throws the ball very well. We can't let him sit back there and throw. We'll get hurt doing that. We have to get after him and have him make decisions before he'd like to."

Noble said his team also has to be aware of senior tailback Brandon Neves and junior tight end Alex Tringale.

"They've got some good high school football players," Noble said. "We're very respectful of everything they do. They've got some offensive threats that can be effective."

As heavy favorites and with a bigger game on the horizon, Quincy knows it must focus solely on Thanksgiving with the Red Raiders.

"North Quincy is going to be hungry," Nobles said. "This is their moment. I'm sure they're going to do everything they can to be successful. I'm sure they're going to pull out all the stops to succeed. We have to be ready for that."

Comebacks, Heart-Breakers In Battle For Bragging Rights

Last-second comebacks and painful heartbreakers have turned the Quincy-North Quincy high school football rivalry into an annual fight for city bragging rights.

Close, competitive games have defined the series.

Sixteen of the last 20 meetings have been decided by eight points or less.

In 1997, Quincy edged North Quincy, 7-0, on a late fourth-quarter touchdown run by Nathan DoRosario.

That game, along with the '85, '87, '89 and '93 matches, ended on the final play of the game.

In 1984 and 1994 the Presidents grabbed interceptions in the final minutes to thwart North Quincy's comeback bids.

The only game to go into overtime was in 1975, which the Red Raiders won, 15-8.

Of the 70 meetings, 40 have been decided by eight points or less. The outcome has been greater than two scores in only 18 games.

Quincy Playoff Game(s?) To Air On WJDA 1300

WJDA Radio 1300 AM will broadcast the Quincy High School football team's Division 3 Super Bowl playoff game Tuesday, Dec. 2, against Mansfield at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The game is scheduled for 6 or 7 p.m. If the Presidents win, WJDA will also broadcast the Super Bowl Saturday, Dec. 6.

Charlie Ross will do the play-by-play with Brian Malone on color.

The playoff game is special for Ross, who has been calling the games since 1973.

Prior to this season, every local team WJDA covered had been in a Super Bowl game except Quincy. It was an emotional moment for Ross when the Presidents clinched the playoff berth with the victory over Plymouth North Nov. 14.

"I told (head coach) Bob Noble at the start of the year that everybody had made it to the big game but Quincy and that the heat was on him now as the last team," Ross said.

"I never dreamed that it would happen this year, but it did. So with the bowl game for Quincy, I will have broadcast every one of the WJDA 'home teams' in the big game."

Quincy's 1970 Team Perfect 9-0

Quincy's 1970 team, coached by Hank Conroy, ran through its opponents on its way to a spotless 9-0 record.

That year, the Presidents knocked off North Quincy,

16-6, and captured the Greater Boston League title.

fourth and then pull out all the stops. That's the game plan."

Defensively, North Quincy's line features Powers at nose guard, senior Peter Vellinueva and Sommers at defensive tackle and junior Jon Griffith and Tringale at defensive end. At line-backer, senior quad-captain Mike Dolbeare mans the middle with Neves and Wong on the outside. The backfield includes Burke and Losi at the corners with senior Sean McCormack at safety.

This unit will have its hands full trying to slow down Quincy's potent offense. Not only does it have to deal with all-star tailback J.J. Niamkey, a huge playmaker, but it also has to contend with an effective passing game led by quarterback Josh Giordani and receiver Ian Jorgensen.

"Quincy is outstanding," Green said. "I don't think they're going to overlook us. I could never blame them for preparing for a playoff game, but I think they'll be ready for us. They're just going to do what they do well. When you're winning you don't change anything. You keep on beating people up, which is what they've been doing."

As North Quincy has hit "rock-bottom of the rebuilding process," a victory over Quincy tomorrow would push the program forward and be a nice reward for the kids who've toughed out the season.

"The coaches would really like to see the kids come out with a win," Green said. "They've worked so hard and don't have any wins to show for it. The coaches, we'll be OK. We've all coached undefeated teams."

"But these poor kids, this is it for some of them. They feel as though this is the second season. We didn't do all that well in the first season, but we've worked hard and it's going to pay off in the second season."

Joe Rogers Donates Exhibit On NQHS Sports Pioneers

Quincy resident Joe Rogers has donated an exhibit to North Quincy High School on the school's sports pioneers.

A 1935 North Quincy High graduate, Rogers was a member of North Quincy's first football team in 1932. He also played on the 1933 and 1934 squads.

The exhibit includes an identified photo of the 1932 team and game results from that 5-2 season. Also featured are photos of the 1932 wrestling and basketball teams, with articles from the "Manet" school magazine about those teams, and a prologue written by Rogers.

Four years ago, Rogers discovered that North Quincy High's history was never recorded. He researched old Manet magazines, beginning with the January 1928 issue. It took him over six months to complete.

Rogers also recorded on audio tape North Quincy High's history from day one through the Class of 1938's graduation. Copies can be found in the school library and at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

"My hope is that some person will pick up and continue on with North Quincy High School's history, so it can be known and not lost," Rogers said. "Hopefully this information can become part of the sports pioneers story. One can visit North to view the exhibit as displayed upon entering the front door in the ball display case."

Quincy, North Winless Against Lone Common Opponent

Playing in separate leagues, the Quincy and North Quincy high school football teams had only one common opponent this year: Plymouth South.

Neither team could pull out a victory over the Panthers.

On Oct. 3, the Presidents held a 12-7 lead in the third quarter before settling for a 12-12 stalemate. On Oct. 24, the Red Raiders suffered a 46-0 loss.

As for the rest of the schedule, Quincy faced some tough competition in the Atlantic Coast League. Plymouth North, Whitman-Hanson and Nauset have a combined 19-9 record.

North Quincy also took on powerhouses in the Old Colony League: Marshfield, Bridgewater-Raynham, Falmouth and Silver Lake have a combined 28-10-2 mark.

Kozlowski & Sons Win Under 12 Boys Soccer Championship

Kozlowski & Sons recently squeaked by the Rhinos, 4-3, in an overtime shoot-out to capture the Quincy Youth Soccer Under 12 Boys championship. Trailing 2-1 with four seconds remaining in regulation. Jared Sheils netted the equalizer to send the game into overtime. Mike Stanton scored the first goal.

After two scoreless 10-minute periods, the game went to a five-man shoot-out. The Rhinos scored once, while Derek Matthies and Kevin Therrien scored for Kozlowski & Sons.

Quincy Jayvees Edge North, 7-0

The Quincy High School junior varsity football team edged North Quincy, 7-0, last Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

With less than four minutes left in the game, running back Everton DeCastro scored on a 4-yard run to give the Presidents the lead.

DeCastro also added the extra point.

North Quincy put together a few successful drives in the game, but Quincy's defense prevented them from scoring.

Quincy's Tim Randall, Bill Wilkinson, Chris Pratt,

Kevin French, John Brooks and DeCastro turned in solid defensive efforts.

The Red Raiders had one last chance with under a minute remaining but came up unsuccessful. Quincy finished the season with a 7-2 record.

12 Former Players Inducted Into QHS-NQHS Football Hall Of Fame

The Quincy-North Quincy High School Football Hall of Fame inducted 17 new members, including 12 former players, Tuesday at the Quincy Sons of Italy, Quarry Street.

The players: Bill Knowles (class of 1945), Nick DiLoretto ('58), Cliff

Matteson ('70), Jeff Giordani ('79) and Bill Dunn Jr. ('96), all of Quincy; and Ed Swindler ('41), Bill Sweeney ('56), John Mayer ('72), Lou DiPietro ('81) and Bill MacDougall ('87), all of North Quincy.

Jack Kilrane ('37) of Quincy and Loyd Carroll

('47) of North Quincy were inducted posthumously.

Special inductees were George Norris of Quincy and Joe and Cathy Minukis of North Quincy.

Cheerleaders were Roberta DiTullio Martin ('89) and Carol McGibbon McGee ('55), both of Quincy.

Red Raiders Undefeated In 1966, 1992

North Quincy High School has strutted into the Thanksgiving Day game with an unblemished record twice, 1966 and 1992, in the 71 annual matches.

Ken McPhee played a role in both as the starting guard on the '66 team and the head coach of the '92 club.

The '66 group finished the regular season with a 9-0 record. It captured the Greater Boston League title, shared the Class A crown with Arlington and blanked Quincy, 8-0.

The '92 squad compiled an 11-0 record to win the Old Colony League title. It knocked off Arlington to become Division 1B Super Bowl champs and also shut out Quincy, 20-0.

Lung Cancer Screening Trial Seeks Participants

Current or former smokers worried about their risk of lung cancer may be eligible to take part in the National Lung Cancer Screening Trial (NLST), which will compare the effectiveness of two different lung cancer detection methods: spiral computed tomography (spiral CT) or traditional X-rays. Lung cancer is the leading cause of cancer deaths, and it is estimated that this disease will kill more than 57,000 Americans in 2003 alone.

Spiral CT is a new technology that gives radiologists the ability to detect smaller tumors than found with chest X-rays, which could mean an earlier diagnosis.

Current or former smokers, 55-74 years old, who have never had lung cancer and who have not had any other cancer in the last five years, and who are not currently enrolled in any other cancer screening or prevention trial. Participants will receive free lung cancer screening for the next three years, and will be followed by medical professionals through 2009. Participants who are interested in quitting smoking will receive referrals to smoking cessation programs. For more information about NLST, call the National Cancer Institute at 1-800-4-CANCER or the American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-4904.

The eight-year NLST, which will enroll 50,000 current and former smokers ages 55-74, seeks to prove which method—spiral CT or X-ray, is more effective at actually preventing lung cancer deaths. The NLST study will be conducted at two medical centers in Boston: Brigham and Women's Hospital and Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center.

Those interested in participating in the NLST must be current or former smokers.

Squash The Flu Bug This And Every Season

(NAPS) — Influenza causes serious illness and even death, particularly among Americans over 65 years of age. But the disease is vaccine-preventable so there is no reason anyone should get the flu. In fact, you can squash the flu bug right in its tracks by asking your health care provider for a flu shot each and every flu season.

The National Foundation of Infectious Diseases (NFID) has joined forces with Dr. Joyce Brothers, America's well-known psychologist and dispenser of health-conscious advice, to issue a public health alert about the severe risks associated with influenza and the importance of annual vaccination.

"For years I've counseled Americans on ways to live happier, healthier lives and getting a flu shot is a simple way to protect you and your family's health," says Dr. Brothers. "I encourage every family to make flu vaccination a part of their annual health routine."

New research shows that influenza is responsible for more than 114,000 hospitalizations and 36,000 deaths annually—more deaths than AIDS. Vaccination is especially important for those at risk for influenza-related complications including the elderly and those with chronic illnesses. Family members should get vaccinated against influenza to avoid transmitting the flu to another member in their household.

"Influenza is a very serious disease that can keep you and your family out of work and school for days if not protected," says Dr. William Schaffner, M.D., of NFID, and professor and chairman of the Department of Preventive Medicine at Vanderbilt University School of Medicine. "Flu immunization is most important for those at risk for complications from influenza, and we encourage these groups, as well as anyone wishing to avoid the flu, to seek vaccination beginning in October."

Are You At Risk For Complications From The Flu?

Groups considered at risk for developing serious influenza-related complications include the elderly; adults and children with chronic diseases such as asthma and diabetes; and pregnant women who will be in their second or third trimester of pregnancy during the influenza season. Influenza vaccination is also recommended for those 50 to 64 years of age, household contacts of at-risk individuals and health care workers who care for at-risk patients.

The CDC now encourages vaccination for healthy children aged 6 to 23 months, as they have an increased risk of influenza-related hospitalizations. Children younger than 9 years receiving influenza vaccine for the first time require two doses, one month apart.

Anyone who wishes to decrease his or her risk of influenza infection is also encouraged to seek vaccination.

When Should You Get Vaccinated?

You should seek a flu vaccination beginning in October through December. Since the flu season peaks between January and March, getting immunized in December and beyond is still beneficial.

Who Should Not Get Vaccinated?

The only people who should not receive a flu shot are those who have had previous reactions to the vaccine or people allergic to eggs (the viruses used in the vaccine are grown in eggs) or egg products. Adults with a fever should wait until symptoms disappear or should consult a health care provider about receiving the vaccine. However, the vaccine may be given to children with mild upper respiratory tract infections or those with minor illnesses with or without fever.

How Influenza Spreads

Influenza viruses are spread into the air by sneezing and coughing. The virus can also be spread by direct contact with people who have the flu. People who get the flu experience a high fever, chills, a dry cough, headache, runny nose, sore throat, muscle and joint pain, and extreme fatigue lasting several days to weeks.

About The Influenza Vaccine

Influenza vaccine is safe and effective. The most common side effect is soreness at the vaccination site that can last up to two days. Some people may have mild fever or feel tired for a day or two after receiving the influenza vaccine. Influenza vaccine is made from killed strains of the viruses predicted to be the main causes of influenza in the coming season. Because the viruses are dead, it is impossible to get influenza from the vaccine.

For more information about influenza and vaccination, contact your physician or local health care provider, or visit the CDC Web site (www.cdc.gov) or the NFID Web site (www.nfid.org).

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
WHITE AT HOME

Patients whitening their teeth overnight at home will be outfitted with tight-fitting, custom-made plastic molds that fit over their teeth. These trays hold the whitening gel, which attacks stains and discoloration within the tooth structure itself. The effect of bleaching varies from patient to patient. Teeth in the gray and gray/brown range don't lighten as well as those in the yellow and yellow/brown range. The change in tooth color is measured in units of standardized shade guides. An analysis of seven placebo-controlled clinical trials of dentist-prescribed home bleaching found that 73% of patients exhibited a change of at least two units, a modest but discernible lightening. Twenty percent of patients can expect a change of five units or more.

We would be happy to answer any questions you may have about tooth whitening. We're located at 44 Greenleaf St., where we provide cosmetic dentistry, implants, root canals, crowns and bridges, as well as general dentistry treatment for the entire family. We feel that cosmetic dentistry cannot only change the way other people see you, but it can also greatly improve the way you see yourself. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. An alternative to weeks of home whitening is a single in-office treatment that uses very high concentrations of hydrogen peroxide.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Thanksgiving is a day that is not for sale. One doesn't exchange Thanksgiving gifts. One doesn't buy new clothes to wear to Grandma's or Aunt Mary's house for Thanksgiving dinner. Even television can't use it to increase ratings...

Thanksgiving is not a day for kids; nor a day for adults. It is a day for families...

For mothers and fathers, grandkids, aunts and uncles, grandparents, one might call Thanksgiving a day of anticipation... It begins the moment the turkey comes out of the refrigerator, pale and clammy, and lasts until the remains return there in plastic wrap. In between, it is a day of smells and warmth. It is a day of conversation and a day of mingling aromas of pumpkin and cinnamon and yams and over them all the essence of turkey. It is a day of closeness.

But if dinner is the focus of Thanksgiving, it is not the ultimate reward. The satisfaction comes afterward, when conversation grows softer and movement grows slower and simply being together is all that's really important.

That's the way Thanksgiving has always been and it is this reassuring sameness that makes it one of the best of our holidays... It is the kind of feeling that even the very best store does not, and cannot, sell...

King Crossword Answers

Magic maze Answers FOR DUMMIE BOOKS

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A project benefits from your organizational skills that get it up and running. Your success leaves a highly favorable impression. Don't be surprised if you get some positive feedback soon.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Spend time on practical matters through the 28th. Then begin shifting your focus to more-artistic pursuits. Resist being overly self-critical. Just allow yourself to feel free to create.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Restarting those creative projects you had set aside for a while will help provide a much-needed soothing balance to your hectic life. Besides, it will be like meeting old friends again.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A change in plans could make it tough to keep a commitment. But stay with it. You'll get an A-plus for making the effort to do what's right and not taking the easy way out by running off.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Lion's enthusiasm for a workplace policy review is admirable. But be sure you know who is really behind the resistance to change before pointing your finger at the wrong person.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You can expect to have to do a lot of work through the 27th. Devote the rest of the week to checking your holiday plans in case some need to be adjusted to accommodate changes.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Try to avoid signing on the dotted line in the early part of the week.

You need time to study issues that weren't fully explored. The 27th and 28th might be more favorable for decision-making.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A new development could snarl travel schedules or other holiday-linked projects. Some flexibility might be called for to deal with the problems before they get too far out of hand.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Relatives seek your advice on a matter you'd rather not be involved in. If so, use that sage Sagittarian tact to decline the "offer," so that no one's feelings are needlessly hurt.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A shift in planning direction might help you speed up your progress toward achieving that long-planned goal. Trusted colleagues are ready to offer some valuable support.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An unexpected demand for settlement of an old loan could create some pre-holiday anxiety. But you might not really owe it. Check your records thoroughly before remitting payment.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It's a good time to get into the social swim and enjoy some well-earned fun and games with those closest to you before you have to resume more serious activities next week.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your ability to sense the needs of others makes you a wise counselor for those seeking help with their problems.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Registry Of Deeds Sponsors Holiday Food Pantry Drive

The Registry of Deeds Holiday Food Drive has begun in Dedham and will continue through Monday, Dec. 22.

A bin at the public address station inside the Registry building at 649 High St. is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. to accept donations.

Non-perishable food items like hot and cold cereal, canned vegetables, boxed and canned spaghetti, macaroni and cheese, spaghetti sauce and baby food are sought.

Gillette Donates $5,000 For Reading At Parker School

The Gillette Company, which has been partnered with the Francis W. Parker Elementary School since 1997, has contributed $5,000 to the school to promote reading proficiency.

A portion of the fund will be used to purchase books and establish a listening center for the school's large English as a Second Language group. More than 60 per cent of Parker's students are Asian.

The check was presented before the entire student body, which was gathered for a performance by the fourth grade class entitled: "Being Thankful."

Following the performance and presentation of the check, the students were presented with their monthly citizenship and homework awards.

Each week, people from GROUP (Gillette Retirees Outreach Program) visit Parker classrooms to provide encouragement and support services to students.

Volunteers offer students one-on-one reading and writing support, conduct small group math and science lessons, staff the library and run an after school MCAS fifth grade science class.

Gillette also makes an annual contribution to the school which allows the Parker to be affiliated with the national Reading Is Fundamental (RIF) Program.

20 Percent Increase On Tax Bills Possible Council To Vote On Tax Rates Dec. 15

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

A vote to set the city's tax classification for fiscal 2004 was put off until Dec. 15, but a 20 percent rise in property taxes for homeowners may be on the horizon, according to city officials.

During Monday night's annual public hearing on the city's tax classification, Marion Fantucchio, chairwoman of the board of assessors, said the average single family homeowner would see a $605 rise in property taxes if the tax classification were to remain at the current 169 percent. Fantucchio presented an overview of the proposed tax classifications and how they would affect homeowners and business owners.

The city uses a tax classification formula that requires businesses to pay a rate that is 169 percent of the tax rate that would have been if there had been no shift in classification. Raising the classification to 175 percent is the legal limit that can be charged commercial property in relation to that charged for homeowners and which lowers the residential rate. Increasing the percentage rate shifts the tax burden to businesses.

Mayor William Phelan recommends holding the tax classification at 169 percent.

A 169 percent classification would cost the average single-family homeowner an additional $605 - a 20 percent increase over last year, according to the city's calculations.

Much of the increase is due to a rise in property valuations, Fantucchio said.

In fiscal 2003, the average single-family homeowner paid approximately $3,089 in property taxes. That number would jump to $3,694 in fiscal 2004 under 169 percent, she said.

The tax rate for homeowners in fiscal 2004 would actually drop 87 cents, to $12.75, on a $1,000 of assessed value. But the average valuation of a home jumped $62,000 over last year, resulting in the increase, she said.

According to Fantucchio, the average single family home is assessed at $289,700 for fiscal 2004, up from $226,800 last year.

Councillors Voice Opposition To Measure Vote On Mooring Fees Delayed Until Dec. 15

Boaters who moor their vessels in Quincy waters will have to wait a bit longer to find out whether they will start paying mooring fees, as the city council Monday night postponed a vote on the issue until Dec. 15.

But the measure appears headed for defeat because several councillors indicated they could not support the ordinance in its current form.

Ordinance Committee Chairman Greg Hanley postponed taking action on the matter, saying the Phelan administration had requested more time to prepare before it makes its case. A number of legal questions deserve a full airing before the council votes, according to Thomas Largey, Mayor William Phelan's executive secretary.

Councillors Joseph Finn and Frank McCauley, along with Ward Councillors Joe Newton, Doug Gutro, Kevin Coughlin and Dan Raymondi, all indicated they would vote against the proposal when it comes up on Dec. 15 at 6 p.m. A public comment period will follow the administration's presentation.

"There are sufficient votes in the council to defeat this plan," McCauley told his colleagues. "But I'm willing to give the mayor his day in court and let him make his case."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin called his initial support for the ordinance a "mistake" and a "knee-jerk reaction."

Coughlin said the city should create a "Maritime Affairs Committee," dedicated to addressing boating issues. "I would like to see all of us sit at the table and come to some consensus and common ground."

Finn said the mayor should refine the proposal and re-file it next year. The current measure "is not a very good piece of legislation," he said.

Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly was not present at

Meeting To Address QHS Environmental Impact Report

A public meeting addressing the city's Environmental Impact Report of the new Quincy High School project will be held Tuesday, Dec. 9 at 6 p.m. in the main branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Ward 5 Councilor Doug Gutto and Ward 1 Councilor Greg Hanley are sponsoring the event and will attend.

QHS Senior Night Out Meeting Dec. 11

Parents interested in participating in Quincy High Senior Night out will meet on Thursday, Dec. 11 at 7 p.m. in the Pride Room at Quincy High School.

Taxpayers Head Condemns Projected $605 Tax Boost

Alan Cousin, president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, has condemned the projected $605 increase in the average annual residential tax bill in Quincy.

Marion Fantucchio, chairwoman of the Board of Assessors, told the City Council Monday night that the average value of a home in Quincy had increased by $70,000 in 2003.

Given a continuation of the 169 percent classification for commercial property, residential taxpayers would be paying an average of $605 more in taxes for Fiscal 2004.

Classification for Fiscal 2004 has not yet been set but even if it were set at the maximum 175 percent residential taxpayers would still pay $550 more.

"Classification isn't the problem," said Cousin. "There may be a problem with assessments. Why, after all, should the average value of a home have increased $70,000 in a non-revaluation year?"

"The real problem is with the amount the city is spending."

Cousin noted that this is the second $600-plus increase in the average residential tax bill in three years.

ALAN COUSIN

"How long is this to go on?" asked Cousin. "Who's going to be able to afford to live in Quincy if this keeps up?"

Cousin said he sees no reason to expect a change unless and until Quincy taxpayers get fed up enough to get together and act.

"The QTA has been harping on city government about its spending for the past two years to no avail," he said.

"Why? Because we're the only taxpayers organization there is and, even with 66 members, we're still too small to matter."

"Even our own members aren't motivated enough to stand up for their interests, so we get nothing but lip service from our elected officials."

"Yet, on Dec. 1, when 100 boat owners packed City Council chambers for a hearing on mooring fees, you could almost see the councilors shaking."

"Taxpayers have to be able to exert the same kind of pressure or pretty soon we'll all be looking for new places to live."

Raise $3,900 For Father Bill's Place

Employees of the North Quincy trademark research firm of Thomson & Thomson have raised $3,900 for Father Bill's Place, which provides shelter, food and support to the homeless.

"The event is an opportunity for employees to have fun for a good cause," said Barry Gale, vice president of Human Resources at Thomson & Thomson.

"Our employees have held a fund-raising event for Father Bill's Place every Thanksgiving for the past seven years. This year's event set a new record, thanks to the generosity of our employees and the numerous local businesses who made donations."

The donations came from Anthony Palmer Hair Salon, Aria Salon & Spa, Capt. Fishbone's Restaurant, Siro's Restaurant and Thomson & Thomson, all of Quincy, and Blasi's Cafe, The Fat Belly Deli, George Tavern, Lenox Hotel, Millennium Bostonian Hotel and WHDH-TV, all of Boston.

The Thomson & Thomson employees also gathered seven turkeys and more than 15 boxes of non-perishable food items for Father Bill's Place.

Five Mayors Among Those Helping Needy 48 Community Leaders Team To Ring Bell For Salvation Army

Forty-eight community leaders — including five mayors — will ring the bell in Quincy Center beginning Friday to help the Salvation Army help those in need this holiday season.

The five mayors are Mayor William Phelan and former Mayors Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia, Frank McCauley and Arthur Tobin, clerk magistrate at Quincy District Court.

Joining the cause this year will be the Fox 25 Morning News Team taking one of the shifts at the kettle, bringing the total volunteers to 51.

The kettle will be relocated this year to the McIntyre Mall area outside City Hall.

Mayor Phelan has proclaimed December "Salvation Army Month" in Quincy, urging "all citizens, government agencies, public and private institutions, businesses and schools to join in providing for those less fortunate this holiday season."

This is the seventh year that community leaders have volunteered to man the "Celebrity Kettle" on one-hour shifts from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

this Friday, Thursday, Dec. 11, and Friday, Dec. 12.

They ask friends, colleagues and others to stop by and "help fill the kettle" to help the many in need of help especially in these difficult times.

Money raised will go directly to the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, 6 Baxter St., to aid local families.

Major Doug Jones who with his wife, Major Linda Jones, are co-commanders of the Quincy Temple Corps expressed his appreciation to the community leaders, Fox 25 and all other volunteers for their help this year.

"We are most grateful to these community leaders for taking time from their busy work schedules to help us with our Christmas Kettle efforts. Because of them and other volunteers, Christmas will be a little brighter for many in need."

Jones thanked Quincy's service clubs, businesses, organizations and individuals volunteering to man kettles at various stores and other locations.

But he added: "As always, we still need more help."

Any person or group wishing to volunteer a day, a part of a day, or an hour or two to man a kettle is asked to contact the Quincy Temple Corps at 617-472-2345.

"We would be most appreciative," Jones said.

The community leaders' kettle schedule:

Red Cross Blood Drive Dec. 29

The American Red Cross will hold a blood drive on Monday, Dec. 29 from 1 to 7 p.m. at the Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

Nearly 1,600 units of blood are needed each day to help those in need in this community, according to Red Cross officials. This makes it a challenge to collect enough blood to meet the needs of hospital patients each year.

Anyone 17 years of age or older, weighing 110 pounds or more and feeling in good health may be eligible to donate blood. Call 1-800-GIVE-LIFE (1-800-448-3543) with any questions about donating blood, or visit www.newenglandblood.org.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Dec. 2, 1823, President James Monroe proclaims a new U.S. foreign-policy initiative that becomes known as the "Monroe Doctrine." It forbade European interference in the American hemisphere but also asserted U.S. neutrality in regard to future European conflicts.

• On Dec. 6, 1907, in West Virginia's Marion County, 361 coal miners are killed in an explosion in a network of mines owned by the Fairmont Coal Company. In ensuing decades, labor unions and sympathetic legislators forced safety regulations that brought a steady decline in death rates in West Virginia and elsewhere.

• On Dec. 7, 1925, future Tarzan actor Johnny Weissmuller sets the world record for the 150-yard freestyle swim. Weissmuller would go on to win five gold medals in the 1928 Olympics.

• On Dec. 5, 1933, the 21st Amendment to the U.S. Constitution is ratified, repealing the 18th Amendment and bringing an end to the era of national prohibition of alcohol in America.

• On Dec. 1, 1934, Sergey Kirov, a leader of the Russian Revolution and a high-ranking member of the Politburo, is shot to death at his Leningrad office by Communist Party member Leonid Nikolayev, likely at the instigation of Soviet leader Joseph Stalin.

• On Dec. 3, 1967, in Cape Town, South Africa, 53-year-old grocer Lewis Washkansky receives the first human heart transplant. Although the heart functioned normally, drugs administered to keep his body from rejecting the heart also left him susceptible to illness, and he died from double pneumonia 18 days later.

• On Dec. 4, 1992, President George H. Bush orders 28,000 U.S. troops to Somalia, a war-torn East African nation where rival warlords were preventing the distribution of humanitarian aid to thousands of starving Somalis.

The Council President Springboard

The city council presidency is often looked on as the political springboard to the mayor's office.

But it really doesn't have as much spring in that direction as you might think.

Frank McCauley in January will become the 50th individual in Quincy's 115 years as a city to serve as council president.

McCauley, a Quincy political historian and author, decided out of curiosity to do a little research on his predecessors.

And, came up with some interesting trivia nuggets that take much of the bounce out of that springboard theory.

Of the 49 who have served as council president between 1889 and 2003, he discovered, only 12 became mayor.

And, only four of them went directly from council president to the mayor's office:

Henry Fairbanks in 1891; Charles Bryant, 1902; Joseph Whiton, 1917; and Arthur Tobin, 1978.

In the quarter of a century since Tobin, no council president has directly stepped from the council chambers into the mayor's office.

McCauley will share historic footnote with Bryant when he succeeds Daniel Raymondi as president in January.

Bryant, through 115 years, is the only mayor to leave that office and then return to City Hall and become council president.

Bryant served five years as council president, four before becoming mayor in 1900-1901. He later returned to the city council and became council president for a fifth year in 1911-10 years after leaving the mayor's office.

In January - 93 years later - McCauley will be only the second former mayor to become council president.

McCauley served four terms as mayor from 1982 to 1989 and decided not to seek a fifth term.

But back to the city council he went in 1998 and has been there ever since. He topped the council at-large field in the November city election and says this will be his last term - his "last hurrah."

The eight other council presidents who later became mayor - but not directly - were:

James Thompson (1905-1907), Charles Ross (1933-March, 1935) (1943-1949), Thomas Burgin (1935-1942), David McIntosh (1952-1953 Plan E), Amelio Della Chiesa (1958-1965), James McIntyre (1966-1971), Joseph LaRaia (1976-1977) and James Sheets (1990-2001).

Tobin holds the city council presidency record with eight years, with Ross runner-up with six. Bryant's five gives him the third spot.

Four presidents served four years: Ralph Hobbs (1908-1910), Joseph Whiton (1913-1916), Alfred Richards (1917-1920) and Peter Kolson (1996-1999).

Since Kolson, council presidents have been limited to two one-year terms.

Current Mayor William Phelan broke a long-time political tradition when he won that stunning 17-vote victory over six-term incumbent James Sheets in 2001.

At that time he was the first Quincy mayor in 79 years who did not come out of the city council. The last was Gustave Bates who in a political comeback defeated incumbent William Bradford in 1922.

McCauley won't be thinking about the presidency as a springboard to the mayor's office when he takes the gavel in January. He's been there, done that.

But there will be some personal satisfaction. For him, it will be like politically hitting the cycle.

He is now, at age 73, completing his 30th year in municipal elective office and is the only one to have held all four offices: mayor, councillor at-large, ward councillor and school committee member.

As mayor, he was also chairman of the school committee. But until now, the council presidency eluded him. This will be the frosting on the political cake.

And there could be some political comfort in all of this for Dan Raymondi.

Raymondi decided not to try out his council presidency as a springboard to the mayor's office this year.

There are those who think he may have missed the boat.

But those eight council presidents who were delayed a few years on their way to the mayor's office, would seem to keep his mayor aspirations afloat.

NQ Students See 'Real World' At Blue Cross Blue Shield

Business students at North Quincy High School had a chance to see what it's like in the "real world" this week when they spent and will spend two half days in the Quincy offices of Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts.

The two half days, Tuesday and Thursday, with the Blues is designed to help better prepare the students for the job-hunting process. They were screened by human resources personnel by the same test given to entry-level job applicants.

The coordinator of the program was Gingy Fidalgo, a teacher at NQHS, received a similar experience in August when she took part in the Quincy Teacher Extern Program organized by the Quincy School Partnership and the Blues.

The program provided business and technology teachers from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools with a week-long inside look at the work environment to which their students will one day apply.

"The week I spent at Blue Cross impacted by lesson plan tremendously," said Fidalgo.

"To be able to say to students that I spent a week at Blue Cross this summer and saw first hand how things are done, that I didn't just read it in a book, that I took their tests and answered their interview questions. That was incredibly valuable to me."

Fidalgo said she hopes her students will find their experience to be just as valuable.

Back Safety Screenings On Dec. 10

Milton Chiropractic will conduct the screenings. Dr. Smith will teach attendees how to recognize warning signs and how to avoid potential dangers. He will also teach the mechanics of the back and demonstrate strengthening exercises.

The trolley tracks lead south on Hancock Street to the intersection with Granite Street where the Bethany Congregational Church stood on the site of today's FleetBark building. Squantum Yacht Club Opposes Mooring Fees

Since 1892 Squantum Yacht Club has been offering support to boaters of the city of Quincy by offering a club for working class people who work hard all week and whose only recreation is the small boat. We have always been and continue to be a working person's club.

We oppose the city's consideration of a mooring fee for boaters because we represent working class boaters. We would hope that the city council would be in agreement as they represent working class people.

The argument that Quincy is somehow behind the curve, as being one of only two communities that do not charge a mooring fee is spurious. Has the council considered the fact that Quincy does not charge a mooring fee, a good thing? Our city by not taxing (we consider a mooring fee nothing short of a tax) its boaters makes Quincy a better, not worse city.

We would urge the council to not further burden the working person by taking one of the few recreations they can afford.

Bush Trip Deserves Highest Praise

Our President deserves the highest praise not only in English and Arabic, but it any other language in between, for having visited our troops in Iraq. "for a Thanksgiving dinner."

We cannot help having sympathy for Iraqis' regret that our President did not visit with Iraqis themselves, Ellen Lohan and Mollie Durkin, both of Quincy, were on the Honor Roll at Ursuline Academy for the 2002-2003 school year.

not even with all members of the Iraqis' Government Council. The Iraqis must understand, however, that for our President to have stayed longer than 2 1/2 hours would have been risky and dangerous for his life. The American troops, on the other hand, may wonder why it is dangerous for our President to be in Iraq and not dangerous for them to be in a country which we liberated from a non-democratic system of government. Are the lives of our military more expendable than the life of our President?

Not to be outgunned by our President, former First Lady, Senator Hillary Clinton visited the next day not only Iraq, but also Afghanistan! While in Iraq, the former First Lady made a statement that the U.N. also ought to be engaged in Iraq. It is unbelievable that a woman, who fantasizes to become the first woman American President, would want now the U.N. to be involved in Iraq, when it was she, who gave advice to President Bush, on Meet The Press, before the war on Iraq started, that just as President Clinton did not need U.N. authorization to bomb Serbia, so also President Bush did not need the U.N. approval to invade Iraq!

(Those of us who criticize our President on Iraq must never forget that it was the United States Congress which gave our President a carte blanche to go ahead on Iraq.)

NO EXTENSION IN TRANSIT RE-ORGANIZATION
A new state agency was proposed to operate and finance the Metropolitan Transit Authority, but no plan for a long awaited South Shore extension was included.

Quincy legislators Joseph Brett and James McIntyre, however, filed bills to include the new service. Brett's plan called for express bus service to operate on the Old Colony right of way; McIntyre's would mandate Budd cars.

McIntyre insisted the Budd cars were the only alternative to MTA extension, noting "the people of the South Shore voted in favor of Budd cars and the majority of legislators from the area have favored them as an alternative to the MTA extension."

George Yarrington of the Quincy Taxpayers' Association said a third proposal for an extension of the MTA was still under study by the Citizens' Transit Study Committee, headed by Dr. Charles Djerf.

It was proposed that the new project be named after slain President Kennedy.

Second Annual 'Tree Of Angels' Ready For Memorials Saturday

The Trainor family of 64 Faxon Rd., North Quincy, will assemble their second annual "Tree of Angels" Saturday, Dec. 6, this time with the help of a whole Girl Scout troop.

The Trainors will put up the tree, larger than last year's nine-foot Douglas Fir, at 9 a.m. so it will be ready at 12 noon to receive ornaments from those who wish to memorialize loved ones.

Last year, the first for the "Tree of Angels," more than 125 ornaments, accompanied by red ribbons with individuals' names, were placed on the tree by friends and strangers during the Christmas season.

A photo of the tree and the story behind it on page one of The Quincy Sun attracted the attention of Girl Scout Troop 4157 of Wollaston, who wrote to Ginny Trainor offering to help.

"We read the article in the Quincy Sun newspaper about the 'Tree of Angels,'" they wrote.

"We would like to help you next holiday season with your Tree of Angels by offering ornaments, putting back up any you saved from this past holiday, and then taking them down when you are ready for the help."

The offer was signed by Leader Rebecca Lampert-Egan and Scouts Montana McBirney, Nicole Regal, Kathryn Doherty, Abigail Egan and Victoria Greenleaf.

Ginny Trainor has a more personal reason for decorating the Tree of Angels this year.

Her father, John Trainor, who moved to Quincy in 1961 with his eight children, died April 28 at the age of 85.

Housing Committee To Address Hunger, Poverty Issues Dec. 9

The city council's housing committee will meet Dec. 9 at 7 p.m. in the council chambers to address the issue of hunger and poverty in the city.

Two weeks ago, Councilor Joseph Finn introduced a resolution urging the council to hold hearings on the matter after UMass-Boston released a study citing Germantown as having a high hunger rate.

Finn and other members of the council are seeking input from local non-profit organizations and the city's food providers.

The report, sponsored by Project Bread, the state's largest anti-hunger organization, singled out the Germantown neighborhood as having more than one household in four below the federal poverty level of $18,400 a year income for a family of four.

Finn said he wants to approach the issue from a citywide standpoint.

Gutro Holds Meeting Plans Discussed To Revive Wollaston Business Assn.

By SHEILA HALLORAN

Plans are underway to revive the Wollaston Business Association, a once strong and vital ingredient in the Wollaston community, which has been inactive for over a year.

In an effort to revive the association, Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro recently held a "Councillor's Coffee Hour" with the Wollaston Business Community at the Quincy Community United Methodist Church. Over 20 business owners turned out to show their interest and support.

Gutro, Officer Ralph Radzевич of Wollaston Community Policing, Officer Kent Yee of North Quincy Community Policing and Dean Rizzo, Executive Director of Quincy 2000 offered their ideas and addressed concerns at the meeting.

Prior to the meeting, Gutro mailed invitations to the former members of the Wollaston Business Association and hand delivered invitations to the newer businesses.

Creed's Crossing owner Melissa Newton was impressed with being hand delivered an invitation by Gutro.

DOUG GUTRO

After attending the meeting, Newton said it "was inspiring to see neighbors, especially new neighbors, and city councillors such as Frank McCauley and to witness the support of Quincy 2000."

As Creed's Crossing enters its sixth year in Wollaston, Newton credits her success to the support of the city and business district. "We are a close knit business community with incredible support," she said.

Gutro believes the decline in the Wollaston Business Association membership was due to turnovers of businesses and other smaller businesses trying to make their own business succeed. Additionally, the association has not had a president in over a year, since past President Lynne Houghton relocated to North Quincy. Gutro said reviving the existing Wollaston Business Association would require an individual or individuals to step in and take over as president.

When Gutro contacted Houghton with the idea of reviving the association, Houghton thought it was a great idea because "an association creates a camaraderie among people," said Houghton.

In the past year, Wollaston has welcomed several new businesses such as Abbey's Coffee, Abigail's Roses and Wollaston Antiques and Collectibles. Even through all the changes that Wollaston has endured over the years, it has always maintained its quaint small town charm.

Wollaston's distinctive charm was featured on WCVB's Chronicle, highlighting Wollaston's 1950s feel and small town charm.

"It is time to bring some attention to Wollaston Center," said Gutro. "We need to reignite and revive the BUSY BEALE ST. business section of Wollaston Center. Wollaston's numerous shops, restaurants, businesses and small-town feel attracts many visitors to the area.

Wollaston Business Association."

Donna McGuire, co-owner of Abbey's Coffee and Abigail's Roses, and Margaret Perez, owner of Finder's Keepers, are interested in restoring the Association.

As for possible association events, both McGuire and Perez hope to see a Wollaston Sidewalk Festival, similar to the annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival, in the near future.

According to Gutro, who entertained other Wollaston related issues at the meeting, such as traffic and parking problems, efforts have been made to improve the Wollaston community. The city council is working towards making Wollaston more "pedestrian friendly," and the city recently installed an audio traffic light near the Beale St. CVS. Furthermore, Wollaston now has a strong police presence in the business area, Gutro noted.

Yee, head of the Atlantic Neighborhood Association, said that one benefit of having a business association is to have the opportunity to "communicate, share problems, and break down barriers." He explained that if one business is having a specific problem then it is likely that other close-by businesses are experiencing that same problem.

To be a member of the Wollaston Business Association businesses pay yearly dues of $75. To be a member of Quincy 2000, dues start at $225 for the smaller businesses and can reach as high as $15,000 for larger, corporate businesses.

According to Rizzo, membership in Quincy 2000 would benefit local businesses by "supporting economic development, creating opportunities to generate business for Quincy businesses, provide financial aid for Quincy businesses, and coach young business owners and entrepreneurs."

However, Gutro said he does not want to pressure Wollaston businesses to join Quincy 2000. He noted that for some smaller businesses the yearly dues may not be financially possible.

As an alternative, Rizzo introduced the idea of Business District Steering Committees, which would be similar to community business associations. The goal of these committees is "to provide administrative support to keep businesses striving in the community," said Rizzo.

In addition to Wollaston, steering committees for North Quincy, Squantum and West Quincy are also in the planning stages, Rizzo said. Steering committee kick-off meetings are planned for some time in January.

The recent meeting indicated an interest on the part of the Wollaston community to revive the Wollaston Business Association and draw more business and new faces to Wollaston Center.

Montclair/Wollaston Group To Meet Tonight

The Montclair/Wollaston

Neighborhood Association will hold its monthly meeting Thursday, Dec. 4, at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Room at Work, Inc., 3 Arlington St.

The program will feature a holiday social with musical entertainment provided by students from the Montclair and Wollaston School Band.

The M/WNA has formed a partnership with the band programs are the area schools under the direction of Richard Striano of the Quincy Public Schools.

Following the musical interlude, then association will welcome its new officers, President Paul DelGrecio, Vice President Peter Krupp, Secretary Michael Covais and Treasurer Janet Crowley.

tion to 175 percent would save the average single-family homeowner $55 for the year, she said.

The tax rate for commercial, industrial and personal property (CIPP) would be $25.32 under the 169 percent classification. Bumping the rate to 175 percent would increase the CIPP bill $264 for the year, she said.

In fiscal 2002, homeowners paid an average increase of $522 in property taxes, and $111 more for fiscal 2003.

Without the 169 percent tax classification, homeowners would pay approximately $650 more in property taxes in fiscal 2004. Overall, the current tax classification shifts about $16 million in taxes from homeowners to CIPP.

Quincy resident Matteo Panarelli said the city council should shift a greater portion of the tax burden on to businesses.

up with the money to pay for this," he asked. "I am a homeowner who wants to stay in Quincy, but we are just surviving at this point. And next year is a re-evaluation year - I can just imagine what the taxes will be next year."

At the public hearing, Robert Haley, vice president of the Quincy Taxpayers' Association, called the tax increase on homeowners "ridiculous" and questioned how the city could raise property valuations so much in a non-re-evaluation year.

Most business owners in attendance registered their support for keeping the tax classification at 169 percent.

Ed Keohane, owner of Keohane Funeral Home and a local resident, said keeping the rate at 169 percent would encourage businesses to come to the city.

"If you increase the tax rate it will have people who are looking into the city going elsewhere," he said. "The only way to entice businesses to come to the city is to be competitive in your tax rates."

Mark Bertman, owner of Rogers Jewelry in Quincy Center and a resident of the city, echoed Keohane's comments, saying, "Raising the rates is a short-term fix for a long-term problem."

Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000, said a 169 percent classification is "critical" for Quincy to remain competitive. "Many small business owners are Quincy residents also," he told the council.

Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, said businesses would shift any increased tax burden on to those who rent their establishments. The result would hurt renters, she said.

Ron Cogliano, community development manager for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, said vacancy rates for businesses continue to climb. Increasing the tax classification to 175 percent sends a message to potential business owners "that we don't need your business."

"Things are tough, especially on the commercial side," said Cogliano.

Joseph LaRaia, former mayor, city councillor and member of the board of assessors, spoke out in favor of increasing the tax classification to 175 percent.

LaRaia said during the past 10 years businesses have been contributing a smaller portion of the tax levy. As a result, the tax burden is being transferred to residents, he said.

Increasing the tax classification to 175 percent would amount to a "trickle in the water" for businesses, he said.

After the hearing, Councilor Frank McCauley objected to voting on the matter. An objection kills debate on the issue until the next council meeting. McCauley cited the absence of Ward 4 Councilor Bryan Connolly as the main reason for the action. Connolly was unable to attend Monday night's meeting.

McCauley said the council's vote will be close, and Connolly's presence will be necessary on such an important issue. Last year, a divided city council narrowly approved the 169 percent classification, 5-4.

11,000 Households Eligible In Quincy Energy Assistance Programs Under-utilized

Approximately 11,000 low-income families in Quincy are eligible to take advantage of energy assistance programs, but less than 30 percent of those residents are utilizing them, according to Massachusetts Utilities.

The Commonwealth's investor-owned utility companies banded together in an effort to reach approximately 733,000 Massachusetts households who are eligible for some level of energy assistance.

Several utility companies have joined with the Massachusetts Community Action Program Directors' Association (MASSCAP) and launched Energy Bucks to help low-income and qualified households reduce their energy costs. Massachusetts Electric Company, Nantucket Electric Company, NSTAR Electric & Gas, Unitil, Western Massachusetts Electric Company, Bay State Gas, KeySpan Energy Delivery, and the Low-Income Energy Affordability Network (LEAN) are part of the coalition.

The City of Quincy has been cited as one of the large metropolitan areas under-utilizing the program.

Eligibility for these programs is determined each year and varies by program and household size. A family of four with an income of $900 a week or less qualifies, for example. A typical household can potentially reduce the amount it pays for energy by 25 percent or more annually.

Some households can save as much as $1,000 annually by participating in fuel assistance, discount energy rates and energy efficient services.

The federal government through the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the Department of Housing and Community Development funds some of the programs promoted by Energy Bucks. All are administered locally by community action agencies in cooperation with electric and gas utilities.

"We welcome Energy Bucks as a way to amplify our existing outreach to families in Quincy and encourage them to come into Quincy Community Action Council Inc. so we can determine which programs they qualify for and help them save money this winter," said Joseph P. Diamond, executive director, Massachusetts Community Action Program Directors' Association.

Quincy residents interested in the program should contact the Quincy Community Action Program at 617-479-8181.

For more information about Energy Bucks, residents can call toll free 1-866-537-7267.

Vote On Mooring Fees Delayed Until Dec. 15

Monday night's meeting. About 50 boat owners attended the meeting, breaking into applause several times as councillors registered their opposition.

Pointing to Connolly's absence, Council President Raymond took exception with the delay, saying, "Make no mistake, this request has everything to do with votes and nothing to do with the substance of the matter." Raymond said postponing the meeting was unfair to the people in attendance.

Raymond's request to table the matter for the rest of the year was defeated.

Instead, the committee approved McCauley's request to hear the administration's presentation. According to the proposed regulations, annual mooring fees would be $2 per foot for boats longer than 17 feet owned by Quincy residents, and $4 per foot for non-Quincy residents.

Boaters who fail to obtain a mooring permit would be hit with a $50 fine per offense. Each day that a violation occurs is considered a separate offense.

Boaters who use a fraudulent, stolen, or transferred permit would be hit with a $300 fine each day that the offense occurs.

A vessel located in Quincy waters for at least 14 days would be considered moored, according to the proposal.

Approximately 1,500 boats are docked annually in Quincy waters, according to Harbormaster Andrew Ayer. Quincy and Boston are among the only coastal communities in Massachusetts that don't charge mooring fees.

Tickets at $10 each for a buffet dinner and a cash bar will be sold at the door. The event will give environmentalists a chance to look back on their accomplishments and look forward to the future.

"I think by all accounts we can look back on this year with a sense of pride and satisfaction," said Gail Macdonald, a QEN spokesman.

"We made major gains in the effort to fund open space acquisition, established an environmental teacher of the year award and held our second round of candidates' nights focusing on green issues."

The event at Craig's Cafe is open to the public.

Ice Dams Can Mean The Beginning Of The End Of Your Roof

(NAPS) — Homeowners can save themselves a lot of heartache and money down the road by making sure a few simple steps are taken during roof installation to prevent ice dams. Stopping ice dams before they start is key to avoiding expensive damage.

Ice dams are nasty build-ups of ice on the gutters. However, as the ice dams get larger, they start going up the roof and under the shingles. When the ice melts, the ice under the shingles melts into the house.

What can you do to prevent ice dams from occurring when installing a new roof?

First, make sure your roof is properly ventilated. A good ventilation system keeps your roof cool enough (below 30 degrees) in the winter to prevent the snow melt that leads to the ice dam problem. A ridge vent equipped with an external baffle along the entire length of the roof is a highly effective option for most every home. The soffit allows cool air in to help cool the attic. The ridge vent then draws the warm air out the attic. The air in the attic doesn't get diluted.

Insulation is another piece of the puzzle to effectively keep your attic cool and when combined with the ridge vent, helps keep attic temperatures below 30 degrees. An attic insulated to today's energy standards with CertainTeed fiber glass insulation, for example, minimizes heat escape through the ceiling and into the attic, reducing the possibility of snow melting and re-freezing at the base of your roof.

Equally important to the life of your roof is the right choice of shingles. Experts recommend asphalt shingles that are thick and offer many layers of protection for your roof. Also, an underlayment called WinterGuard by CertainTeed is added protection against leaks caused by ice dams or wind-driven rain. It is installed at the eaves and should ice dams or wind-driven rain occur on your roof, water will not be able to penetrate this membrane, even where it is nailed into the roof deck, because it seals around the nail.

All of these pieces — insulation, WinterGuard, shingles, ridgevent — are part of an overall system, pieces working together to help prevent expensive damage to your home. If you are unsure or suspect a problem, call a professional to check things out.

Sullivan Family Celebration Of Life Fundraiser Saturday

A fundraiser to benefit the Sullivan family, who have maintained Sullivan Real Estate, 1245 Hancock St., Quincy, for more than 35 years, will be held Saturday, Dec. 6 from 6 to 9 p.m. at the First Parish Church in Milton, 535 Canton Ave.

The Sullivan Family Celebration of Life will honor Elizabeth Sullivan and her two young daughters, Caroline, age 10, and Macy, 5, all of whom have been diagnosed with Mitochondrial Disease.

The rare genetic disorder can affect the body's ability to metabolize and maintain the energy to complete even simple tasks. It often leads to heart, muscles, kidney, respiratory and cerebral failure.

Those who suffer from this disease may lose their ability to walk, see, hear and breath. Every day can become a challenge just to survive.

Elizabeth Sullivan, who has a particularly virulent and malignant form of this disease, has spent the past few years undergoing several operations, numerous hospitalizations, drug treatments and blood transfusions leaving her weak, relying on oxygen and unable to walk without assistance. Although there is no treatment or cure for this disease, Elizabeth and her family continue to remain optimistic that one day there will be a cure.

Proceeds from the Dec. 6 fundraiser will be used to assist the Sullivan family in making their home more "handicap friendly" thereby extending her life.

Greg, Elizabeth, Caroline and Macy live in Milton. Greg and his family have maintained Sullivan Real Estate for over 35 years in Quincy.

All proceeds will go directly to The Sullivan Family Fund.

The benefit will feature hors d'oeuvres, wine, drawings, jazz and a silent auction.

For tickets, donations or sponsorship information, call Sandy Cavanaugh at 617-698-4384 or pick up a flyer at Papa Gino's, Granite St., Quincy.

Hints For Homeowners

It's Your Furnace: Tips On Annual Maintenance

(NAPS) - You'll stay a lot more comfortable year-round if you warm up to these annual tips for keeping your furnace running efficiently.

The experts at York Heating and Cooling offer these suggestions:

- Have your heating and cooling unit checked annually. Preventative maintenance is always the best idea. There are a lot of parts to a furnace and they all have to run properly to make your furnace work efficiently.

- The furnace needs to be inspected to uncover leaks in the heat exchanger, soot, rust, corroded contacts and frayed wires.

- Heat pumps and oil-fired furnaces require yearly tuneups. Manufacturers recommend having your gas-fired furnace cleaned every other year. Experts say that heat pumps, such as the Stealth Hot Heat Pump Series from York, are built for years of trouble-free service that's assured by a 10-year limited warranty on all other parts.

- Be sure the system runs through a full heating cycle to ensure that it has plenty of combustion and air and chimney draft. Contractors use Draft Gauges to check for sufficient draft. They will also test the air for carbon monoxide.

- Clean the burner and heat exchanger to remove soot that can impede smooth operation. Your best efficiency hinges on adjusting the burner flame to the right size and color, adjusting the flow of gas or changing the fuel filter in an oil-fired system. A proper check of the heat pump should include an inspection of the compressor and fan.

- While thermostats rarely fail outright, they can degrade over time as mechanical parts stick or lose their calibration. Remember, whether your thermostat is old or young, the hole where the thermostat wire comes through the wall needs to be caulked or a draft could trick it into thinking the room is warmer or colder than it really is.

To learn more about furnaces and heat pumps, visit the Web site at www.yorkupg.com or call 1-800-910-YORK.

Presidents 20, Red Raiders 7

Quincy Wins Fifth Straight Over North

By CHRIS POISSON

As each Thanksgiving comes and goes, Quincy head coach Bob Noble goes out of his way to pay tribute to legendary coach Bill Sullivan following the game.

The 71st annual holiday game last week carried more meaning, literally and figuratively.

The Presidents captured their fifth straight Turkey crown with their 20-7 victory over North Quincy, matching Sullivan's 1954-58 squads for the longest winning streak in the series.

"To be ranked, or at least mentioned with him in terms of wins and losses in this game — I don't think I'll ever be ranked with him — that's a tremendous honor," Noble said.

Sullivan, who died March 4 after a long battle with pancreatic cancer, was there in spirit. Noble, an honorary pallbearer at his funeral, carried a spent shell from a 21-gun salute at his military graveside burial in his pocket during the game.

"His wife is here today and I carried this with me today," said Noble, taking the spent shell out of his pocket, "so she knows that he was here with us. I wanted to honor him."

Quincy has now won nine of the last 10 Thanksgiving Day games and leads the series, 38-25.

This year, the Presidents (7-1-1) were overwhelmingly the favorites but the Red Raiders (0-10) put forth a gallant effort. They orchestrated a ball-control attack to keep the ball out of Quincy's hands and stay within striking distance.

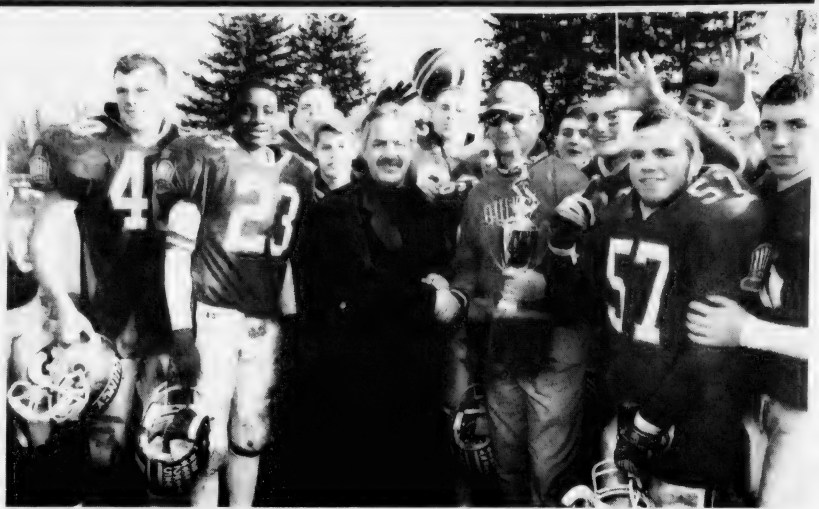

"The kids stepped up and played well against a very good Quincy team," said North Quincy head coach Tony Green. "They gave everything they had. It's the culmination of things we were doing all year and it came together today."

North Quincy didn't get off to a good start as it fumbled on its third play from scrimmage. And Quincy wasted no time, scoring in just four plays on senior tailback J.J. Niamkey's 4-yard scamper. Senior Steve Costigliola added the extra point for a 7-0 lead.

After Quincy's defense forced the Red Raiders to go three-and-out, the offense engineered a six-play, 67-yard drive, highlighted by Niamkey's 34-yard run. Senior quarterback Josh Giordani scrambled for a 19-yard gain to the 3-yard line, setting up Niamkey's scoring plunge for a 13-0 lead late in the quarter.

Niamkey rushed for 155 yards on 22 carries to surpass the 1,000-yard mark (1,085) for the second year in a row.

"Niamkey has been a great player for us," Noble said. "I have to assume he broke the 1,000-yard barrier for us. He needed 70 yards to attain that. We've been a winning program and a championship program with him, as with all our seniors."

North Quincy began to make plays in the second quarter. After the defense forced Quincy to turn the ball over on downs, the Red Raiders chewed up nearly eight minutes off the clock behind some power running.

Senior tailback and quarterback Brandon Neves capped the drive with a 5-yard TD run with 2:09 left in the half. Freshman Sean McCormack's extra point made it 13-7.

The Presidents reached the North Quincy 36 on its next series, but junior Mike Powers, playing his first game at linebacker, picked off a pass to keep his team within six points going into the break.

"The running backs we were waiting to run hard all way, ran hard today," Green said. "We just worked on plays against the '4' and plays against the '5.' So we came in with plays that we perfected all week long. When they were in the '5' we ran inside. When they were in the '4' we ran off-tackle."

"I thought North Quincy did a heck of a job trying to control the football, particularly in the first half," Noble said. "That took the ball out of our hands and it was successful. That kept them in the game; kept them close at halftime."

In the second half, Quincy looked sloppy as it committed 15 penalties. Tuesday's Super Bowl playoff game against Mansfield may have been on its mind.

"At times, I think we played like we were looking past today," Noble said. "Bottom line is we won the game. I'm happy about that. That's all that matters."

Quincy managed to put together a scoring drive de

The Quincy High School football team's season did not end with its 20-7 win over North Quincy in the Thanksgiving Day game.

pion Mansfield (11-0) Tuesday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium in the Division 3 semifinal game, with the winner advancing to Saturday's Super Bowl.

Congratulates Champion Midget 'A' Team

I would like to take this opportunity to publicly congratulate the Quincy Youth Hockey Midget 'A' team for winning the Tier II State Championship against South Boston Nov. 10.

Matt Germain, Matt Grazioso, Joshua Giordani, Steve Kelley, Tim Duggan and Kevin Richardson won their third state title. They have been playing together since they were 8 years old.

I had the pleasure to coach these kids when they won their first championship as Pee Wees at 12 years old. At 15, they were state champs again as Bantams and were invited to Atlanta, Ga., to represent Quincy in the national tournament. They were on one of 12 teams out of 3,800 who earned the right to participate in the nationals. They came in fourth place.

This April they are off to Dallas, Texas, to represent Quincy again in the Midget

A Tier II National Championship.

To win a state championship in any sport at any age is a great accomplishment. To win three in six years is just unbelievable. The city of Quincy should be proud of these boys and this team, not only for their accomplishment on the ice, but also the way they conducted themselves off the ice.

I was there in Atlanta and was very impressed with the positive way in which they represented themselves and this city, and I'm confident they will do the same in Dallas. Once again, congratulations and good luck. "Cowboy up."

INSPECTING A PRE-OWNED VEHICLE

When considering the purchase of a pre-owned vehicle, take into account the honesty and reputation of the seller. If you are buying from a dealership, there should be some sort of warranty, which is an indication that they stand behind their vehicles. Look for signs of prior accidents, such as overspray. Check underneath the vehicle for fluid leaks. Then, get inside the car and check everything from the heating and air conditioning to window operation and seats. Take the vehicle for a test drive, and observe how it tracks on the highway, takes turns, accelerates, and brakes. Note any unwanted vibration, noises, or shimmy. Most importantly, take the vehicle to an independent shop for an inspection and a second opinion.

Whether your car is new or used, for most all of your car's maintenance and repair needs, rely on our ASE Certified technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Learn for yourself why so many of your friends and neighbors turn to us to keep their family cars in top condition. For the best service in town, we're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. We are 'A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer.' Hours: Mon-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

HINT: When considering the purchase of a used vehicle, look into an internet service that utilizes the vehicle's VIN (vehicle identification number) to reveal the vehicle's history.

spite all the infractions late in the third quarter. On third- and 10 at its own 29, Quincy received help when North Quincy was whistled for a 20-yard pass interference penalty. Five plays later, sophomore Everton DeCastro shed several tackles for a 24-yard TD and some breathing room with a 20-7 lead.

"Everton is a player that is going to be a big part of our future," Noble said. "He's going to be our primary ball carrier a year from now. He gave you a taste of what the future will bring. He came up big for us."

In the fourth quarter, the Red Raiders gave their fans hope of a possible comeback, moving the ball from their own 1 to the 32. On fourth- and 9, they executed a fake punt when junior Alex Tringale one-handed a high snap and fired a strike to sophomore tailback Akil

Benjamin for a 16-yard gain. Three plays later, though, Niamkey intercepted a pass from his cornerback position to seal the game.

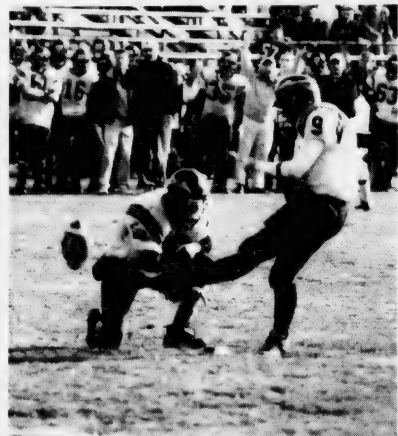

"I thought my brother (assistant head coach John) did a fantastic job of preparing the offense, defense and special teams," Green said. "He broke down all the film and coached the kids all week. That was his call on the fake punt that worked."

With about two minutes left in the game, senior wideout Ian Jorgensen hauled in a 26-yard TD pass from Giordani, but Quincy was called for illegal motion to erase the score.

"In the second half we were able to break it open a little, but at the same time we had a lot of penalties that seemed to derail what we were doing," Noble said. "I'm sure we reached double figures. It seemed that way in the second half alone."

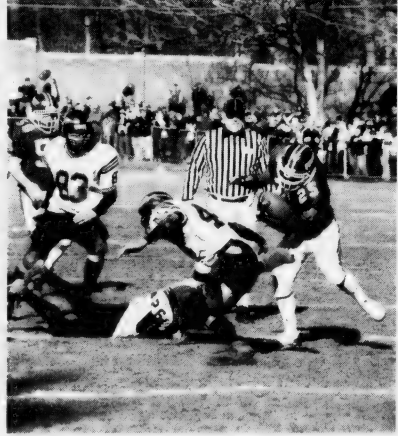

JOSH GIORDANI (19), senior quarterback, rushes for 19 yards to the NQ 3-yard line, setting up Quincy's second touchdown in the first quarter.

SEAN MCCORMACK (9) kicks the extra point after North Quincy's only touchdown in the game late in the first half.

JIMMY BURKE (10), senior quarterback and quad-captain, unleashes a pass while running from Quincy senior defensive end Ed DeWitt (72).

EVERTON DeCASTRO (25), sophomore tailback, sheds several tackles for a 24-yard touchdown run in the third quarter.

Eyes Also Need Protection While Skiing

With weather reports beginning to mention snowfalls out West, it's time to get ready for ski season. Precautions before you hit the slopes can make downhill skiing safe and fun.

"Most people think about their physical fitness for skiing, but they also need to protect their eyes," said Dr. Reza Haque, spokesman for Novartis Ophthalmics North America. "Their 'fitness program' for their eyes begins with a pair of sunglasses that blocks harmful ultraviolet rays.

"Most people do not realize it, but they are at greater risk for ultraviolet rays in the winter than in the summer. And the glare from snow compounds the problem."

According to Haque, ultraviolet light or UV rays have been linked to various eye problems such as cataracts, sunburn to the eyelids, pterygium (benign lesions found on either side of the cornea), skin cancer around the eyes and AMD, one of the leading causes of vision loss among older Americans.

"Inexpensive sunglasses are often labeled that they protect eyes from UV when they really do not," Haque said.

"Most will block harmful UVC and UVB rays but not the most damaging UVA rays. It is worth spending more to get full protection."

For the ultimate in protection, skiers should wear wrap-around sunglasses or goggles with shatterproof lenses.

At the end of a day of skiing at arid mountain altitudes, where the air is very dry, it's important for skiers to rehydrate their eyes, Haque said. Soothing artificial tear products such as GenTeal™ Drops from Novartis Ophthalmics can be used as often as needed.

Here are some more safety tips for skiing:

- Equipment should be properly fitted. Boots should fit snugly; skis and poles need to be sized according to the skier's height and ability. Skiers should consult a reputable ski shop for help when renting or purchasing equipment.

Your A-Choo May Be Telling Others A Lot About You

(NAPS)-- During allergy season, a sneeze may be worth a thousand words. From the dainty, hold-it-in "irp" to the subtle, turn away "choo" or the amplified, get-it-done "Aaaa-CHOO," everyone has their own way of sneezing that may reveal a little bit about their personality.

To help people identify their "sneeze style," behavior expert Patricia Wood, MA, CSP, has developed the Benadryl "Find Your A-Choo I.Q." quiz, which people can use to examine the connections between their sneeze type and attitude toward sneezing, and their personality type.

- Helmets and goggles should not obstruct the skier's vision in any way.

- Clothing should be warm, windproof and waterproof so the skier does not become chilled. Skiers should dress in layers so clothing can be added or taken off as needed.

- Skiers should always have a partner. They should stay within sight of each other.

- Before setting off each day, skiers should warm up with a couple of slow ski runs.

- Skiers should keep to slopes that are appropriate for their skiing ability. Skiers should never venture into closed areas.

- Most skiing injuries occur in the afternoon, when skiers are likely to be tired. Skiers should know their limitations and rest or stop skiing to avoid injury.

"Sneezing is a natural body function, so it's difficult to hide your true sneeze style. The way you sneeze, like other body language, can tell others about your personality," said Wood.

Through her research, Wood found that sneeze styles can be grouped into categories that are frequently associated with specific behaviors or attitudes.

By logging on to www.benadrylusa.com and answering a few questions, consumers can find out their "A-Choo I.Q." and determine which of these Sneeze Style categories they fit into:

- "Sensitive" Sneezer - More likely to be warm and friendly and likes a relaxed pace."

- "Be Right" Sneezer - More likely to be careful and accurate.

- "Get It Done" Sneezer - More likely to be fast, decisive, and to the point.

- "Enthusiastic" Sneezer - More likely to be a charismatic leader and influencer.

While sneezing may tell us something about the sneezer's personality, it also can tell us that there is an allergic condition that needs to be treated.

For more information about treating allergies, or to take the quiz and find out what your sneeze says about you, visit www.benadrylusa.com.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

GETTING INTO THE ROTATION

While sufficient time and diligence spent with a regular manual toothbrush usually yields very good results, some people opt for electronic toothbrushes. If you are among them, you may be interested to know that a recent report finds that power toothbrushes with rotational oscillation action perform the best. These are toothbrushes that rotate in on direction and then another. According to analysis of data from clinical trials, rotational oscillation toothbrushes removed up to eleven percent more plaque and reduced bleeding of gums by up to seventeen percent more than manual or other power toothbrushes. Again, however, it should be pointed out that conscientious brushing with a manual brush can be just as effective in the right hands.

We take care of all your dental needs. Our recommendations for dental treatment are always in the best interest of the patient. We're located at 44 Greenleaf St., where you can enjoy dentistry in an up-to-date setting with the latest techniques and materials. A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

WHAT IS MATURITY? Many quotes come to mind... "When you can sense your concern for others outweighing your concern for yourself." "A frank acceptance of barren realities." "Implies otherness... the art of living with." ... One of the best we have come across is by Dr. William C. Menninger. He said that the criteria of emotional maturity are:

- Having the ability to deal constructively with reality.
- Having the capacity to adapt to change.
- Having a relative freedom from symptoms that are produced by tensions and anxieties.
- Having the capacity to relate to other people in a consistent manner with mutual satisfaction and helpfulness.
- Having the capacity to sublimate, to direct one's instinctive hostile energy into creative and constructive outlets.
- Having the capacity to love.
- Having the capacity to find more satisfaction in giving than in receiving.

WORDS USING THE 1ST HALF OF THE ALPHABET

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Keep your feelings to yourself as you work through an awkward circumstance. Complaining is useless, and also unwise since your words could come back to haunt you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A sudden flash of Bovine practicality shows you how you might be able to turn your artistic pursuits into a profitable venture. A spouse or partner offers some sage advice.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be prepared with several "Plan Bs" that you might have to use as backups just in case you encounter some troublesome complications with your carefully constructed schedule.

CANCER (June 21 to July 21) You might think you'll never have a free moment again with the demands of the workplace piling on. Cheer up. The pressure eases as holiday time nears. An old friend brings good news.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your Leonine pride might make it difficult to offer an apology to a co-worker you unintentionally offended. But a quick and sincere "I'm sorry" could prevent problems down the line.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time to tackle those backed-up chores that have kept you from moving into other and potentially more worthwhile projects. A personal matter needs your attention.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You usually have no problem rushing to the defense of someone you perceive as being treated unjustly. But perceptions could be deceiving this week. Check the facts before you act.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Before you point fingers at who might be to blame for the unexpected change in your plans, take a few moments to reflect on how this turn of events might be a blessing in disguise.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You seek out advice in the first part of the week. But be careful not to let counsel from others overshadow your own sense of perception. Things become clearer by the week's end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The trusted colleagues you relied on earlier continue to offer support with your project. But you take more control, and by the week's end, you should be in full command.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Rely on your practical side while exploring investment possibilities. Caution is still your watchword in these matters. Your social life takes a gratifying turn by the week's end.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An already confusing situation appears to grow murkier during the first part of the week. But it all starts to clear by week's end. Plan to spend the weekend with someone special.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a passion for life that inspires others to follow your example. You could be a motivational speaker.

CITY OF QUINCY IN COUNCIL

ORDER NO. 2002-306
ORDERED:

December 1, 2003

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF QUINCY AS FOLLOWS:

That Title 5 of the Quincy Municipal Code be hereby amended to include the following:

Chapter 5.44 SHOPPING CARTS

5.44.010 FINDINGS AND PURPOSE

The City Council hereby finds that abandoned shopping carts or parts thereof are unsightly, aesthetically detrimental to the Community, interfere with pedestrian and vehicular traffic, accumulate over time on private and public property causing blight and deterioration resulting in reduction in property values, constitute an attractive nuisance and are detrimental to the public health, safety and welfare. Therefore, the presence of abandoned shopping carts or parts thereof is declared to constitute a public nuisance that may be abated as such in accordance with the provisions of this chapter. The purpose of this chapter is to promote public health, safety and welfare by prohibiting the abandonment of shopping carts or parts thereof upon public and private property, thereby alleviating the safety hazards, unsafe conditions and the impairment of property values resulting from the abandonment of such carts.

This ordinance maintains primary responsibility for managing cart service with the owner of the cart and provides said owners with discretion in determining their preferred method of retention of said carts upon the owner's premises. These sections require Business Establishments utilizing shopping carts or similar devices and having more than (20) twenty shopping carts on site to install and maintain a system to retain shopping carts within property boundaries of the Business Establishment.

5.44.20 DEFINITIONS

"Abandoned Shopping Cart" means any unattended shopping cart left on a public or private property outside the premises or parking area of the retail establishment owning the shopping cart. Any such shopping cart shall be deemed abandoned and, therefore, a public nuisance, pursuant to this chapter. For the purposes of this chapter, the parking area of a retail establishment located in a multi-store complex, or shopping center, shall include the entire area used by the complex.

"Owner" means the owner or retail establishment whose identification is required to appear on the shopping cart identification sign.

"Business Establishment" includes, but is not limited to, a grocery store, supermarket, drugstore, pharmacy, dry goods store, department store, discount store, variety store, or other retail establishment which supplies twenty (20) or more Shopping Carts for the use of its customers.

"Public Property" means and includes, but is not limited to, all areas dedicated to the public use including roadways, parkways, alleys, lanes, parks, sidewalks and any public right of way.

"Shopping Cart" means a basket that is mounted on wheels or a similar device generally used in a retail establishment by customers for the transporting of goods of any kind.

5.44.030 REQUIRED SIGNS ON SHOPPING CARTS

Every owner of a shopping cart shall affix to each shopping cart owned or provided by the owner a sign that includes the following information:

- Identification of the owner of the shopping cart or the business to which it pertains or both. No business shall utilize a shopping cart that does not contain its mark or contains the mark of another business and no owner or manager of a retail or wholesale establishment shall allow such use.
- Notification that the unauthorized removal of the shopping cart from the premises of the business establishment, or the unauthorized possession of the shopping cart is a violation of the law.
- A telephone number and address for returning the shopping cart to its owner or to the business establishment identified thereon.

5.44.040 ABANDONMENT PROHIBITED

It shall be unlawful for any person to cause or permit any shopping cart to be abandoned on or upon any public property as defined in this chapter or any private property other than the premises of the owner of said shopping cart.

5.44.050 UNAUTHORIZED REMOVAL PROHIBITED

It shall be unlawful for any person, either temporarily or permanently, to remove a shopping cart from the premises of the owner or be in possession of a cart that has been removed from the premises of the owner without the written consent of the owner. This provision shall not apply to shopping carts removed as authorized by the owner for the purposes of repair, maintenance or disposal.

5.44.060 SHOPPING CART ON-SITE RETENTION

All business establishments utilizing shopping carts or similar devices on site shall install and maintain a system to retain such shopping carts within the property boundaries of the business. The business shall provide signage in conspicuous locations notifying shopping cart users of the retention system in place and how said system operates. Permitted methods of retention shall include any one of the following:

Each method included in this sub-section shall be considered to be an example of an onsite retention method complying with these sections. If the Business Establishment has a method for retention that is not delineated as an example herein, then an Owner may submit a plan to the City Clerk that satisfies the intent of these sections to retain Shopping Carts on the premises of the Business Establishment and/or its Parking Lot or to ensure the immediate retrieval of Shopping Carts outside of the Business Establishment and/or its Parking Lot; no plan submitted by an Owner to the City Clerk shall be valid until approved, in writing, by the City Licensing Board. Examples of methods and/or plans as follows:

LEGAL NOTICE

- A physical barrier, such as bollards, restricting shopping carts to the front sidewalk or front portion of the business. Physical barriers shall not interfere with fire lanes, handicap access or similar features.
- Shopping carts equipped with a protruding vertical arm or similar device prohibiting the cart from being removed from the interior of the business.
- A system which may be mechanical in nature requiring a deposit to use a shopping cart; deposit should be of a reasonable amount that would not deter use of the cart, but would encourage return of the cart.
- Shopping carts equipped with a wheel locking mechanism that is used in conjunction with an electronic barrier along the perimeter of the area within which shopping carts are allowed. The wheel locking mechanism will activate when the shopping cart crosses the electronic barrier.
- An attendant or attendants whose sole responsibility is to manage and/or return the Business Establishment's Shopping Carts from the exterior premises of the Business Establishment and areas immediately adjacent thereto to the interior premises of the Business Establishment or another exterior area of the Business Establishment dedicated to the containment of Shopping Carts.
- Other similar methods or plans submitted by an Owner for the approval of the City Licensing Board which would satisfy the intent of these sections to retain the immediate retrieval of Shopping Carts outside of the Business Establishment and/or its Parking Lot.

No Business Establishment shall allow Shopping Carts to congregate or "stack up" in such a manner as to impede ingress to or egress from the Business Establishment or any public or private way adjacent to the Business Establishment.

Prior to the close of each business day, every Business Establishment shall collect and secure its Shopping Carts on its premises, including its Parking Lot. This action shall be commenced no sooner than fifteen (15) minutes prior to the close of each business day.

5.44.070 MANDATORY PLAN

Every owner of a business subject to this ordinance shall prepare, implement and submit to the City Clerk within ninety (90) days of the adoption of this ordinance and on an annual basis thereafter, a specific written plan to prevent the removal of shopping carts from their premises and, if removed, to retrieve the shopping carts that have been removed within 24 hours of the removal. A business may request an exemption from the annual plan filing requirement if it is able to demonstrate to the satisfaction of the City, the ability to prevent the carts from leaving the site and no carts are found abandoned after the exemption is granted.

Said plan shall also include, at a minimum, the name of the business, identification of business address contact information, the names of the persons responsible for implementing the plan and information on who and how to contact the appropriate individuals to resolve any plan issues or violations, an inventory of carts, employees training on cart removal and abandonment prevention.

Said plan shall also include a methodology for customer and community notification and outreach that shall include signage on the carts, stores, shopping bags or other outreach designed to advise their customers that they may not remove the shopping carts from the business premises. As part of customer outreach the City would encourage the provision to customers, at wholesale cost, the availability to purchase foldable carts.

5.44.080 LEGAL NONCONFORMING BUSINESS Any business that is nonconforming as to onsite Shopping Cart retention upon adoption of this Ordinance shall comply within six (6) months.

5.44.090 EXEMPTIONS

Any business subject to this Ordinance that services within 1000 feet of its premises a multi-unit residential facility of more than ten (10) units housing handicapped or elderly residents may seek a limited exemption to this Ordinance solely for the purposes of servicing this facility. Said business must submit, to the City Clerk, a written plan outlining an agreement with such residential facility detailing a methodology for the systematic retrieval of all Shopping Carts utilized solely to service this facility.

5.44.080 COMPLIANCE AND ENFORCEMENT

A determination of compliance and enforcement of the provisions of this Ordinance shall reside with the City of Quincy Licensing Board which shall receive and review the Mandatory Plans previously cited (5.44.050). Failure of an Owner to comply with the provisions of this Ordinance and an approved Mandatory Plan shall, in the first instance, result in a written notice citing such failure and requiring forthwith compliance. A second such failure to comply may result in the issuance of a monetary fine of no less than twenty-five dollars ($25.00) per event. Each day of non-compliance shall constitute a separate event.

Pending in the Ordinance Committee of the City Council to be acted upon at a future date

Storm Dumps 18-Plus Inches Of Snow • Costs Up To $200,000 City Still Digging Out From Weekend Wallop

KAREN ZELEVINSKY TACKLES a mountain of snow at her Whitwell Street home after the weekend storm. The National Weather Service said 18 inches blanketed Quincy but some residents measured up to 24 inches — and more — in various areas of the city.

CHANNEL MARKER No. 7 broke loose during the nor'easter and washed up against the sea wall at Manet Avenue, Houghs Neck.

The city was still digging out at mid-week from the blizzard-like storm that dumped anywhere from 18-24 inches of snow.

Although the storm was not considered a blizzard by meteorologists, wind-driven snow and low visibility created very dangerous conditions during the height of the storm's impact on Saturday evening and Sunday morning.

Officially, Quincy received 18 inches of snow, according to the National Weather Service, but some residents measured up to 24 inches.

Schools re-opened on Tuesday after the storm forced city officials to close sessions on Monday.

"This was a very difficult storm to fight," said the city's Traffic Engineer, Roy Lamotte, Jr. "We had snow, then a rain event, and then so much snow came all at once. The intensity of the storm made it very difficult."

About 100 pieces of equipment, including plows, dump trucks and sanding vehicles, were dispatched to plow the city's 220 miles of streets, he said.

Lamotte said the city was clearing the catch basins in preparation for a possible rain event this week.

Mayor William Phelan said he was pleased with the city's cleanup effort.

"We had a massive amount of snow over a long period of time," he said. "I think we did a good job overall, but there's always room for improvement. I have a feeling we are going to have many chances to show our cleanup expertise this winter."

Phelan estimated the costs associated with the cleanup would be in the range of $150,000 to $200,000. "That's a tough hit in such an early part of the season," he said.

The city has budgeted $300,000 to cover the costs of snow removal for the streets and sidewalks in fiscal 2004.

Police Chief William Falco reported no major traffic incidents.

"From the standpoint of city services, this was one of the best handled storms I can remember," he said. "We were well prepared."

School Committee member Jo-Ann Bragg, however, was not impressed with the city's initial cleanup effort.

"I think it's a very poor job at this point," Bragg said Monday. "There were a lot of streets that were impassable due to the storm. The storm ended on Sunday and things should have been better on Monday."

Bragg also said the state did a poor job plowing Furnace Brook Parkway, which is owned by the MDC.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said he received more complaints from constituents in comparison to

43 Employees To Take Early Retirement

Forty-three city employees and two housing authority workers have chosen to take an early retirement plan and leave their posts at the end of the month.

Among those who chose to retire early are longtime Planning Director Richard Meade, Housing Authority Director Jack Mather and City Engineer Fran Sandonato.

For the second time in as many years, the state allowed municipalities to let employees retire early while preserving pensions. The employees' last day of work is Dec. 31.

With the support of the city council, Mayor William Phelan decided to implement the plan in Quincy. About 100 city employees opted to leave early in July 2002.

"There are benefits to the city and the employees that I felt, on balance, warranted the implementation of an early retirement incentive," said Phelan.

The mayor said he did not know how many vacant positions would be backfilled, but commented, "In some areas you will see a younger, more technologically advanced workforce."

To be eligible for early retirement, employees of any age had to have 20 years of service, or have 10 years of service and be 55 years old or older.

The housing authority is independent from the city, but it pays into Quincy's retirement system and its employees draw pensions from it.

According to city officials, 14 employees will leave the school department, three will opt out from the library department and police and fire will each lose two employees.

Annual City Hall Toys For Tots Drive

In the spirit of giving and community involvement, the City of Quincy is seeking help from residents for the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots program.

From now until Dec. 19, residents can bring new, unwrapped toys to the city's Toys for Tots drop-off located near the switchboard/reception area in the lobby of City Hall, 1305 Hancock St.

"This is a wonderful program that the U.S. Marine Corps sponsors and the City of Quincy is pleased to help in any way that we can," said

Mayor William Phelan. "Quincy is a city full of kindness and generosity and will no doubt step up to help these families in need to have a wonderful holiday season."

Fire, Police Team Up To Help Needy Families

The Quincy Fire and Police Departments once again are teaming up with the Germantown Neighborhood Center to bring a little joy to needy families and kids for the holiday season.

With the assistance of the Center, all eight fire stations will "adopt" a needy family for the holiday season by supplying food, clothing and toys. In addition, the Quincy Police and Fire unions will adopt additional families in need.

A few days before Christmas, the families will receive their food and gifts from Santa Claus, accompanied by members of the police and fire departments.

Roche Brothers supermarket also will be supplying food for the families, he said.

"Last year, the police and fire departments combined forces to give something back to the city, and it was a huge success," said William Arienti, president of the Quincy firefighters union. "None of us are rich, but we are more fortunate than others, so we want to share our blessings."

Also, three Dunkin' Donuts shops in Quincy are conducting a holiday gift drive to benefit needy youngsters through the Center. The Dunkin' Donuts in President's Place, along with two locations on Southern Artery, are participating in the drive, Arienti said. The drive was launched last week and will continue until Dec.

22, Arienti said. The Center will distribute gifts throughout the city.

Octavio and Victor Carvalho, franchisees, will collect the gifts for children of all ages at all three locations.

Wal-Mart will also conduct a toy drive this Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Shoppers will be asked to buy one extra toy for the drive. The Quincy Police and Fire unions are conducting the drive.

The Germantown Neighborhood Center is a private, non-profit organization. Its annual holiday program aids families of low to moderate income in need by providing meals and gifts, counseling and other services.

Mercury Exchange Program Includes Home Thermometers

Quincy Public Works and the Quincy Health Department are expanding their mercury exchange program to include mercury home thermometers.

Residents bringing in old thermometers will receive two, $1.00 gift certificates to Dunkin' Donuts.

Also, residents who bring in mercury thermometers to the DPW at 55 Sea St. or to the Health Department at 1585 Hancock St. will receive a free digital thermometer.

Quincy has received a grant from American Ref-Fuel Company of SEMASS to eliminate toxic mercury from the environment. SEMASS is the company that receives the city's trash at the transfer station in Braintree and then incinerates it at their waste to energy plant in Wareham.

Improper disposal of mercury products is a major source of mercury contamination in fish. A mercury thermometer contains about a gram of the toxic element. It is estimated that 17 tons of mercury from thermometers is released into the environment annually.

35 More Community Leaders To Ring Bell For Salvation Army

Thirty-five more community leaders including Mayor William Phelan and former Mayors James Sheets and Frank McCauley will man a Christmas Kettle in Quincy Center today (Thursday) and Friday to help the Salvation Army brighten the holiday season for the needy.

Volunteers are still needed, however, at other kettle locations.

Any person or group wishing to volunteer is asked to contact the Quincy Temple Corps at 617-472-2345.

Food Items Can Be Left In Mailbox, Doorstep City-Wide Food Drive Saturday To Benefit Needy Families

Residents can leave non-perishable food items at their mailboxes or on their doorsteps as part of a city-wide food drive this Saturday, Dec. 13.

Mayor William Phelan and employees of the United States Postal Service are sponsoring the drive, which will benefit various food pantries in the city, including the Quincy Crisis Center, Seaside Pantry, Interfaith Social Services, the Salvation Army, Southwest Quincy Community Center Food Bank and others.

"I hope that this food drive represents the largest charitable endeavor in our city's history," said Phelan. "After the release of the recent Project Bread study that highlighted the fact that there are many hungry people in our city, I implore the people of Quincy to help those less fortunate amongst us during the holiday season."

The mayor is also looking for volunteers to help with the project. Anyone wishing to volunteer their time Saturday can call the mayor's office at 617-376-1990, the Quincy Crisis Center at 617-847-6967 or the

"Is it too late for me to refinance?"

(The surprising answer? Probably not!)

If you just go by what you hear or read in the mainstream media, you might think that the refinancing "window" has slammed shut. But that's a simplification that's simply not true. Here are the facts: Mortgage rates are still bouncing around near 50-year lows. So if you want to refinance for whatever reason — to be mortgage-free before you retire, to pay for tuition, to consolidate other loans and debts or just to lock in a low rate before the window does close — you still have time. But possibly not much. So don't wait. Come see us or call 617-471-0750.

Two Bridges For Paul

You might say there will be two bridges honoring the memory of Paul Harold.

One is the Quincy Center Concourse bridge to be dedicated in his name next May 2.

The other is a memorial fund being established by friends which will serve as a bridge to carry into the future the many good things he did in a life cut too short.

A city councillor, state senator and Norfolk County Register of Deeds in a distinguished political career spanning 27 years, Paul died Aug. 12 of last year from cancer. He was only 53.

To his many loyal followers, he was both the "voice and champion of the people" whom he always put first in whatever he did.

And for which he was selected posthumously as The Quincy Sun "Citizen of the Year" for 2002.

During his career, he traveled to many countries for the U.S. Information Agency to teach democracy and American values.

Close friends are creating "The Paul D. Harold Memorial Fund" to "continue the good works, civic support and generosity which characterized Paul Harold's life."

Among them are Mike Linnane, long-time key campaign supporter; Ann Knafelz, his secretary for 14 years while state senator; Robert Flavell, his Senate legislative aide; Dana Ahern and Jay MacRitchie, assistant city solicitor.

The group is planning a fund-raising three-mile road race in conjunction with the concourse bridge dedication with the proceeds going into the fund.

The runners will be the first over the bridge after its dedication as the "Paul D. Harold Memorial Bridge." The route will take them by City Hall and the Adams Mansion, one symbolic of his political career, the other of his passion for Quincy's rich history.

The road race is appropriate because Paul ran and completed the Boston Marathon a good dozen times as well as other road races and supported youth sports.

The memorial fund will help finance the continuation of such worthy causes Paul undertook during his life, as:

Quincy and North Quincy High School scholarships, book awards to high school graduates planning to study American government or public service, sponsorship of Quincy youth hockey and soccer teams and donations to promote teaching of the American Democratic system to emerging nations.

The concourse bridge is being named in Paul's honor through a home rule petition initiated by Mayor William Phelan and approved by the city council and the state legislature.

"It is a fitting tribute to a man who devoted his life to public service and to this community," Phelan said. "It is right to have a permanent remembrance in the city he loved so much."

Mayor's Holiday Open House Dec. 18

Mayor William Phelan will hold his annual Holiday Open House on Thursday, Dec. 18 from 3 to 5 p.m. in the mayor's office, City Hall, 3rd Floor, 1305 Hancock St.

The public is invited to stop by and enjoy a little holiday cheer with the mayor and his staff. Light refreshments will be served.

The holiday open house will take the place of the mayor's open office.

For more information, call the mayor's office at 617-376-1990.

It will be the second bridge of honor in the Harold family.

The Neponset River commuter rail bridge was renamed "The Joseph R. Harold, Sr. Memorial Bridge" in honor of Paul's father in 1998.

A decorated World War II veteran of the Battle of the Bulge and other battles, he served as a state adjutant of the Massachusetts Disabled American Veterans (DAV) for 43 years and was affectionately known as "Mr. Veteran" for his work with veterans.

He died in 1994 from injuries when struck by a car while crossing Sea St. on his way to Mass at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Merrymount.

The two bridges will now be sentimentally linked by father and son.

MAKE THAT FIVE new Quincy lawyers.

Tackey Chan and Sandy Callahan, both legislative aides to state Senator Michael Morrissey, passed the Massachusetts Bar exam and were sworn in earlier this week at ceremonies in historic Faneuil Hall.

We earlier noted in an earlier column that School Committee vice-chairwoman Christine Cedrone, Bryan Connolly, Ward 4 city councillor, and Joseph Keegan, Quincy police officer, are also new lawyers.

NEED A NEW battery for your wristwatch?

Well, you can get a nice replacement at Rogers Jewelry in Quincy Center and help a very worthy cause at the same time.

The Bertman family — Mark, Isobel and Jeff — again this holiday season through Dec. 31 are donating all receipts from watch battery replacements to the Salvation Army. The money goes into a Salvation Army mini-kettle in the store.

Last year the batteries added up to something like $1,500 to help the Salvation Army help the needy.

PATRICK AND TRACY McDermott are happily telling friends their family will soon be expanding.

They're expecting their second child in April of next year to join daughter, Alana, who is one.

"We don't know whether it is a boy or girl, we want to be surprised," says Pat.

McDermott, now Norfolk County Register of Probate, was formerly Ward 3 city councillor.

He and Tracy recently bought a home on Federal Ave., which makes them residents and constituents of Councillor Dan Raymondi.

MILESTONE: Long-time political observer Bill Dwyer has turned a young 82.

Bill, who once ran for state representative, had a popular gas station on Sea St. in Merrymount for many years where you could fill up on gas and catch up on the latest on the political front.

Bill still keeps an eye on the political scene and enjoying watching the career of his daughter-in-law, Elaine Dwyer, a member of the Quincy school committee.

Happy Birthday, Bill.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1957 postcard published by the late James H. McManus, owner of the Fox and Hounds Grille on Sea Street at the end of Wollaston Boulevard. He opened the restaurant in 1936 just after prohibition ended. It was famous for its large baked stuffed lobsters and charcoal-broiled club sirlloins. Perhaps even more famous than the food was this cocktail lounge that featured nightly entertainment. Popular personalities who appeared here included Hum and Strum and Hugh McGinness. McManus also owned the Fox and Hounds nightclub in Boston, the Red Coach Grille in Wayland, Brigham's Ice Cream and Candy Stores, The Brewster Sandwich Shops and the James H. McManus Ice Cream Co.

Will A New Quincy High School Ever Be Built?

Reviewing the report and map of the latest proposal by Mayor Phelan for a new Quincy High School, it appears to me to provide the possibility for a new Quincy High School never being built.

The mayor's first proposal for the Faxon Field site with so much wetland, terrible traffic problems, the necessity for garages for parking, and providing athletic practice fields as well as the high school itself was bad enough.

The latest proposal now has the location of the high school closer to the location of the present Center for Technical Education. Many will recall that tons of sawdust had to be used so that the foundation of the Center would not sink.

Now an underground garage is proposed to be built near to that site with the new Quincy High School built above it? With all the wetland, who can be sure that the seepage will not affect the foundation of such a garage? The other garage to be built will be located even closer to where the Center for Technical Education now stands. Then, on top of that garage, a soccer field will be built?

Building the garage safely is a big enough problem. However, a major concern is the additional need for extra security that they pose plus the additional cost. The traffic problems noted in the first proposal will not diminish; in fact, may increase.

The School Committee had come up with a reliable company with a very viable plan to handle the contamination at the Quincy Avenue site. However, Mr. Phelan waged a vigorous campaign against the plan to handle the contamination with "scare" tactics that disturbed students' parents so much that sufficient numbers would not support building the new Quincy High School at the Quincy Avenue site so we ended up with the Faxon Field site.

I'd like to point out that at Quarry Hills, athletic practice fields for Quincy youngsters are to be built on that contaminated land. I don't recall seeing any report on plans to handle that contaminated land compared to the well developed plans made to handle contamination at the Quincy Avenue site. If there was such a worry about students being in danger going to a new Quincy High School built and with some playing field areas built over contaminated land taken care of by a well developed plan, how come Mr. Phelan didn't question what the city was going to do with the contamination at Quarry Hills playing field areas?

In closing, it seems to me that we may yet have to revisit the Quincy Avenue site if the state or federal government deny a permit for the Faxon Field site. Central Middle School at a renovated Quincy High School is in the offing we must also remember.

A Tribute To Planning Director Rich Meade

While it is a benefit for worthy employees to be able to accept early retirement of funds, it can often times be a drawback to the community as well. Recently I read that Quincy Planning Director Richard Meade will be accepting the latest opportunity from the City of Quincy and that he will retire very shortly.

I have had the pleasure of knowing Rich for many years. I have worked with him and I have worked for him, and in all my years I have never met a better public employee than Rich Meade.

He not only showed tremendous skill in his duties as the Director of the Planning Department, overseeing a department which handles millions of dollars of Community Development Block Grant monies, but he also showed continued commitment in his role as a community person to the City of Quincy. You see Rich everywhere: at parades, at the special event ceremonies, at every city council meeting, on the tennis courts, at public hearings and at youth sports programs and school activities.

Rich not only has been a good employee, but a dedicated one. A person who has given his whole life to the City of Quincy and is a friend to many. Rich is a regular guy who has done a lot more than a regular job. He has committed a great deal of his private and professional life to make Quincy a better place to live!

While early retirement is good for folks like Rich Meade, and I wish him the very best in his "early" retirement, it is sad for the City of Quincy to lose such an important part of our community.

Police Arrest Boys Playing 'Chicken' On Railroad Tracks

Following disturbing reports of young boys playing "chicken" on the railroad tracks, Quincy police began surveillance and arrests this week.

The boys, students at either Central Junior High School or Quincy High School, were testing their speed and agility against oncoming Budd cars on the railroad overpass at Newport Ave. and Furnace Brook Parkway. They would sit on the track of oncoming cars, waiting for the first boy to jump; he would be the "chicken."

Police Chief William Ferrazzi said the first two boys picked up were first taken to the police station and then to their school and finally home.

It was reported that parents of the youngsters broke down and cried when told what their children were doing.

URBAN RENEWAL VOTE POSTPONED

The City Council put off until next year the $4,500 appropriation to begin a study for urban renewal in the city.

Councillor Edna Austin, Finance Committee chairwoman, favored immediate action and voted against the delay.

"I thought very strongly that we should have gone ahead with it. It seems to be something Quincy must take advantage of if it is to keep pace with other cities and towns."

QUINCY HUNGARIAN AID FUND SET UP

A city-wide, non-sectarian drive for funds for the Hungarian Refugee Relief was launched by three religious leaders: Fr. Edward Tagney of St. John's; Rev. Douglas Morse of the First Parish Church and Rabbi Jacob Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue.

The Quincy committee was formed in response to an appeal by Governor Herter for assistance to the victims of the Communist oppression that crushed the country's recent revolt to overthrow Soviet control.

Former 'Yardbird' Pens Book About Shipyard's History

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

David Drummond is troubled by what he sees at the site of the former Fore River shipyard.

"I'm a sentimental person, and to turn the most historical shipyard in the United States into a car lot is a shame," he said.

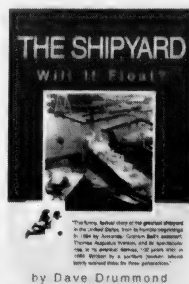

But Drummond, a former Quincy resident, isn't about to let anyone forget about the shipyard's illustrious history.

His new book, titled, The Shipyard: Will It Float? allows readers to take a step back in time and relive its past glories. Drummond himself was a shipfitter, or "yardbird," for more than a decade.

The glossy-covered paperback, including a 15-page photo section, is part autobiography, part history lesson. Drummond, who was born in Wollaston and grew up in Quincy Point, said the project started out as a personal memoir to his children nearly 20 years ago.

"My kids always asked what I did for a living," he said. "So I wrote this book originally as a memoir for my kids."

Drummond apprenticed and worked at the shipyard in the 1950s when it was under the Bethlehem Steel Co. and returned for a 10-year stint in 1970 when it was run by General Dynamics Corp.

by Dave Drummond

But the memoir turned into much more than that. When the shipyard closed in 1986, Drummond said he felt inclined to come up with a permanent record. He expanded on his original manuscript and turned it into a book.

He managed to get the book published through iUniverse Inc., a print-on-demand publisher based in Nebraska. Drummond said he has sold several hundred copies of the book, but has not yet managed to break even. The book was released this past July.

The book is packed with nostalgia, anecdotes, and personal experiences.

Drummond's historical narrative documents the yard's launch in 1884 to its eventual demise in 1986. The Bethlehem Steel shipyard workers built more destroyers than any yard in the nation during World War I, constructed the first nuclear-powered surface warship and destroyer, and built the world's largest commercial ship at the time, the 106,500-ton supertanker called Manhattan, in 1962, he said.

One chapter of the book is devoted to the many colorful characters that worked at the yard. Another chapter focuses on the shipyard's previous subculture - a city within a city - with 12 restaurants, 11 bars, six gas stations, four barber shops, three churches, a movie theatre, bowling alley and pool-room.

The book also references the dangerous working conditions that existed for employees at the yard. The former first class shipfitter said he quit working there in 1980 for fear of serious injury.

Drummond, who moved to Gulf Shores, Ala. nine years ago with his wife, Helene (Mills) Drummond, keeps busy as a tour guide at the National Museum of Naval Aviation in Pensacola, Fla.

But he makes periodic trips back to the South Shore for book signings, lectures and meetings with old friends. Drummond is his own publicist. "Word-of-mouth is the best advertisement of all," he said.

He visits local libraries, bookstores and other organizations with an interest, such as the Quincy Historical Society. The book sells for $16.95. It can be purchased at local bookstores or online at Amazon.com.

"I'm doing this strictly as a labor of love," he said. "I feel terrible this is the way the shipyard ended up."

Congregation Sends Gifts To Needy Kids Houghs Neck Sunday School Children Participate In 'Operation Christmas Child'

For most American children, a toothbrush and a tube of toothpaste would hardly qualify as exciting Christmas presents.

But as the children of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church Sunday School recently learned, such commonplace items are indeed considered luxuries by millions of poor children around the world.

Now, thanks to the efforts of the church's Sunday School children and congregation, more than 140 children in some of the world's poorest, war-torn lands will receive festively wrapped presents to brighten the holiday season as part of Operation Christmas Child.

A project of the Christian relief organization Samaritan's Purse, Operation Christmas Child annually delivers millions of shoeboxes filled with toys, school supplies and basic hygiene items to needy children in 120 countries around the world.

Participating children and families are also encouraged to include photos of themselves and letters so that the recipient of their gift-filled shoebox can write them a response.

TEACHERS AND STUDENTS of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church Sunday School display some of the more than 140 gift-filled shoeboxes the children and congregation wrapped as part of Operation Christmas Child.

"Operation Christmas Child is truly 'kids helping kids.' It was a wonderful way for the children to learn the true spirit of Christmas while also learning how fortunate they are," said Sunday School Co-Superintendent Gloria Brummitt, who spent the summer scouring outlet malls across New England for empty shoeboxes to use in Operation Christmas Child. "The children really embraced the project, wrapping and filling nearly 50 shoeboxes all on their own."

From there, Brummitt said, the project spread to the church's congregation as a whole, with some church members wrapping and filling two, three or even four boxes.

On Sunday, Nov. 16, the Sunday School children and congregation brought all of the wrapped gifts to church, where they were laid upon the altar for a special blessing before being sent overseas. The gifts were also the subject of a special children's message by Interim Minister Max Olmstead.

Since 1993, Operation Christmas Child has hand-delivered more than 24 million shoebox gifts to needy children around the world. This year, the project expects to deliver 7 million gifts, many of them to children living in strife-ridden countries such as Afghanistan, Pakistan, Jordan and Sudan.

Germantown Treasure Walk Sunday

An evergreens nature walk in Germantown led by Councilor-elect Leo Kelly has been rescheduled for Sunday at 2 p.m.

The Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures "Celebration of Evergreens" walk had origi-

Participants are asked to meet at the parking lot of the Quincy Housing Authority maintenance building, 15 Bicknell St.

Kelly will also discuss his Quincy Evergreen Program started 15 years ago to recycle Christmas trees.

Those turning in their trees after Christmas are provided with an evergreen sapling in the spring to plant. Some of those now grown saplings will be viewed on the tour.

The evergreen program is made possible through the financial assistance of contractor Jay Cashman.

For more information about Sunday's walk call the Park Department at 617-376-1254.

Mayor Resumes Office Hours

Mayor William Phelan announces that beginning today (Thursday) he will be available once again each Thursday from 3 to 5 p.m. to meet with citizens wishing to discuss issues of concern.

"The Thursday office hours have become a great outlet for people to voice their concerns directly to us and we are excited to get back into the regular schedule for the winter months," said Phelan. "As always, I welcome the opportunity to meet with folks who take the time to come to City Hall to hear their concerns or ideas."

Thomas Largey, executive secretary to the mayor, stressed that citizens should continue to contact the mayor, members of his staff or city employees by telephone, letter, fax, or email on the city's newly-expanded website.

No appointment is required to meet with the mayor, but citizens should check the city's website in the event that inclement weather or unforeseen circumstances have not affected the scheduled hours, said Largey.

Quincy 2000 Provides $13,400 To Young Business For Equipment Purchases

A $31,400 loan provided by The Quincy 2000 Corporation has enabled a small business in West Quincy to enhance its future prospects with a new equipment purchase.

Bronze Ambition Tanning Salon, a two-year-old business at 273 Willard St., used the proceeds of the loan to purchase a state-of-the-art, sunless, ultra violet-free, spray-on tanning machine.

"Quincy 2000 is one of the few places where financing for early-stage businesses is available," said Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000.

"Because Bronze Ambition met the eligibility criteria, we were able to make Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds available for the equipment purchase."

Mayor William Phelan called the loan "another good example of the type of resources that the city, in partnership with Quincy 2000, is able to provide to help businesses grow and expand in our community."

Quincy 2000 provides financing for Quincy businesses either through the city's CDBG funds or through its Quincy 2000 loan pool, a consortium of 12 area banks which has about $5 million available.

"We are now able to offer our clients the revolutionary new MagneTan Technology process that uses the body's own magnetic properties to produce a natural looking tan," said Audra Stevens, owner of Bronze Ambition.

"Investment in new equipment is such a critical ongoing need in business today, and Quincy 2000 is unique in responding to this need. They made it a painless process."

Romney Vetoes Morrissey's Move To Promote Gas Safety

Gov. Mitt Romney has vetoed an amendment proposed by Sen. Michael Morrissey that sought to require a study of gas safety in the state.

Morrissey, Senate chairman of the Legislature's Joint Committee on Government Regulations, amended a supplemental budget passed by the Legislature by requiring a gas study in the state. A gas explosion that occurred on July 24, 2002 at a Hopkinton home, which resulted in the death of two children, and the recently released investigation into that explosion, prompted Morrissey to file the amendment.

"My amendment would have simply directed the Department of Telecommunications and Energy to evaluate the safety of gas pipeline facilities, the transportation of gas and the quality of service provided by gas companies," said Morrissey.

He said the amendment was a way to ensure that companies are meeting their obligation and responsibility to the public.

The Pipeline Engineering and Safety Division of the Department of Telecommunications and Energy (DTE), the state agency charged with overseeing utilities in the Commonwealth, released its Incident Report and Notice of Proposed Violation concerning the Hopkinton explosion to NStar Gas Company on Nov. 7, 2003. NStar Gas was found to have violated certain federal pipeline regulations and a civil penalty of $200,000 was levied against the company. NStar denied any responsibility for the tragedy in a letter to DTE.

"The objections raised by NStar Gas concerning the Incident Report generated by DTE highlight the need for a detailed study into gas safety in the Commonwealth by showing that a regulated gas company and the agency charged with regulating the gas company are in disagreement with respect to a major gas explosion that cost lives," said Morrissey.

Morrissey said he will work with his Senate colleagues to override Romney's veto in January.

REPRESENTATIVES OF QUINCY'S Kiwanis, Lions and Rotary clubs drop off some of the 100 Thanksgiving dinners the clubs donated to Interfaith Social Services' Pantry Shelf food program. The service clubs, aided by the North Quincy High Interact Club, also donated $1,300 to the program. Kiwanis, Lions, Rotary Clubs Donate 100 Thanksgiving Dinners, $1,300 To ISS Pantry Shelf

While hunger is an ongoing problem for many local families, at no time of year is the lack of food perhaps more keenly felt than at Thanksgiving.

This year, however, more than 100 local families in need enjoyed a true Thanksgiving dinner thanks to Quincy's Kiwanis, Lions and Rotary clubs. The three service clubs—aided by the North Quincy High School Interact Club—joined forces to conduct a special Thanksgiving food drive to benefit Interfaith Social Services' Pantry Shelf.

Instead of asking club members to donate whatever extra canned goods they happened to have on hand, participants were asked to provide a bag of food containing all the fixings for a traditional Thanksgiving dinner. Each bag contained stuffing mix, instant potatoes, gravy, cranberry sauce, rolls, two kinds of vegetables, two desserts and a $10 gift card to purchase a turkey.

Together, the Kiwanis, Lions and Rotary clubs and high school students donated more than 100 complete Thanksgiving dinners for families in need. In addition, the groups also made a cash donation of more than $1,300 to The Pantry Shelf, which provides free food to more than 6,800 local individuals each year.

"The Postal Service is honored to support this very worthy effort, especially at this time of year," said Marsha Cannon, postmaster of Boston. "We encourage Quincy residents to be as generous as possible and we thank them very much in advance."

Phelan, a former letter carrier, thanked postal service employees for their help.

"They are willing to accept the added burden of picking up the items and we should all be thankful for their commitment to alleviating the issue of hunger in Quincy."

Non-perishable food items are canned goods, such as vegetable and soups, which do not expire.

Quincy Elks Host 150 Seniors At Christmas Party

The Quincy Lodge of Elks recently hosted 150 senior citizens at a dinner dance and Christmas party at the lodge on Quarry St.

The dinner was catered by the Barretts and served by members of the lodge, their families, and girls from Quincy and North Quincy High schools who participated in sports at their schools. The seniors danced to music by DJ Dennis Kelly.

Exalted Ruler James Ryan extended the greetings of the lodge.

Speakers included: State Sen. Michael Morrissey,

State Rep. Bruce Ayers, City Council President Dan Raymond, Register of Deeds, Bill O'Donnell and Tom Clasby, director of Quincy Elder Services. They went from table to table addressing the senior's concerns.

Former Councillor Ted DeChristofaro was among those attending. A door prize and poinsettias were won by several seniors.

Quincy College Breaks Charity Record

Quincy College employees topped last year's records in charitable contributions for the United Way of Massachusetts Bay and continued a number of community service projects since the summer, the college announces.

For several years, the college has participated in charitable programs benefiting hundreds of agencies in the community.

"This year 34 public employees at Quincy College donated nearly $8,500 to the United Way, representing an increase over last year's total by more than a thousand dollars, with more participants than ever," said Michael Collins, director of College and Community Development. "We're proud of the contributions ranging from $20 to $1,500 with two contributors over the $1,000 mark. President Sean Barry, for the third year, led the donors with the first, and largest pledge."

Each year, Barry holds a recognition luncheon for donors at the college and shares insights about where the United Way funds will be used.

Collins explained that since July of this year, Quincy College employees volunteers to perform a day of community service, painting the South Shore Day Care Center in Weymouth; in October, they collected more than 200 cans of non-perishable foods for the Salvation Army of Quincy; and they committed to two days of holiday kettle ringing for the Salvation Army; and will sponsor a food drive for the Quincy Crisis Center before the Christmas holiday.

"These charitable endeavors are part of our college's commitment to the community," said William Hall, who in 2001 and 2002 coordinated the United Way Drive, and continues to organize the Crisis Center campaign. "Every member of the college community participates in their own way, and it comes together to directly benefit our neighbors. We all feel good about this small effort."

After the new year, a clothing drive and additional canned goods drive will round out the winter efforts of the college and faculty staff, Collins said. "That's not even mentioning the essential needs drive that our honor society conducts," he said, referencing the college honor society annual collection for homeless people.

Life Line Screening For Strokes Tomorrow At 1000 Southern Artery

Quincy residents can be screened to reduce their risk of having a stroke by attending a Life Line Screening tomorrow, Dec. 12, beginning at 9 a.m. in 1000 Southern Artery.

Residents are encouraged to make an appointment by calling 1-800-643-6188.

A stroke, also known as a "brain attack," is ranked as the third leading killer in the world, and the second among women. Through preventive screening, the risk of having a stroke can be greatly reduced.

Screenings are fast, painless and low cost. They involve the use of ultrasound technology, and scan for potential health problems related to: blocked arteries which can lead to a stroke, aortic aneurysms which can lead to a ruptured aorta, and hardening of the arteries in the legs, which are a strong predictor of heart disease. Also offered for men and women, is a bone density screening to assess their risk for osteoporosis.

Each screening requires 10 minutes or less to complete. A complete vascular screening package, including the Stroke/Carotid Artery, Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm and Ankle Brachial Index (hardening of the arteries) screenings is $99. Sign-up for a complete vascular package; include the osteoporosis screening and pay only $125.

Life Line Screening was established in 1993, and has since become the nation's leading provider of vascular screenings. Over 45 ultrasound teams are on staff to travel to communities.

Coughlin To Propose Clamp-Down On Abandoned Shopping Carts

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin is set to introduce an ordinance that seeks to clamp down on the number of abandoned shopping carts in the city.

At next week's city council meeting, Coughlin will submit a proposal that asks retailers to come up with a system for keeping shopping carts within the boundaries of their business properties.

If the ordinance is approved, retailers will have 90 days to submit a proposal to the City Clerk's office. Proposals submitted by retailers would be subject to approval by the Quincy Licensing Board, Coughlin said.

"As long as it meets the spirit and intent of the ordinance it would most likely be approved by the city," he said. "This revised ordinance provides a little more flexibility to retailers."

Retailers found to be in violation of the ordinance would be fined $25 each day that the violation occurs, Coughlin said. A first offense would result in a written warning, he said.

In addition, the ordinance calls on retailers to identify their property by affixing signs to their shopping carts.

The ordinance makes it unlawful for customers to remove shopping carts from the premises of a business unless the user has been given consent by the owner.

Wollaston Just The Right Place For Antiques, Collectibles Shop

By SHEILA HALLORAN

Patricia Ford would not consider any location other than Wollaston to open her antique shop. She kept a close eye on Wollaston for some time until an opportunity opened this past summer.

The owner of the newly opened Wollaston Antiques and Collectibles at 23A Beale Street recalls coming to Wollaston Center as a child and visiting the jewelry store in the exact location that she later purchased.

Prior to opening her shop, Ford worked in Quincy schools with young children with special needs. She also worked in real estate for some time.

The idea of opening her own antique shop stemmed from a two-year period of living in Kansas while her husband was in the service. While in Kansas, Ford ran an antique shop and said she enjoyed the "laid back" feel of it.

Wollaston Antiques and Collectibles carries a wide range of collectibles. Ford is an official dealer of the charming line of Snowbabies and her shop also carries a large selection of Bearington Bears as well as a complete line of Old Virginia Candles. Other items include old-fashioned furniture, antique dolls, and historical pictures.

Ford collects most of her items from estates, auctions and from consignors. She welcomes consignments, quality antiques and used furniture. To make arrangements for consignments, call her at 617-471-4300 or stop by her shop.

Ford said she is looking forward to the holiday season and to helping her customers with their antiques and collectibles needs. If there is something a customer wants that Ford does not carry, she will look into it and more than likely, will find what they are looking for.

So far Ford said the reception in Wollaston has been excellent. "It's a great area with nice people and great merchants. People seem very excited that there is a place like this in their neighborhood," said Ford. "It's very reminiscent and it takes them back."

Veterans Benefits Bill Passes State Senate

By a 35-0 vote, the Massachusetts Senate recently passed legislation expanding the definition of a veteran for the purpose of providing state veteran benefits.

The legislation, Senate Bill 822, expands the definition of veteran to include full-time national guardsmen with at least 90 days of active service and one day of wartime service, and American Merchant Marines that served in an armed conflict between Dec. 7, 1941 and Dec. 31, 1944.

In addition, the legislation eliminates the wartime requirement for Army, Navy, Marines, Air Force and Coast Guard servicemen who have at least 180 days of active service.

"This language change is long overdue," said Sen. Michael Morrissey. "Senate Bill 822 will bring the state statute pertaining to veterans' benefits more into alignment with the federal government."

The legislation moves to the House Ways and Means Committee.

Board Suspends Licenses At Quincy Center Restaurant

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday issued a three-day common victualer, all alcoholic license suspension to the Five Spices Restaurant at President's Place, 1250 Hancock St. because of a liquor violation and an altercation at the restaurant on Dec. 3.

The restaurant is owned by Derek Truong and Ming Cheu.

The board also issued a two month suspension for the entertainment license including Karaoke.

The motion was made by Capt. Robert Crowley, seconded by Fire Chief Paul O'Connell, and voted unanimously by the board.

The complaint was made by Det. Lt. Robert Perchard who said the first violation was when the restaurant opened in January. There was a "happy hour" violation from 4-6 p.m. which is against Massachusetts law.

Perchard said when he spoke to the owner he "didn't listen to me" and commented it seems like the "tail wagging the dog."

He said he thought the owner had "lost control" of the establishment and said his food business is failing and he is trying to concentrate on the bar business which he said "doesn't work". He recommended a three day suspension.

Capt. Robert Crowley said he observed patrons at the bar drinking after 1:30 a.m. Truong said he remembered it was 1:15 a.m.

On the night of Dec. 3 when an alleged assault took place in which the victim's arm was broken, the owner said he called the police because of a verbal argument, but didn't know about the injury until the next day.

Atty. Thomas Williams said Truong had been here in this country for 10 years and had invested $400,000 in the restaurant and to close him up would hurt his "livelihood."

Williams wondered why the victim with a broken arm waited until the next night to go to the police.

Fire Chief Paul O'Connell, Director of Inspectional Services, Walter White as well as other board members said they thought

Truong should have a "change of attitude."

O'Connell said he did not believe this was the "first offense" and said he would agree to a suspension.

Williams repeatedly requested the board to continue the hearing until the victim was asked to appear before the board. White said that Truong should have called the police earlier and said he "waited too long."

White added that a pattern of violation had established and was "escalating." He said it was clear that there are problems and that some action should be taken. He said that when police arrive at the restaurant, they should be "treated with respect".

According to Perchard Truong and his workers seemed to view the presence of police as an "interruption."

Crowley said he believed that Truong was not "up front" when the police arrived by telling them it was a verbal argument, and not revealing all of the facts.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he would set a date for the suspension which will begin on a Thursday and run through Saturday...

The owner has five days to appeal to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission.

other storms in recent memory.

"I had some complaints that the equipment used to plow the streets was too light," said Coughlin. "Comparatively speaking, Quincy was no better or no worse than other communities I saw, such as Somerville, Everett and Cambridge."

Lamotte said residential parking posed a problem for plow operators. He said many plows were not able to clean side streets properly because residents were parked on both sides of the street.

"Residents need to adhere to the parking rules, otherwise it makes it more difficult to knock off these streets. We want to do the best job possible, but residents need to help us," he said.

Coughlin agreed residents should be aware of the city's parking rules.

"There was a high disregard for the winter time parking rules," he said. "And that did impede plows from getting down some streets."

This year, residents should park vehicles on the odd-numbered side of the street during snow emergencies.

Lamotte said plows and sand trucks would continue to operate throughout the week.

Conway Country Float Wins Mayor's Trophy

Jack Conway Real Estate continued its award-winning tradition in the annual Quincy Christmas Parade this year, bringing home the Mayor's Trophy for Best Quincy Float.

The entry featured a replica of Noah's Ark, constructed by Ed Corbo of Conway's Property Management and Maintenance Division. Sales agents and their families portrayed the animals rescued from the great flood, with Quincy's Dan Pritchard riding high as Noah, the ark's captain.

"We've been doing this for many, many years, and it's always a grand old time," said Conway Vice Chairman John Reardon, who led the company's delegation behind the wheel of his classic Corvair convertible. "Everyone did a great job in the parade."

In addition to the ark and water scene constructed by Corbo, the float was decorated with wooden animals painted by Pat McCone, a sales agent from Quincy who shared her artistic talents.

Conway's award-winner was among 17 floats in the parade, which also featured 18 bands, police motorcycles, fire trucks and clowns performing circus tricks along the route.

George White, the retired advertising director for The Patriot Ledger, has been chairman of the parade committee for the past 24 years. He said the tremendous turnout and creativity of the float entrants has him "already energized" for next year's parade, which will be the event's 52nd year.

Founded in 1956, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independent real estate company in Massachusetts, with more than 753 sales agents in 41 offices from Boston to Cape Cod. Last year, the company posted more than $1.53 billion in sales and was ranked the 77th largest real estate firm in the United States by National Relocation and Real Estate magazine.

Conway Country's Noah's Ark Float took home the Mayor's Trophy for Best Quincy Float in the city's 51st Annual Christmas Parade on Nov. 30. Many thanks to Noah and his wife (played by Conway-Quincy agents Dan Pritchard and Sheila Howard), and the animals, played by Conway-Quincy and Weymouth agents: Pat McCone, Jim Howard, Kathy Harkins, and Nancy Ruta and children Shannon Winslow, Jess and Matthew Harkins, and Martina Giannetti. Special thanks to float creator and driver Eddie Corbo of Conway H.Q., who constructed the ark.

Bank of Canton's Quincy Branch Concludes Customer Appreciation Days

Bank of Canton recently capped off its Customer Appreciation Days celebration with a drawing for two Boston Celtics tickets.

The lucky winner was Quincy resident Guy Mastrorilli, who was presented with his prize by James D. Egan, President and CEO of Bank of Canton.

Customers were encouraged to stop by the branch and enjoy refreshments, receive giveaways, and enter a free drawing to win two tickets to an upcoming Boston Celtics game.

"We scheduled our Appreciation Days because reaching the $100 million mark is a significant milestone for any bank branch, and we wanted to thank all our valued customers for their support," explained Mr. Egan. FleetBoston Financial Foundation Gives $2,500 Grant To Asian American Civic Assn.

FleetBoston Financial Foundation announces a $2,500 grant to the Asian American Civic Association (AACA), a community-based nonprofit organization that serves Asian immigrants and refugees who reside in Quincy, Boston, Brookline, Cambridge, Malden, Medford, Newton, Randolph and Somerville.

The grant will help support AACA's Education Center, whose primary goal is to assist Asian immigrants and refugees in achieving economic self-sufficiency and overcoming linguistic and cultural isolation.

Funding from the FleetBoston Financial Foundation will help AACA deliver services such as English as a Second Language (ESL), family literacy, adult basic education, and vocational training, since the greatest barriers participants face are the lack of English language skills, cultural knowledge and transferable job skills.

The mission of AACA is to provide limited-English speaking and economically disadvantaged Asians with programs and services to develop the literacy and employment skills needed to achieve financial self-sufficiency.

The FleetBoston Financial Foundation sustains a vital community-focused giving program in New England and across the Northeast. Through the FleetBoston Financial Foundation, the FleetBoston Financial Corporation demonstrates its strong civic leadership, community partnership and commitment to being a socially responsible corporate citizen by focusing its philanthropy to promote economic opportunity, youth development, public education and the arts and culture.

Companies Can Check Insurance Score As Part Of Home Purchase

By CHRISTOPHER HARADEN

It's common knowledge that lenders check borrowers' credit reports during the application process, but did you know that insurance companies also use credit histories to make decisions on whether to issue policies?

Like mortgage lenders, who use a complex formula to assign individuals a credit score, many insurers now consider the financial history of policyholders and their record of past insurance claims to calculate an insurance score. The companies use the score to determine the consumer's level of risk, or the probability that the new homeowner will file a claim in the near future.

In addition, some companies are using the information in a national database to develop claim history reports on individual properties. So while you might have a squeaky-clean credit report and no past insurance losses, if the property you're hoping to buy has had several claims by previous owners, finding insurance coverage could be difficult and more expensive.

Studies have shown a correlation between consumers' financial history and their future insurance loss potential, according to Atlanta-based ChoicePoint, the company that developed and maintains the industry database.

Known as the Comprehensive Loss Underwriting Exchange (CLUE), the database contains information on about 90 percent of the insurance claims made in the United States during the past five years.

ChoicePoint will provide claim-history reports to consumers over the Internet or by mail. Massachusetts residents are eligible to receive one free report by mail each year. While consumers can check their own claim history, property data is available only to owners, so buyers cannot obtain a report on a home until after the closing.

Traditional credit scores (sometimes called FICO scores) use past performance to analyze consumers' likelihood of repaying debts. Creditors use the scores to make decisions about whether to grant mortgages, auto loans, revolving accounts and other forms of credit. An adverse score could mean a higher interest rate, less favorable terms, or outright rejection of the credit request.

Similarly, insurance scores on individuals and property claim histories can determine whether an insurer will charge more or deny the coverage completely. In some instances, homes with past claims for water damage or mold infestation are rejected or placed in a high-risk pool of policies with higher premiums, larger deductibles or exclusions for similar losses in the future.

Insurance scores take into account the following factors from an individual's credit report: outstanding debt, length of credit history, late payments, new applications for credit, types of credit used, payment patterns, available credit, public records, and past due amounts. Each insurer receives the same information from CLUE but not every company uses the same scoring model.

Most scoring systems, however, generate "reason codes" in addition to the numeric score to explain up to four main factors that influenced the score.

For more information and instructions on obtaining your CLUE report, visit www.choicepoint.com or call ChoicePoint at 1-800-342-5339.

While on that subject, it's also a good idea to check the accuracy of your credit report from the three major credit-reporting agencies - Equifax, Experian and Trans Union. Lenders will most likely use a report from one of these bureaus in judging your ability to repay a loan.

Massachusetts residents are entitled to one free copy of their credit report per calendar year. Consider requesting a report annually to ensure your report is accurate.

Under state law, you also have the right to obtain a free copy of your report within 60 days of being denied credit, so that you can see the information that was used to evaluate your application for credit.

If there is incorrect information in your credit file, you may ask the credit-reporting agency to investigate, according to the Massachusetts Office of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation. The agency offers information and assistance on managing credit and debt to Bay State residents.

The credit agency must investigate your claim within 30 business days by asking the creditor in question to review its records, unless the agency believes that the dispute is "frivolous or irrelevant." The credit-reporting agency must correct, complete, or delete any information that is erroneous, incomplete, or unverifiable.

Additionally, negative information that is more than seven years old cannot be included in your credit report. There are several exceptions to this rule - the main one is bankruptcy, which may be reported for up to 10 years.

If you disagree with the results of the credit bureau's investigation, you have the right to prepare a brief statement that explains your version of the dispute. The credit-reporting agency will then include this statement with your credit file each time it sends out the report.

For more information, call the Massachusetts Office of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation hotline, (617) 727-7780 or toll-free (888) 283-3757, or visit the agency's Web site:

www.state.ma.us/consumer/Pubs/credit.htm

Initiative Focuses On Consumers, Real Estate Practitioners

The Massachusetts Association of Realtors® (MAR) Board of Directors has voted overwhelmingly to approve an initiative to create a comprehensive framework for defining and clarifying agency relationships in residential real estate practice.

The proposal is based on similar statutes successfully implemented in 25 other states, according to data from the Association of Real Estate Law Officials (ARELLO), and reflects the evolution of relationships between consumers and real estate practitioners.

"Consumers and real estate practitioners want options and will be much better served by clear guidelines when it comes to real estate services. Remarkably, Massachusetts is just one of a handful of states in the nation that still has no comprehensive rules on agency. With formal adoption of this initiative, Massachusetts consumers will have well-defined options for services and a much clearer understanding of what to expect from real estate practitioners," said MAR President Peter Casey.

Approval of the proposal follows a multi-year study of the issue by the MAR and reflects broad-based statewide support among the membership to adapt agency practices consistent with the developing desires of buyers and sellers for representation in real estate transactions. The MAR proposal contains the following provisions:

- Defines, clarifies, and provides guidelines for the practice of designated agency. (Designated agency is a process where, with the consumer's consent, a broker designates one or more agents to represent a seller and designates one or more agents to represent a buyer in the same transaction.)
- Clear definitions and disclosures for informed consent regarding dual agency.
- Clarifies, defines and provides guidelines for the practice of facilitation. (Facilitation is a process where a real estate practitioner provides brokerage services to a buyer and/or a seller without having an agency relationship. The person may also be called a transaction broker.

• Requires clear written consent and disclosures from the consumer for subagency to occur on their behalf in real estate transactions.

"Our proposal simplifies the agency process for consumers and practitioners by creating uniform standards that ensure adequate and full disclosure to buyers and sellers throughout their real estate transaction," said Casey.

Realtor® feedback revealed that a major concern among practitioners is the absence of rules regarding the practice of agency. Furthermore, within the New England region, Connecticut and Maine laws have permitted the practice of designated agency since 1999 and 1994, respectively. According to officials in those states, designated agency has not been the subject of consumer complaints.

"Designated agency provides increased opportunities for buyer representation in the marketplace. Every option in the MAR initiative has been thoroughly researched and is currently being practiced in many states already. In the end, it is the consumer's right to choose what's best for them," said John Fridlington, MAR executive vice president.

"This initiative seeks to create an environment where consumers and practitioners know what to expect from each other in the real estate transaction, and that increases the likelihood that the transaction will be a positive experience for all involved," said Casey.

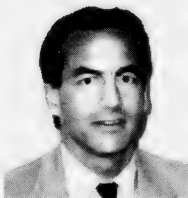

The matter will now be referred to the MAR Government Affairs Committee for implementation.

SPORTS

Despite Playoff Loss, Progress For Presidents

By CHRIS POISSON

It's nearly midway through the first quarter of last week's Division 3 semifinal and the game has flowed as smooth as sandpaper for the Quincy High School football team.

On their first series, the Presidents can't muster even a yard and are forced to punt. Mansfield, on the other hand, quickly swallows chunks of yardage on the ground for an easy touchdown.

On the ensuing kickoff, Quincy strikes the Hornets' special teams unit with a stinging blow.

J.J. Niamkey fields a rolling ball at his 8-yard line, calmly surveys up field and then, like uncorking a bottle of champagne, bursts past everyone with swift, long strides into the north end zone.

The senior's 30th career touchdown momentarily warmed the spirits of the Quincy fans on this frigid night, with arctic winds whipping through Veterans Memorial Stadium.

And when junior Frank McMurrough recovered the following kickoff at the Mansfield 39, it seemed like destiny would carry the Presidents to an upset victory.

Like a game of poker, though, the better team came out ahead over the long haul.

Quincy turned the ball over two plays later and the Hornets never looked back. They scored on all five of their first-half possessions for a 31-6 lead and an eventual 45-12 win.

"What can you say?," said head coach Bob Noble after the game. "They're an outstanding football team. They did a tremendous job across the line of scrimmage. Their offense handled us defensively, very easily actually, which is unfortunate because our kids played very hard."

The 2003 season may have ended in disappointment, but, as Noble noted, Quincy was one of the final 28 teams to dress for the playoffs while about 200 other high school football squads sat at home.

The program's transformation under Noble has been remarkable in his five seasons. In his first year, he led the team to its first win after 20 straight losses. In his third year, he guided it to its first winning season since 1994. And now, two years later, he steered Quincy to its first league championship in 33 years.

On deck: a Super Bowl championship.

"This is just another step in the road," Noble said. "I keep saying that. I hate to keep going back to it, but four years ago we had lost 20 straight games. Now we're within a game of playing for the state championship.

"Yeah, you wish the outcome was different, but, as I said, this is just part of the ongoing process of the football program. We're going to continue to get better. We've won a championship and now we want to win a state championship. We want to get to that next level."

The Presidents will graduate 26 seniors, a talented class that was instrumental in the program's recent success. And they'll certainly miss Niamkey. For two-plus seasons, they were used to watching No. 23 leave defenders in his wake as he broke free for long scores.

Quincy has reinforcement on the way. This year, the junior varsity squad finished 7-2 and the freshman team went 4-4. And there's the underclassmen on the roster this year.

Freshman Jared Tucker should continue the team's trend of solid quarterbacks. Junior Jose Ortiz and sophomore Everton DeCastro could form a potent backfield duo. Juniors Marc Hutchins and McMurrough and sophomores DJ Andrews and Pat Stroud also contributed, to name a few.

"We're going in the right direction," Noble said. "We're going to have a lot to build on. We're going to have some nice freshmen coming in next year. We're going to build on this for next year. It was a tremendous experience this year. I can't be any more prouder of the kids. The future is bright here."

Late in the third quarter against Mansfield, three seniors — first-year quarterback Josh Giordani, wideout Ian Jorgensen and Niamkey, the team's top offensive performers — led Quincy to its final touchdown of the season and their careers.

Giordani threw a short pass to Jorgensen, who used his 6-foot-4, 210-pound frame to run over defenders for a 33-yard gain to the Mansfield 29. Giordani knifed his way for 8 yards, and a personal foul penalty

DOING IT WITH MIRRORS

To ensure that you have a proper view of other vehicles, cyclists, and pedestrians while driving, set your mirrors to avoid blind spots. Begin by adjusting your rear-view mirror so that it reflects the entire rear window. Then, while sitting in the driver's seat, rest your head on the left window and adjust the left mirror so that you can see just beyond your vehicle's left side. Next, align your head under the rear-view mirror and adjust the right mirror so that you can see just beyond the vehicle's right side. Finally, be sure to use your rear- and side-view mirrors by familiarizing yourself with reflected images and becoming comfortable with using them.

For safety's sake please adjust your side mirrors properly. The safety of our customers and their families is very important to us here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO and we want them to be informed. You can trust your auto repairs to use at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We are also your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: If you fail to use your side mirrors and instead crane your neck, you are probably compromising your driving safety.

on Mansfield gave Quincy a first down at the 11.

Giordani then faked to Niamkey and scrambled to the right pylon where he was knocked out of bounds at the half-yard line. On the next play, he plunged in for the score.

"They outplayed us in every aspect of the game, but I'm pleased the kids were still playing and fighting right to the end," Noble said. "For many of them, it's the last time they'll put on a football uniform. You have to have some pride in yourself, in what you're doing and your accomplishments. They played hard to get us here."

Although they walked off the field in frustration, this edition of the Presidents will have plenty of memories to look back on with a sense of pride.

There's the six-game winning streak, which included a grueling three-week road trip to the Cape.

There's Niamkey's explosive Friday night at Dennis-

Yarmouth when he gained 462 all-purpose yards with four touchdowns and a passing TD.

There's the fifth straight win over North Quincy on Thanksgiving to tie the series record.

There's the come-from-behind victory over Plymouth North that clinched a share of its first league championship in 33 years.

And with the shape the program is in, Quincy shouldn't have to wait until 2036 for another league title and playoff game.

It's Never Too Late to Start Exercising

Q. I am 50 years old and have never exercised a day in my adult life. I am accustomed to working, taking care of my yard and doing things around the house. My doctor recently told me that I needed to begin an exercise program to help lower my blood pressure and weight. I don't know where to begin and am intimidated by health clubs. Where should I start? — C.T.

A. I commend you for listening to your doctor and seeking assistance in starting an exercise program. Exercise is proven to improve blood pressure and lower weight, so starting an exercise program is the smart thing to do.

Contrary to what you think, you HAVE exercised during your adult life. The work you describe requires the use of your muscles, bones and heart. Furthermore, although you don't have a structured exercise routine, you are "active," which is really the most important element of every exercise program.

With just a few modifications, you will be on the road to improving your health and becoming an official exerciser. Here are a few suggestions:

- Take one step at a time. Begin by doing small activities such as walking around the neighborhood or riding a bike. Start walking and riding for 10 to 15 minutes initially and increase the duration as you feel more comfortable. Use that time to enjoy yourself as well as improve your cardiovascular function. If riding or walking doesn't appeal to you, find an exercise you do like, such as swimming.

- Although you might feel intimidated, a fitness facility is a great resource for starting an exercise program. You'll get access to the best equipment as well as the support of professional staff. Try taking one for a test drive; many facilities will offer temporary memberships for prospective members to encourage them to join. Also, look for a facility that has educated and certified trainers. The trainers often offer free initial sessions. During these sessions, the trainer will review your health history and design an exercise program specifically to fit your needs.

Many people feel like you do when they are faced with exercising for the first time. It is never too late in life to begin to exercise, and you'll reap many dividends both now and in the future.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@heartsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

A New Year's Resolution:

Quit Smoking – For Real This Time

Every January, smokers across America pledge to quit smoking. But by February, many have given up the effort and are back in the habit, saying that New Year's resolution for next year. How can people really make 2004 the year they quit smoking?

According to Frederick Grannis, M.D., a lung cancer specialist at City of Hope Cancer Center in Los Angeles, "The most important ingredient in successful smoking cessation is for the individual smoker to make a personal decision to stop smoking in order to avoid the risks to future health. Having said that, it must be understood that it is very hard to stop smoking. The smoker is addicted to nicotine and also has a complex behavior pattern and habit of smoking. Although some people can quit 'cold turkey,' without any help, most people fail on their own and need help."

When people quit smoking, the body reacts to the absence of nicotine, resulting in withdrawal symptoms that can include depression, feelings of frustration or anger, irritability, difficulty sleeping, restlessness, headaches, tiredness and increased appetite.

Nicotine substitutes and prescription oral medicines, such as bupropion, can help ease withdrawal symptoms. There are many types of nicotine replacements including nicotine patches, nicotine gum, nicotine nasal spray, nicotine inhalers and nicotine lozenges.

Once the physical symptoms of quitting are under control, it is time to focus on the psychological challenges. For many people, smoking is strongly linked to daily activities such as waking up, eating a meal, watching TV or drinking coffee. To cope with cravings that come at these moments, it is necessary to alter your behavior.

"For example, if you usually have a cigarette when you drink coffee, try taking a brisk walk instead of a coffee break, or consider drinking water or juice instead of coffee," suggests Dr. Grannis.

Other tips:

- Get rid of smoking-related items such as lighters and ashtrays.
- Let your friends and family know you are quitting so that you have a strong support system, or consider attending a smoking cessation class.
- Avoid people and places where you are tempted to smoke until you are more confident about your ability to avoid the temptation.
- Try alternatives such as chewing gum, hard candy or sunflower seeds.
- Find ways to keep your hands busy to distract you

from the urge to smoke.

Quitting smoking is difficult, but 46 million Americans have successfully quit and therefore reduced their risk of lung cancer. For more information about lung cancer research and treatment, contact City of Hope Cancer Center at 1-800-826-HOPE or visit www.cityofhope.org.

Eating Healthier - Not Fad Diets -- To Lose Weight

(NAPS) – Losing weight is one of Americans' most often made – and least often kept – resolutions. And with nearly one in four Americans dieting for health reasons, we need to know a healthier way to eat.

"The best way to improve your diet for the long haul is to make small, specific changes," says Rebecca Mullis, R.D., Ph.D., head of the University of Georgia's Food and Nutrition Department.

"Fad diets are simply quick fixes and some can actually hurt you in the long run."

Here are some tips to sticking to your nutrition resolution.

• Fill your shopping cart with plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables, which are naturally low in saturated fat and cholesterol. Only 27 percent of people say they regularly eat five or more servings of fruits or vegetables a day.

- Choose whole grain products including oatmeal, rice and whole grain breads.
- Select extra-lean protein sources such as skinless poultry, fish, legumes and lean meat.
- Substitute low-fat, low-cholesterol snacks for traditional high-fat, empty-calorie snacks. Try baked tortilla chips and salsa or fruit and low-fat yogurt dip.
- "Keep your eyes on serving size," says Dr. Mullis, who recommends reading a product's nutrition facts list on its label for the suggested portion. A good size guideline for sources of protein is a deck of playing cards.

• Get active. The only way to lose weight is by making sure then number of calories in what you eat is less than the number you burn each day. Being physically active for 30 minutes each day can help you use more calories, lose weight and build long-term heart health. According to a National Family Opinion survey, 74 percent of Americans don't do at least 30 minutes of physical activity four days a week.

The American Heart Association suggests eating a wide variety of foods that are low in saturated fat and cholesterol to help reduce the risk of heart disease and stroke, the number one and three killers in this country. You can find these foods using the Association's red heart with the white check mark. It can help you quickly and reliably find heart-healthy foods low in saturated fat and cholesterol.

If you have a medical condition, contact your doctor or registered dietitian about your diet. To learn more about reducing the risk of heart disease and stroke through good nutrition, visit the American Heart Association Web site (www.americanheart.org) or call 1-800-AHA-USA1 for your free copy of the "Shop Smart with Heart" brochure.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

ROOT CANAL TREATMENT

Decay or trauma that enable bacteria to enter a tooth's dentin and pulp can lead to infection in the tooth root. To stop the subsequent toothache, an antibiotic may be prescribed and the tooth's pulp removed. This requires injections of local anesthetic, after which an opening is created in the tooth's crown and into the pulp chamber. After the pulp is removed, the chamber is cleaned and enlarged and a temporary filling is set into the tooth's crown. On the next visit, the temporary filling is removed and the root canals are filled with special rubber-like material and permanently sealed. A temporary filling is again set in place, later to be removed when a crown is placed on the restored tooth.

Don't wait until these procedures are necessary. We welcome you to an unparalleled level of service in your search for dental health. We hope you will come to share our philosophy that regular dental care is a wise and sound investment in your total health. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. While an infected tooth can be very painful, the vast majority of tooth canal procedures are very nearly painless and a relief to those with abscesses.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your Arian penchant for impatience shows, as you consider passing a problem-prone project on to someone else. Best advice: Stay with it and work out those snarls yourself.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Even patient Bovines can be frustrated when carefully made plans go awry. But crank up that "stick-to-it-iv-ty" you do so well, and you'll soon find that your schedule is back in sync.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your aspect favors using more resourceful means in dealing with a workplace situation. Some discreet checking around could help shed light on the root cause of the problem.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You show an unusually strong streak of stubbornness in rejecting suggestions from friends and/or family members early in the week. But you become more receptive by the week's end.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat might find a gentler approach more effective when dealing with those who resist needed changes. Remember, the word "persuasion" starts with the sound "purr."

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A disappointing experience with someone you felt you could trust can be painful. But there just might be more to this situation than you're aware of. Press for an explanation.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Changing your views about something you believe in isn't easy. But you might reconsider as the facts come in. Keep your mind open, even if you're uneasy about what you might learn.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might have to do some serious shifting of gears to get your project back on track. But cheer up. Your hard work starts to produce some positive results by the week's end.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) An unsettling mood at the start of the week soon lifts and gives way to a more positive attitude as you find fun and friendship beginning to dominate your aspect.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A delay in firming up holiday plans could work to your advantage. Use this time to scout out possibilities that might be more in line with what those close to you would prefer.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Some people might question some of the new friends you've welcomed into your life. But your ability to see beyond the obvious helps you recognize how special they are.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Financial matters can be especially tricky this week. It's best to follow a conservative investment path for now, and wait for a more fortuitous time to take a bolder approach.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your warmth, your humor and your genuine concern for others make you someone people love to keep close to their lives.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR DRINKING WATER
Tests Showed Coliform Bacteria in Quincy Water Supply System

The Quincy water system recently violated a drinking water standard that we want to bring to your attention. Although this incident was not an emergency, as our customers you have the right to know what happened and what we did to correct the situation.

Quincy Water Department routinely monitors for the presence of drinking water contaminants. During the month of November, 149 samples were collected at 23 sample locations to check for total coliform, an indicator bacteria. Fourteen of these 149 samples showed the presence of total coliform bacteria, exceeding the Environmental Protection Agency's limit of 5%.

What Should I Do?

You do not need to boil your water or take any other corrective actions. However, if you have specific health concerns, consult your doctor.

People with severely compromised immune systems, infants, and some elderly may be at increased risk. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. General guidelines on ways to lessen the risk of infection by microbes are available from EPA's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1 (800) 426-4791.

What Does This Mean?

This is not an emergency. If it had been, you would have been notified immediately. Total coliform bacteria are not generally harmful themselves. Coliforms are bacteria which are naturally present in the environment and are used as an indicator that other, potentially-harmful, bacteria, may be present. Coliforms were found in more samples than allowed and this was a warning of potential problems.

Usually, coliforms are a sign that there could be a problem with the system's treatment or distribution system (pipes). Whenever we detect coliform bacteria in any sample, we do follow-up testing to see if other bacteria of greater concern, such as fecal coliform or E. coli, are present. We did not find any of these bacteria in our subsequent testing, and further testing shows that this problem has been resolved.

What Happened? What was Done?

Samples are routinely taken at 23 sites in Quincy. On November 4th and 5th, the routine samples taken at 13 sites were positive for total coliform and an additional 9 sites showed high levels of bacterial growth. An aggressive re-sampling plan was then conducted to determine if any other problems existed in the system. The 13 coliform positive locations were re-sampled on November 6th, including up and downstream locations, and the other 9 sites were re-sampled at the original locations for a total of 55 sites sampled.

Twenty-Seven locations, including up and downstream sites, were additionally resampled on November 7th. All samples were tested for total coliform and E. coli. All re-samples were negative for E. coli, with one site positive for total coliform. Repeat samples at this site (including up and downstream locations) had no positive results.

Following confirmatory testing, Quincy ended up with 14 samples that were confirmed total coliform positive. Other than the 14 total coliform positives, no other samples taken for the month were positive. All other tests this year have also been negative. These results indicate the possibility of accidental sample contamination as an explanation for this incident.

Identifies Housing Solutions

Quincy-Weymouth Board Addressing Homeless Problem

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

A little-known collaborative effort between the cities of Quincy and Weymouth has been utilizing millions of dollars in federal grants to end homelessness in the community.

The Quincy & Weymouth Local Homeless Board meets at New City Hall on the fourth Tuesday of every month to identify, develop and implement ways to end homelessness in the community. The board is a coalition of state and local non-profit organizations, businesses and faith-based groups. "It takes collaboration, the business community, the faith community and local government, to address the homeless problem," said John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place, one of the groups on the board.

Yazwinski stresses that the federal grants from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) are not used for emergency shelters; instead, funds are utilized for permanent housing services for the homeless. According to Yazwinski, the key to the board's success has been its ability to share information and collaborate on specific trends regarding homelessness.

"We identify who is falling through the cracks and come up with solutions involving permanent housing," said Yazwinski. "Father Bill's is a safety net for the community, but we don't believe sheltering people is a permanent answer."

Solutions usually involve the acquisition of property, leasing services, rental vouchers and transitional services to get the homeless population off the streets, he said.

Since its inception, the board has rung up numerous successes, he said. Seven federal grants have been secured for the Shelter Plus Care program to find permanent housing for 144 individuals with disabilities. Since 2001, an additional 14 families are living in permanent housing through grants, Yazwinski said.

The Mayor's Commission on the Family has assisted 50 families with transitional housing and life skills training, he said. All of the families that graduated from this program and moved into permanent housing have remained in permanent housing, Yazwinski said.

DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) has maintained seven units of transitional housing and safe havens for approximately 52 individuals and 95 children.

Yazwinski said each year the board identifies trends and "gaps" in coverage for the homeless. The board drafts solutions based on the trends. All solutions must be connected to housing services in some way since the federal grants must be utilized for that purpose only, he said.

Yazwinski said an alarming trend in the homeless community involves a rise in the number of women coming to the shelter. Currently, approximately 30 homeless women are staying in the basement of St. John's Church on a nightly basis, he said.

"Why can't we create 30 housing units so no one has to stay in the basement of a church?" he asked rhetorically. "Prevention and housing are the keys to ending homelessness."

Another troubling development involves the rising number of young adults, ages 18 to 24, seeking help from non-profits like Father Bill's, he said.

"Many of these people are aging out of foster care and there is nowhere for these people to go," Yazwinski said. Last year, 184 Quincy Public School students received assistance from non-profits, he said. Those services include transportation, mentoring and tutoring programs and providing school supplies, he said.

The local homeless board was originally established in 1994 to review issues surrounding potential reuse of abandoned military property for homeless housing. A year later the board was reconvened to develop Continuum of Care (CoC) Homeless Assistance Programs for the homeless population.

In 1996 the city's Department of Planning and Community Development successfully applied for its first CoC (McKinney grant) application. Since 1996, the board has received millions of dollars in grant money. Last year, the board received $1.4 million in funding for CoC homeless assistance programs.

Members of the board include: Atlantic House, Bank of Canton, Domestic Violence Ended (DOVE), Friends of the Homeless, Massachusetts Department of Mental Health, Quincy Crisis Center, the Mayor's Commission on the Family, Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, Quincy Community Action Programs, Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development, Quincy Interfaith Housing Coalition, Quincy Housing Authority, Quincy Public Schools, Quincy Veterans Services, Rockland Trust Bank, Wollaston Lutheran Church, Weymouth Department of Planning and Community Development and Work Inc.

Yazwinski said a tough economy, the closing of state hospitals, and a lack of affordable housing has exacerbated the homeless problem. He said 30 percent of all people who come to Father Bill's Place have full-time employment. But they cannot afford housing costs in the area.

"I walk into local eating establishments or public buildings and see people working there who come to Father Bill's to sleep," he said. "We cannot address the problem of homelessness until we solve the issue of affordable housing."

BOATERS CROWDED THE city council meeting Monday night to oppose proposed mooring fees. They carried placards that read: "Sports And Recreation Are For Relaxation Not Taxation. Boaters Are Voters." The city council agreed, sinking the proposal by an 8 to 1 vote.

On 8-1 Vote

Council Sinks Mooring Fees

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The city council, under intense scrutiny by boaters, torpedoed a plan to establish mooring fees for those who dock their boats in Quincy waters.

At Monday night's meeting, the council voted 8-1 against the Phelan administration's proposal establishing a fee for those who moor, dock or berth their boats in the city.

Nearly 100 boaters, many of them holding signs that read, "Boaters Are Voters," packed the council chambers to hear the debate.

Council President Dan Raymondi criticized the plan, saying boaters are not receiving adequate services to institute a fee.

"This is unwarranted, unfair, and in my opinion, unconstitutional," he told the council. "This is not a fee, it's a tax."

Sen. Michael Morrissey, former Ward 1 Councillor Mike Cheney and Ward 1 Councillor-elect Leo Kelly also attended the meeting to register their opposition.

"This is additional taxation without representation," Cheney said. "The maritime industry in Quincy has been overlooked for many years. We pay our excise taxes but we don't want to pay any more fees. So please, take this back to the drawing board."

Thomas Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, made the case for the administration, saying the mooring fees are "legal" and "appropriate."

Largey said it was unfair to residents who don't use boating services to pay taxes supporting them. He said the city could have used funds derived from the fee to help pay for maritime-related activities, such as dredging and the cost of running the police's marine unit.

"Every other municipality on the coastline has instituted a mooring fee," Largey told the council. "We spend a lot more on maritime services than we take in."

Councillor John Keenan cast the lone vote in favor of the mayor's plan.

Most councillors urged Phelan to reconvene a maritime commission formed to address such issues as mooring fees and other boater concerns. The commission, created under former Mayor James Sheets, has not met in two years.

Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley praised the mayor for bringing the issue to light.

"The mayor should be applauded for bringing this issue forward," Hanley said while urging Phelan to reconvene the commission. "This is an issue that should not be let go."

Under the administration's proposal, Quincy residents would have had to pay $2 per foot to moor, dock or berth their vessels in the city. Non-residents would pay $4 per foot. Human-powered boats under 17 feet would be exempt.

City officials said approximately $150,000 in revenue could be derived from a mooring fee.

Initially, Hanley and Councillor Frank McCauley wanted to place the issue on file, but Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro pressed for a vote. McCauley said placing the issue on file was the equivalent of killing it, but most councillors agreed to vote on the issue.

Council Votes 8-1 For 175% Classification

Tax Bills Still Going Up By 18 Percent

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The city council Monday night increased the city's tax classification for Fiscal 2004 to 175 percent, but residential homeowners are still going to get hit with an 18 percent increase in property taxes.

Maintaining that homeowners need tax relief, the council deviated from last year's 169 percent, forcing business owners to bear as much of the tax burden as allowed by law.

Under 175 percent, the average single-family homeowner will receive a tax bill of $3,639 in fiscal 2004, or a $555 increase over 2003. The shift to 175 percent reduces the average single-family homeowner's bill by $55 compared to 169 percent. On average, homeowners will see their bills increase by 18 percent.

The council voted 8-1 in favor of the 175 percent after two other measures were defeated, including a proposal by Council President Dan Raymondi that sought to increase the tax classification to 194 percent.

"If there ever was a year to provide tax relief for property owners, this is the year," said Raymondi.

Under 175 percent, the new tax rate for residential homeowners will be $12.56 per $1,000 of assessed value on a home. The new Commercial, Industrial and Personal Property (CIPP) rate will be $26.23.

According to Marion Fantucchio, chairwoman of the board of assessors, the average single-family home is now assessed at $289,700.

But No Cause For Alarm, Says Health Commissioner

City's Supply Of Flu Vaccine Depleted

The Quincy Health Department has run out of flu vaccine for the season but residents should not be alarmed, according to Commissioner Drew Scheele.

The city has used up its entire supply of 2,400 doses of flu vaccine after holding flu shot clinics in October and November, he said. Traditionally, the city has enough doses left over to administer flu shots until January, he said.

But this year, budget cuts and increased concern over a tough flu season have led to a depletion of the city's flu vaccine, he said.

Scheele said the health department receives phone calls everyday from residents seeking a flu shot. But the residents are being turned away because the city's supply is used up, he said.

Instead, residents should contact their personal physicians and follow proper guidelines for avoiding the flu, he said.

State budget cuts have drastically trimmed the number of flu vaccines distrib-

300-Space Garage Planned

QMC Promises To Address Concerns On Parking Proposal

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR
Quincy Medical Center officials are vowing to address residents' concerns regarding the hospital's plan to build a three-story, 300-car parking garage on its premises.

The hospital wants to increase its parking capacity by building a three-level garage on a wooded parcel on the northeast corner of its parking lot.

QMC officials heard residents' concerns regarding the proposal last week during a neighborhood meeting organized by Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro.

About 30 residents showed up to register their opposition to the preliminary plan. Some residents complained that the structure would exacerbate flooding problems. Others said the parking garage would be an eyesore in the neighborhood.

Presently, patients and staff searching for a parking space in the main lot compare the experience to snaring a spot at the mall during Christmas time.

"Something has to be done up there," said Councillor

CHRISTINE SCHUSTER

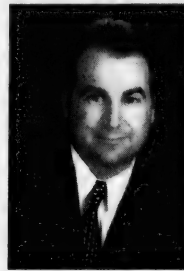

Frank McCauley. "But you want to do something that is compatible with the concerns of the neighborhood."

QMC President and CEO Christine Schuster said the hospital would address residents' complaints.

"Quincy Medical Center strives to be a good neighbor and we have always been attentive to our neighbors," said Schuster. "We want to build a parking structure that is aesthetically pleasing yet will allow us to grow."

Schuster said the need for a new parking garage is directly attributable to QMC's continued growth as a business.

"It's great news for the

city that it has a hospital that is growing," she said.

During the past two or three years, a number of organizations with health-based services have joined the hospital, including a VA clinic, a pain clinic and an arm of the Manet Community Health Center. Increases in the number of outpatient and inpatient visits have also contributed to parking woes, she said.

Schuster also said she does not want vehicles from patients and staff spilling over into neighboring streets, such as Whitwell St.

Edward Browne, vice president of general services for QMC, said the hospital will make every effort to address those concerns as a final plan is drafted during the coming months.

Currently, the hospital has approximately 550 parking spaces on-site and leases an additional 60 spaces near Star Market. People who park there are shuttled to the hospital in vans.

A storm water retention system would be built near the garage and would capture water flowing downhill from the hospital. Browne said the proposal would not only address any flooding issues associated with the garage but also would alleviate current flooding problems in the Glendale Rd. area.

Browne said he was told by the engineering firm hired to study and devise a plan, Cubellis Saivetz Associates in Braintree, that the city's storm water pipes in the Glendale Rd. area are undersized. The system being developed would do away with approximately 95 percent of storm water from a 100-year storm, he said.

The preliminary plans for a garage in the wooded area would be 24 feet tall and be 120-by-250 feet. Two floors of elevated parking would be built above a ground floor. Browne said trees, shrubs and other items would be planted to improve the aesthetics and hide as much of the facility as possible.

Because the land is zoned for planned unit development, any proposal must gain a positive recommendation by the planning board and approval by a two-thirds majority of the city council. The planning board also can recommend changes to the plan with conditions.

Browne said approximately three quarters of the lot is zoned as planned unit development and the other portion is zoned for open space. Since the entire portion of the planned unit development lot would not be utilized for the garage, the hospital is considering increasing the amount of land that is zoned for open space, he said. "We could possibly double the amount of open space," he said.

Gutro is setting up a residents' advisory committee to help ensure neighborhood input on the plan. The committee's first meeting should take place soon, he said.

Another neighborhood meeting with QMC officials is tentatively scheduled for February, 2004, he said.

Browne said last week's meeting should have dispelled the notion that the hospital was considering using Colonial Drive as an access point for the new garage.

"That is simply not the case," he said. "That was never a consideration. Any-one parking in the garage

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN and volunteers carry some of the food collected in Saturday's city-wide drive to the Seaside Pantry on Bicknell Street in Germantown.

City-Wide Drive Collects Six Tons Of Food For Needy

The city-wide food drive sponsored by Mayor William Phelan and the United States Post Office last Saturday collected more than six tons of food to help the hungry in Quincy.

Postal workers picked up non-perishable food items from the doorsteps of Quincy residents. The food was taken to the Department of Public Works and then distributed to all of Quincy's food pantries.

"The support that we received from the residents of Quincy is overwhelming," Phelan said. "I want to thank all the volunteers that contributed to the success of this food drive. I would especially like to thank the men and women of the United States Post Office that made our success possible."

More than 70 volunteers spend Saturday collecting food from the city's post offices, sorting food items and distributing the food to local food pantries.

"Over the coming weeks, I will be meeting with the directors of Quincy's food pantries in an effort to devise long-term plans to address the issue of hunger," Phelan added. "Saturday's drive was a great way to temporarily alleviate some of the problems that face Quincy's food pantries, but there is more we can do."

The food drive was in response to a recent Project Bread study that highlighted hunger levels in Quincy. Letter carrier Chris Baker and Manager Tammy Quinlan initiated the idea with Phelan's office shortly after the study was released.

Those that need food assistance, or know someone that does, can contact Phelan's office at 617-376-1990 or call any one of Quincy's food pantries.

VOLUNTEERS WHO COLLECTED six tons of food in Saturday's city-wide drive are shown with some of the food in the basement of the Public Works building on Sea Street which served as the clearinghouse. It was sorted there and then distributed to Quincy's food pantries.

Tobin, Hannon, LaRaia -- Together!

The woman looked like she couldn't believe her eyes when she saw who the three men were manning the Salvation Army kettle in front of City Hall. "You three are together?" she asked somewhat incredulously. "That's really something!"

The three were former Mayors Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia and Arthur Tobin.

They were among the nearly 50 community leaders volunteering to ring the bell over a three-day period to help the Salvation Army help the needy this holiday season.

And, as the lady said, it was really something seeing the three together.

She obviously was thinking back to a roaring political time in the mid-1970s when the three were involved in two of the city's most heated mayoral elections that left hard feelings lingering for years.

LaRaia ran against both Hannon and Tobin and also their friend and political ally, James McIntyre.

Hannon was elected mayor in 1971, succeeding James McIntyre, who served three terms but gave up the mayor's office to become counsel to the Massachusetts senate.

Hannon defeated Joseph Brett that year and was re-elected in 1973, turning back Grace Saphir, one of only four women ever to run for mayor in Quincy.

Then came 1975 and LaRaia stepped in to challenge Hannon. He had run unsuccessfully for mayor against McIntyre in 1965 when incumbent Amelio Della Chiesa decided to call it a career after 12 years as mayor — four Plan E and eight Plan A.

The William Phelan-James Sheets mayoral election in 2001 is now in the books as the city's closest ever with Phelan winning by 17 votes.

But the Hannon-LaRaia election was one to remember, too.

Hannon went home election night the winner by 134 votes. But LaRaia filed for a recount amid accusations of "stolen votes."

The recount showed LaRaia the actual winner by 438 votes. A court inquest found mistakes had been made in the counting of the paper ballots by hand but found no wrong-doing.

Two years later, Tobin ousted LaRaia from the mayor's office in a campaign slugfest that re-fueled the strong feelings.

And that was why that woman was surprised to see the three together at the Salvation Army kettle.

But that icy political relationship of the 1970s has actually been thawing in recent years. The three have patched things up as was quite evident during their stint at the Salvation Army kettle.

The three seemed to enjoy being together, kidding and joking in between the bell ringing outside City Hall where each had once reigned.

OLD POLITICAL RIVALRIES were forgotten as former Mayors Arthur Tobin, Walter Hannon and Joseph LaRaia got together to man the Salvation Army's Community Leaders Kettle last week in front of City Hall.

They looked more like The Three Musketeers on a worthy mission than old political rivals.

A nice scene, especially at this time of year.

□

ALL SIX OF Quincy's living mayors took a shift at the Salvation Army kettle: Mayor Phelan and former Mayors Frank McCauley and James Sheets in addition to Tobin, Hannon and LaRaia.

Mayors have had their political differences and feuds which once prompted McCauley to muse:

"There was a time if you put LaRaia, Tobin, Hannon and McCauley together in the same room, you'd have to call the state police."

But there was no sign of any differences at the kettle. All six mayors were in full agreement on this issue: helping the needy.

□

YOU MIGHT SAY that Jay Asher was in the right place at the right time.

ASHER

Jay, president of WJDA, is also chairman of the Quincy Salvation Army Advisory Board.

Last Thursday, the Fox 25 morning news team — Jodi Applegate, Gene Levanchy and Doug Goudie — took a shift at the community leaders kettle.

And Jay decided to see how things were going.

As he was approaching, Jodi was deciding to pick someone at random to help create a little action at the kettle.

And Jay was random lucky.

She reached out to him and serenaded him with "Silver Bells" while he stood there with a big smile all the way through it.

It worked. Jay came up with a sizable donation.

"She's even prettier in person than she is on TV," he said later — still wearing the smile.

The vote was unanimous.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1915 POSTCARD showing the old water standpipe next to the Abigail Adams cairn on the top of Penn's Hill in South Quincy. A climb up the spiral staircase to the observation platform at the top of this tower provided spectacular views of the entire Boston area. Built in the late 1800s by the privately owned Quincy Water Company, this 60-foot tank held over 400,000 gallons of water. The water came from the old Quincy reservoir, also known as Braintree Dam, through the company's pumping station on Penn Street. By 1900 the water company was taken over by the city and became its water department. The city then began buying its water from the newly formed Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Shipyard To Launch 37th Warship Of Year

The Fore River Shipyard was preparing to launch its 37th warship of 1944, the cruiser Providence, with 28 Quincy school children attending as special guests for their work in the sixth War Loan Drive.

The youngsters represented 24 public schools, three parochial schools and the Woodward School for Girls; the students of which sold $108,546 worth of war bonds and stamps during a three-day campaign.

They not only attended the launching but they were driven to the Yard from City Hall in a new-fangled vehicle called a "jeep" and were guests of Mayor Charles A. Ross at a buffet luncheon in Quincy USO headquarters.

Meanwhile, workers at the Fore River Shipyard, rushing to complete work on the cruiser Columbus, set what was believed to be a world record by lifting into place the vessel's 300-ton deckhouse.

ALL-STAR JUNIORS

The North Quincy Junior High School football team placed four members of its powerful squad on the Junior High League's all-star team. Selected to spots on the club were:

POLLUTION FIGHT URGED

Quincy Health Commissioner Dr. Richard M. Ash warned that a program to rid Boston Harbor of pollution should get underway right away instead of waiting until the end of the war.

"This job is a must for 1945 at the latest," he said. "To defer action until a later date is to gamble with the health of our own people and those of other communities on these waters."

Opposes Faxon Field As Site For New QHS

The city of Quincy needs a new high school; there is no question about it. The real question is where to put it.

Placing the school on a wetland will not only damage an environmental aspect of Quincy but create major flooding problems. Storage of runoff water by wetlands eventually reduces the frequency of flooding in downstream areas.

Concerns about additional traffic on Sea Street can be alleviated by putting the school on the DPW site behind the police station, leaving Broad Street open for high school traffic. Why not put it on land that is ready to be cleaned up and maximized by our city?

As a citizen of Quincy and a resident of the Faxon Field area on which construction is intended, I have cherished that area all of my life. I grew up there; it is a part of me and of so many other people. Destroying the wetlands would destroy a history and background that can not be replaced

Keep The Middle Class, Working Families Here

News that tax bills to homeowners will probably go up 20 percent is bad news both for homeowners and renters. Quincy has always been a community for middle class and working families but the growing tax burden is way out of whack.

Alan Cousin from the Quincy Taxpayers Association is right when he says the increased tax burden is unsustainable. Some year Quincy homeowners may find their property tax bills around $10,000.

City Councillor Dan Raymondi is also correct. We have to find ways to keep the middle class and working families here. Tax bills that continue to skyrocket will send those families packing for elsewhere.

Everyone is touting all the new luxury residences rising in Quincy Center as if they are a godsend. They're not. Luxury housing means higher tax bills in every neighborhood. The city has an apparent fatal attraction for the urban gentry. Getting upscale seems in but upscale can also mean out for many folks unable to keep paying more and more in taxes.

Something has to be done and done quickly. Recently a task force on homelessness was formed. Perhaps that task force could tackle this problem, too, before the rest of us become homeless.

About Those Shopping Carts...

Once again, The Quincy Sun's pages are graced with the minor issue that never dies: shopping carts on the city's sidewalks. I'm left wondering why it is that the entire focus of the city councillors who find this issue so important (quite aside from the many problems confronting Quincy that some might think more pressing) is on lecturing the supermarkets to keep carts on their property.

Has no one given any thought to why those carts stray from the markets? Perhaps getting the MBTA to divert bus routes so that the many Quincy residents without cars could more easily haul groceries would be a more productive use of the council's time. Several supermarkets have no bus service at all and three others have sporadic service at best.

Just as an example, diverting Germantown and Houghs Neck buses down McGrath Highway — does Coddington Street really need full-time bus service, day and night, except when Quincy High is mustering and letting out? — would put Roxie's and the Southern Artery Stop and Shop directly on the bus network.

Or, alternatively, instead of telling the supermarket owners to hire guards to watch the perimeters, the council could suggest they buy a shuttle van or have taxis on call to take carless shoppers to the nearest bus stop or train station. Blustering about unsightly carts littering Quincy is all very well and good, but like other problems affecting our city, taking simple action to address the cause beats punishing the merchants any day.

Jimmy's Super Sweet Potatoes

The last thing I wanted to do the day before Thanksgiving was to get a new muffler for my car. But so when it seems that all of a sudden that dreaded sound is heard when you step on the gas.

As I was waiting to pay the bill, our mechanic Jimmy asked what I was cooking for the holiday. And then he began to tell me about a great recipe he had for sweet potatoes, one of my favorites. He said he got the recipe from his friend Phil. I began to question the amounts of each of the ingredients amidst the noise of the machines running at the garage.

So here it is and I hope Jimmy approves.

Jimmy's Super Sweet Potatoes

5 sweet potatoes
1/2 stick butter
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice orange juice (added accordingly to taste and the smoothness of the potatoes).

Boil and peel the potatoes. Mash and add all the ingredients. Place in a casserole dish, and keep in a warming oven until ready to serve. Or it can be microwaved.

Tax Bill Check-Off Box Means Printer, Books For Schools

By COURTNEY PAQUETTE

Every public school in Quincy will have a network printer and $500 worth of new library books, thanks to those folks who checked off a box on their property tax bills pledging a donation to the Quincy Educational Fund.

"None of this would be possible without the help of our taxpayers and the many who donated," said committee member Jo Ann Bragg, who initiated the fund last year.

The fund raised $18,000 for the Quincy Public Schools, relying primarily on donations from residents who agreed to contribute by checking the box on their quarterly tax bills.

The Educational Fund Committee decided to use the money for printers and books after assessing the needs of each school with the principal. Each book will have a notation that it was donated by the Quincy Educational Fund.

City Councillor Kevin Coughlin, a member of the committee, said it is "reassuring to see that so many folks have contributed to this fund," especially given the fiscal state of the city.

Badly needed student furniture will not be paid for out of the fund but, said Bragg, School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro is "working with the budget to be able to fill the gap."

Bragg said the committee will monitor the money and let it sit for a year at a time "so that we can buy something substantial."

Other members of the committee include: Patrick Kearns, Rosann Russell, Susan Malloy and Dr. DeCristofaro.

The School Committee also honored Christine Cedrone with the Distinguished Educator Award for her service during eight years on the committee. She was attending her last meeting before leaving to practice law.

JO-ANN BRAGG

"Christine's fire has burned brightly enough to light the way for us all," said Mayor William Phelan, who chair the School Committee. Cedrone said she was leaving "with mixed emotions. I'll miss everyone. I'll miss the kids. But I'm sure I'll be active in my own way."

Committee members also responded to a recent ad taken out in The Quincy Sun by 19 individuals, alleging that the School Committee and Mayor Phelan, was, in effect, trying to shut it down.

"It's important to point out that the college has $10.8 million in reserves and to pay the very reasonable market rent, an increase of $200,000 or so last year, in no way, and absolutely no rational argument can be made that would have any bearing on closing Quincy College down," said Mayor Phelan.

"And to take out an ad in the paper that in asking for rent we are attempting to close the college down borders on ludicrous."

Committee member Ron Mariano agreed, saying, "As a committee we're trying to fill a hole in the budget. It is time for the rhetoric to tone down a bit and get down to some serious negotiations."

Cedrone also agreed. "All this is doing is hurting the college," she said. "It's a shame what's happened because it's such a basic issue.

Someone is in a building that owes money. It is not a political decision but a fiscally responsible method."

The controversy started last year when the School Committee raised the rent on the college buildings by $200,000 to $450,000. The college refused, sued the city and lost. The rent has still not been paid.

Courtney Ward Receives Eagle Of The Cross Award

Courtney Ward of St. Mary's Parish, Quincy, recently received the Eagle of the Cross Award at an awards ceremony sponsored by the Office of Youth Ministry for the Archdiocese of Boston at Lombardo's in Randolph.

The nationally recognized award is presented to extraordinary youth who selflessly serve their peers and youth ministry community with unwavering commitment and dedication at the parish level.

At St. Mary's, Ward has served in the religious education program, youth ensemble, and as a leader on parish confirmation retreats. She has represented St. Mary's at World Youth Day events in Rome and Toronto. She continues to serve as a Eucharistic minister while attending Wheelock College.

She is the daughter of Greg and Nancy Ward of Quincy.

Kim Kett-Johnson:

A Corporate Woman Finds Her Niche At Embellish Salon

By SHEILA HALLORAN

A couple years ago, Kim Kett-Johnson never imagined owning her own salon and spa. Today, she can't imagine not owning one.

For almost a year now, the ex-corporate woman turned spa owner has owned and managed Embellish Hair Salon and Day Spa. Unlike most spa owners, Kett-Johnson's background does not include beauty school or esthetics training. Instead, she went from graduating with a degree in speech therapy from the University of New Hampshire to selling computers for Sayers, a technology integration company in Canton.

While at Sayers, Kett-Johnson's biggest client was State Street Corporation in Quincy. Sayers had arranged for 20 women from State Street to indulge in spa services at Embellish as part of a customer appreciation day. Kett-Johnson accompanied the women and soon became an Embellish client herself.

After becoming absorbed by the unhurried and casual environment at Embellish, Kett-Johnson decided it was time for a career change. "I really loved how I felt when I left [Embellish] and I wanted to be a part of making people feel good," said Kett-Johnson.

Kett-Johnson did not intend to but just any salon in the industry. When she left Sayers, the determined Kett-Johnson had a specific goal in mind. "It wasn't to be in the salon industry. It was to buy Embellish," said Kett-Johnson. "I got to know the staff. They were very professional and I had a good feeling about Embellish."

Although the Plainville

resident is new to Embellish, the salon and spa has actually been in Quincy for many years. Embellish opened in Quincy in 1987 and has been at its current location for the past 11 years. The excellence that Embellish offers is no secret. Since its opening, Embellish has received numerous acclamations, both locally and nationally, including "Best Day Spa on the South Shore" and "Top 100 Salons" in the country.

For the most part, Kett-Johnson has enjoyed the transition from corporate world to spa retreat. "It's been a challenging ramp learning about the spa industry," said Kett-Johnson. "My favorite part is meeting and interacting with clients."

Kett-Johnson admits that buying Embellish was a "big risk," especially after 15 years in sales, but she says her reception has been extremely positive. "The Quincy Center community has been so supportive and great," said Kett-Johnson. "Everyone is so positive."

Embellish offers a full line of hair, nail, skin care and massage services as well as day packages, which combines several services in one visit. The day packages make great gifts and range from the "Quick Spa Getaway" and "Afternoon Retreat" to the "Classic Makeover" and the "Day of Rejuvenation."

Kett-Johnson said her favorite day package is the "Day of Rejuvenation" because "it touches on everything." The "Day of Rejuvenation" includes a full body massage, European facial, classic manicure and pedicure, shampoo and finish, and lunch.

In addition to services offered, Embellish also carries an impressive line of skin and hair care products, including the high-quality brands GM Collins, Alterna and Trucco Makeup. Embellish's boutique also carried a large selection of attractive accessories.

Embellish's location and 3,100 square feet of space is ideal for corporate, holiday and bridal parties. According to Kett-Johnson, Embellish recently hosted a bridal party. "A few days before the wedding, the bridesmaids were able to relax and have services done with the bride," said Kett-Johnson. Embellish also offers bridal hair and make-up for the day of the wedding.

Although spas are commonly associated with women, Kett-Johnson said that Embellish renders services to several male clients, including NFL Hall-of-Fame running back Gale Sayers. Gale Sayers is the owner of Sayers, Kett-Johnson's previous employer. According to Kett-Johnson, Gale Sayers receives manicures and massages from Embellish when he is in town visiting from Chicago.

The variety of services and products available at Embellish ensures that they have something for everyone to enjoy. Embellish gift certificates make ideal gifts for everyone this holiday season. Gift certificates come in any denomination or can be purchased specifically for day packages. Gift certificates can be purchased online at embellish.com and mailed to the receiver, called in and picked up or purchased at Embellish.

Embellish is open Mondays 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Tuesday through Friday 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Saturdays 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays (during the holidays) 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Phone number is 617-471-6700.

Dessert Extravaganza Brings Holiday Cheer To Needy

Seven local bakeries and the U.S. Food Service joined with Allerton House at Hancock Park Assisted Living Community for the third Dessert Extravaganza to benefit local families during the holidays.

More than $300 was raised and donated to the Quincy Veterans Association to purchase food and gifts for families in need. Allerton

House at Hancock Park and the Quincy Veterans Association began the holiday partnership following the events of 9/11.

"We began this tradition for families whose loved ones were called to active duty in Iraq," says Kelly Richards, marketing director, Allerton House at Hancock Park.

More than 75 residents from Allerton House and Quincy sampled exquisite baked goods, ranging from pumpkin cheesecake to custom-designed gingerbread cookies. Bakeries taking part included: Ginger Betty's Bakery, Panera Bread, O'Brien's Bakery, all of Quincy; Dorothy Lou Pastry, Easton; Pastucini Gourmet, Weymouth; Greenhills Traditional Irish Bakery, Boston; Godiva Chocolatier, Braintree; and the U.S. Food Service.

Allerton House at Hancock Park is a 70-unit assisted living community owned and managed by Norwell-based Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group, specializing in senior and rehabilitative healthcare services on the South Shore for over 50 years.

"Christine Cedrone is a bright, hardworking individual with a tremendous capacity to accomplish her goals," Williams said. "I am honored to have Christine associated with my law firm and look forward to working with her for many years to come."

A life-long resident of Quincy, Cedrone is active in the community. She is the current vice chairwoman of CHRISTINE CEDRONE the Quincy School Committee and will finish her eighth year serving as a member of the School Committee this year.

City's Supply Of Flu Vaccine Depleted

uted to cities and towns, said Scheele. Last year, the city received 2,800 doses; in 2001 approximately 4,200 doses were distributed to Quincy.
Last month, Scheele purchased an additional 350 doses from a private supplier to accommodate residents at the city's last flu shot clinic at the Maritime Center in Houghs Neck. The funds came from the department's supply budget, he said.
Private suppliers have since run out of the vaccine due to the concern over a tough flu season, he said.

Clinics are usually held in October and November at such locations as O'Brien Towers, 1000 Southern Artery, Tobin Towers and the Maritime Center in Houghs Neck.

How To Avoid Transmitting Or Getting The Flu:

- Good hand hygiene: People should wash hands or use alcohol hand rubs or gels after being in public or after contact with anyone with a cold or flu.
- Cough etiquette: When coughing, one should turn the head and cough or sneeze into a disposable tissue and promptly dispose of the used tissue; or cough into the inside of the elbow if a tissue is not available.
- Avoid taking young children or immunocompromised people into large crowds (shopping malls, for example) unnecessarily when flu is in the community.
- Avoid close contact (holding, kissing) between infants and anyone who has a cold or the flu.
- Do not share things that go into the mouth such as drinking cups, straws, etc.
- If people are experiencing respiratory symptoms with a fever, they should refrain from public activities (stay home from work or school) for at least five days (maximum infectiousness lasts 3-5 days in adults and up to 7 days in children) to prevent spread of the infection.

What You Should Do If You Get The Flu:

- Rest.
- Drink plenty of liquids.
- Avoid alcohol and tobacco.
- Take medication to relieve the symptoms.
- If someone has severe or prolonged flu-like symptoms, they should seek medical attention.
- Don't give aspirin to children or teenagers with flu-like symptoms, and particularly fever, without first speaking to a doctor. Giving aspirin to children and teenagers with influenza can cause a rare but serious illness called Reye Syndrome. Take medicines without aspirin to relieve flu symptoms.

Morrissey Pushes For Amendment Helping Seniors Retain Their Homes

Sen. Michael Morrissey recently filed an amendment to a supplemental budget passed by the Senate that sought to repeal expanded estate recovery laws aimed at capturing the assets of seniors in nursing homes who are on Mass Health.

Although the House of Representatives did not adopt Morrissey's amendment, in a compromise the effective date of the current law was delayed until July 1, 2004 to allow further debate on this issue. Gov. Mitt Romney vetoed the provision in the budget.

"The Governor's veto allows the state to claim the home of surviving spouses of a deceased Mass Health recipient. It is unfortunate that once again our seniors who have worked hard to maintain their home may now have it taken from them if they or their spouse receive Mass Health benefits for nursing home care," said Morrissey.

The current law, commonly known as Section 329 of the fiscal 2004 budget, went into effect on July 1, 2003. Since that time, Morrissey and other legislators have worked to repeal this new law both through the supplemental budget amendments and by a separate piece of legislation, which has been introduced in the Senate and is currently awaiting introduction in the House.

"I feel that the expanded estate recovery law as currently written is devastating to seniors and will continue to work for its repeal or modification," said Morrissey.

"Seniors should continue to spend down their assets but have their home protected if they are going to receive Mass Health coverage. Seniors with assets should be expected to pay, however, the primary residence should be protected," he said.

Bottary Holding Food Drive Dec. 20

Jim Bottary, former candidate for Ward 1 city councillor, is holding a food drive this Saturday, Dec. 20, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the parking lot of the Adams Shore Library, Sea St.

Called the "605" food drive, the event will go to benefit the Seaside Food Pantry in Germantown. Bottary said the goal is to collect 605 non-perishable food items to support the organization. "605" represents the number of votes Bottary received in the primary election.

"It was such a positive experience running for the city council, and I still want to give back to the community," said Bottary. "This is a good way to do something productive for needy families."

Bottary said he is challenging his supporters to come out and support the pantry.

Barry Recognized For Outstanding College Marketing, Public Relations

Quincy College President Sean Barry was recently presented the Pacesetter Award by the National Council for Marketing and Public Relations (NCMPR) at its recent annual conference held at the Omni Parker House in Boston.

The awards dinner was attended by nearly 200 professionals from higher education institutions from all over the Northeast and the United Kingdom.

The Pacesetter of the Year Award recognizes a chief executive officer at a two-year community, junior or technical college or college district who has demonstrated special leadership, support and/or ability in the area of college communications and marketing. Special emphasis is placed on accomplishments within the past year.

Barry's nomination was selected from a distinguished group of college presidents from District 1, one of the most competitive regions including institutions from Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, New Brunswick, Newfoundland, land, Nova Scotia, Prince Edwards Island, Quebec and United Kingdom.

SEAN BARRY

NCMPR is the only organization of its kind that exclusively represents marketing and PR professionals at community, technical and junior colleges. As one of the fastest-growing affiliates of the American Association of Community Colleges, NCMPR today has more than 1,550 members from more than 600 colleges across the United States, Canada and Bahamas.

This past summer college administrators nominated Barry. The lengthy nomination included narratives on the recent progress of Quincy College under Barry's leadership. Quantified enrollment results and other success stories and innovative initiatives were included along with recommendations from the Board of Governors and a commendation from the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

In the nomination, Chairwoman of the Quincy College Board of Governors Theresa Lord-Piatelli and Board Member and City Council President Dan Raymondi said, "As board chair and immediate past board chair, we both believe President Barry surpasses our expectations for an institutional vision. He understands and fully explores the issues and concerns of students, and works to develop programs and services that demonstrate an affinity for those often-complex areas."

Barry will be recognized at the NCMPR national conference next March.

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The Impact Quincy Coalition, a program of Bay State Community Services, will receive approximately $1 million in federal and state grants over the next decade to tackle the issue of underage drinking in the city.

The organization unveiled the new last week at its main office located at 13 Temple St. in Quincy Center.

With the help of the Quincy schools, the police department and other community organizations, the funds will be used to combat underage drinking through behavioral change, controlling alcohol availability and peer advocacy. Efforts will be geared toward at-risk children, particularly middle school students.

Congressman William Delahunt, Mayor William Phelan, state Public Health Commissioner Christine Ferguson and School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro attended the event to lend their support.

Delahunt praised the work of the organization and said the grant monies will be put to good use.

"The emphasis on prevention is the place to start," he said. "This is where the battle is, and we've got to win it here."

A portion of the funds will go toward parent training and the hiring of peer advocates for the schools. In addition, the organization will conduct surveys of middle school students to determine courses of action.

The organization intends to disseminate accurate information about underage drinking and dispel common misperceptions about the problem.

Overall, the emphasis will be on prevention and positive reinforcement for kids.

Phelan said the issue of underage drinking affects many facets of society.

"The problem of alcohol and drug abuse has to be attacked in many ways," he said. "We are very fortunate to have Bay State Community Services and Impact Quincy in Quincy Center."

Impact Quincy Coalition secured two grants: a state grant from the Department of Public Health, Bureau of Substance Abuse, and a federal grant from the White House Office of National Drug Control Police, Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Program.

Beginning in fiscal 2004, the organization will receive state grants totaling $100,000 for each of the next five years with the opportunity of securing two additional two-year renewals.

In addition, Impact Quincy will receive federal grants totaling $100,000 for the next three years, and an additional $75,000 for the following two years.

Point Webster Students Tour Roche Brothers Supermarket

It was a feast of knowledge on several days recently when 75 fifth-grade students from the Point Webster Middle School visited Roche Brothers Supermarket on Falls Boulevard.

With the help of teacher chaperones and Roche Brothers employees, students learned about the inner workings of running a large store while engaging in hands-on math and social studies educational activities.

Paula Jenner, Roche Brothers employee and mother of one of the students, led the tours with the help of James Lundy, store manager, and George Sullivan, assistant store manager. Also chaperoning the field trips were Courtney Mitchell, Megan Sullivan and Guidance Counselor David Bogan.

Students learned how food is produced and distributed to customers. At the loading dock, the fifth graders were shown how food is labeled, scanned, and inventoried before being sold.

Roche Brothers employees also explained how food is shipped in crates and delivered to supermarkets across the entire country in airplanes, trains and tractor-trailers.

A few "oohs" and "aahhs" were overheard in the meat department as one of Roche Brothers' butchers demonstrated how hamburger meat is made and packaged.

After the tours, students were put to work at the checkout counter to practice their arithmetic skills. Each student was given $20 in play money and told to plan a delicious and nutritious meal for their family, selecting at least one food from each of the four food groups.

Students also enjoyed using the electronic scanners.

Point Webster Middle School Principal James McGuire said Roche Brothers has been a strong supporter of educational initiatives provided by the school. He said he hopes the school and business will engage in more school activities during the school year.

ENC A Cappella Fall Tour Embraces Music, Religion

By WANDA JACOBS

It was a rainy and cold New England morning but it failed to dampen the spirits of the students in Eastern Nazarene College's A Cappella as they departed on their annual Fall Tour.

The A Cappella, under the guidance of Dr. Timothy Shetler, is a group of musically gifted ENC students who have discovered ways in which their music and religion work together.

Their destination this year, by bus, was Purcellville, Va., where they practiced, ate a hearty meal prepared by the Loudon Valley Church of the Nazarene and met their host families.

The host families, a traditional part of A Cappella tours, provide members of the musical group with the bit of home that they don't have in college.

After a performance at the Nazarene church in Virginia, they hopped back on their bus for Maryland, where they met their second host families and sang at the St. Charles Church of the Nazarene.

Between travel and concerts, the A Cappella had an opportunity to visit Washington where they toured Arlington National Cemetery, the U. S. Holocaust Museum, the Washington Monument and other historic sites.

Due to preparation for the World War II Monument, the Reflecting Pool at the base of the Lincoln Memorial has been drained of water, giving the students a unique opportunity.

Normally, it would be illegal to walk in the Reflecting Pool but the students were allowed to gather in the basin to take pictures during the short time construction is going on.

The students were inspired by the beauty and stature of the White House and many had never been to the nation's capital, therefore the time to sightsee was greatly appreciated.

At the church in Gaithersburg, Md., the students dressed in "grubs," rolled up their sleeves and went to work at tasks given them by a church member.

They scrubbed walls, unloaded new office equipment, set up lunch, vacuum-cleaned, and helped the new pastor and his family to unload the moving van and move into the house across the street.

The A Cappella unpacked boxes and set up beds in order to allow the family to spend their first night in their new home.

The students sang their last two performances at the Church of the Nazarene in Lynchburg, Va., where they relaxed and stayed for both of the Sunday services.

Contributing to the group as soloists for choice songs were Alan Kratzsch, Melody Santor, Christy Fairbairn and Jason Parker.

Dolly Inman Feels At Home 850 Miles From Home

New Youth Ministry Coordinator At Salvation Army

By COURTNEY PAQUETTE
Moving 850 miles from home to take a job that did not exist before could have overwhelmed Dolly Inman by the challenges presented by a brand-new position at the Salvation Army.

Instead, she chooses to see her challenges as opportunities.

"I don't really see it as a challenge as much as I see it as a blessing," said the 26-year-old Inman.

She is the Salvation Army's new Youth Ministry Coordinator, administering a service adherents believe is essential to salvation at the Quincy Temple Corps, 6 Baxter St.

Inman traveled to Quincy from her hometown of Sidney, Ohio, arriving in October to a post that is so new to the Quincy corps that she must design its components from scratch.

While her job is new, Inman is hardly a neophyte in the field of youth ministry.

She graduated from U-

DOLLY INMAN in the chapel at the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, at 6 Baxter St.

hana University in Sidney in 2001 with a degree in Criminal Justice, focusing on Juvenile Probation and Corrections.

She used her studies as a drill sergeant at a maximum juvenile corrections facility, a program she describe as "the last resort" for juvenile offenders before they were placed in permanent detention. She recalls it as one of the hardest things she has done.

"Your heart goes out to these kids," she said, "just to see what they have been through."

Her job involved taking abuse herself. The youngsters often would yell at her and threaten to inflict physical harm. She was not dismayed by the experience but inspired.

Inman continued her work with children who had been in trouble with the law in the inner city of Detroit, where she developed programs to keep children off the streets after school and indoctrinate them with the message of salvation.

"My heart's always been for the kids," she said, "especially the at risk children. A lot of them are simply products of their society."

Inman didn't know her work with children would take her to Quincy, far from home and family, which consist of four sisters, one brother, four nieces and five nephews.

"I call them a lot," she says. "It's very hard, leaving what you're familiar with, what you're comfortable with. But the Lord calls us away from our families to do His work."

She was working at the Salvation Army's Camp Swoneky in Oregonia, Ohio, not far from her hometown, and had just completed Project 117, a school for lay people in Suffern, N.Y., when the camp's director, Capt. Philip Lloyd, told her about the new position in Quincy.

After several phone calls to Majors Douglas and Linda Jones, the pastors at the Quincy Salvation Army, she "got confirmation that (Quincy) was where I was supposed to be."

Linda Jones said the new position was a product of need in the church and the community — "we prayed about it and thought this was what God wanted at this time for this church."

Inman said its' her job to "plant the seed. The Lord will take over from there."

Already, after less than two months on the job, she has started a youth group for grades 7-12 that meets on Monday night and grows each time they meet.

"Monday night was a good surprise," she said as the group increased from five in week one to seven in week two. The youngsters are enthusiastic.

"The kids keep saying, 'Can I bring my friends?' As long as the kids know that our doors are always open to them and we continue to express Christ's love, we will continue to grow," she said. Inman says she feels that she has been successful so far in providing an environment to which the adolescents feels comfortable and will talk about the challenges they face at school and at home.

"I've found that in the two meetings we've had they've been very open and I think they feel very comfortable with me," she said. "That's a huge blessing. It helps me understand them better. They know they have someone they can come and talk to."

Her ability to listen, she said, helps a great deal because "teens like to talk."

Inman herself is less loquacious when it comes to describing herself. She often ends such queries with the words, "I'm not a person who likes to talk about myself."

She will, however, talk about sports. She personally earned scholarships for her soccer and softball skills that paid for most of her college education and finds what she calls "sports evangelism" effective in her ministry.

Playing games is a great way to get the kids in and minister to them through sports," she said.

The Salvation Army has a Wednesday after-school program in which children in grades 1-6 play games and sing songs that introduce them to the Army's teachings. The program is now under Inman's jurisdiction.

She also hopes to start a young adult group for college-aged students for Bible readings, discussions and just to enjoy each other's company.

"There are a lot of different things I would like to see happen," she said, "but for now it's just focusing on what we have and expanding on that."

Inman already has planned a few projects for youth. Members of the after-school program and youth group will stand at Salvation Army Christmas kettles on Dec. 19.

"I think it is important to establish, that, although they're young, mission is still an important part of being a Christian," she said.

Members of the youth group are expected to participate in the "30-Hour Famine," a nationwide project hosted by the Salvation Army Feb. 27-28 in which participants fast for 30 hours in order to raise awareness and funds for poverty-stricken countries.

"Kids get a better understanding of what it's like for kids in other countries," said Inman.

Linda Jones said Inman is "doing quite well" in her new role in a new city.

"She is adjusting very well and God is opening up various doors for her and bringing new people in," Jones said.

To which Inman added: "All in all I like it. I am grateful God has given me the opportunity to serve. I'll be here as long as He wants, but I don't see myself leaving anytime soon."

Tax Bills Still Going Up By 18 Percent

up from $226,800 last year. Third quarter tax bills will reflect the new rate and will be sent out by the end of the month, she said.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro proved to be the catalyst for changing the rate to 175 percent. Gutro, who supported 169 percent in the past, said residential property taxes have increased at such a rate as to warrant a shift.

"Unlike past years, the unprecedented disparity in residential and commercial real estate values has created a condition whereby some commercial properties would actually realize a reduction in taxes under the 169 percent classification," said Gutro. "I believe that this rare phenomenon merits a shift in classification to provide some needed to residential taxpayers."

Councillor Frank McCauley cast the lone vote against 175 percent, saying it would drive away business and cost residents more over the long term.

The city uses a tax classification formula that requires businesses to pay a rate that is a percentage of the tax rate that would have been paid if there had been no shift in classification. Currently, raising the classification to 175 is the legal limit that can be charged commercial property in relation to that charged for homeowners and which lowers the residential rate. Increasing the percentage rate shifts more of the tax burden to businesses.

The value of Quincy homes has increased markedly while values of commercial and industrial property have stagnated. As a result, CIPP taxes are making up a smaller portion of the city's real estate base. Homeowners are left to make up the difference.

A controversial measure introduced by Raymondi was narrowly defeated, 5-4. In his last meeting as Council President, Raymondi sought to take advantage of a recently enacted law that sets up a commission to determine whether subsequent legislation should be filed that would allow communities to increase their classification up to .25 percent above the current rate.

The legislation came after five cities and towns, including Boston, sought tax relief for homeowners because of increased property valuations. Boston Mayor Thomas Menino is seeking to increase the city's tax rate up to a maximum of 200 percent.

According to the law, called Chapter 138 of the Acts of 2003, cities and towns would issue preliminary third quarter tax bills equal to 125 percent of the previous quarter's total.

In the meantime, a city or town would defer setting its tax rate while a special commission drafts legislation allowing municipalities the temporary authority to increase their tax rates. In Quincy's case, the rate could go as high as 194 percent.

By taking advantage of this legislation the city could take a big bite out of homeowners' property taxes, Raymondi said. He also circulated a letter dated Nov. 3, 2003 from the Metropolitan Mayors Coalition asking House Speaker Thomas Finneran to pass the original legislation. The letter was signed by various mayors throughout the Commonwealth, including Phelan.

Phelan recommended a 169 percent rate for Quincy. Largey said it was unfair to compare the situation in other municipalities to Quincy.

"Mayor Phelan has no intention whatsoever of availing Quincy of that option," Largey told the council.

But Raymondi criticized the mayor for supporting the legislation while at the same time recommending 169 percent for Quincy.

"You would think the mayor would try to soften the blow for Quincy taxpayers," said Raymondi. "Why would he support increasing the rate to 200 percent in Boston but only 169 in Quincy?"

According to Fantucchio, setting the tax rate at 194 percent would have saved homeowners about $150 in taxes this year.

Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley said Raymondi's proposal would cause "a mass exodus of business in the city."

But Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton said the 175 percent does not go far enough in helping homeowners.

"Either way, we are whacking the taxpayers," said Newton. "I think we need to take a closer look at Chapter 138."

Raymondi's proposal found support from Councillor Joe Finn, Newton and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

On a 6-3 vote, the 169 percent classification also went down to defeat, with Councillors John Kennan, McCauley and Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly supporting it.

"I don't think it's fair to stick it to the business community," said McCauley. "If you are going to bring business back this is the way. We need to create more business value."

But Finn said the 169 percent is too much of a burden on homeowners.

"Residential taxpayers have taken it and took it hard," he told his colleagues. "We have people that are house rich and cash poor."

Keenan said if the city wants to reduce taxes on residents then it must reduce spending.

"Spending has increased and then more has to be raised to pay the bill," he said. "We set the tax rate when we voted on the budget. The easiest way is to spend less - we can't have it both ways."

Raymondi said next month he will introduce a home rule petition asking that the city set the tax classification rate prior to Nov. 1 each year.

"These taxes are a post election rip-off," said Raymondi. "After the election we sock it to the taxpayers," he said. "The voters should know what their taxes are going to be before they vote. It's not good policy to establish our tax rate following an election."

Simple Safety Tips For Holiday Home Decorating

Holiday decorations can give your home just the right festive touch, but don't forget to deck your halls safely this season.

Each year, hospital emergency rooms treat about 12,500 people for injuries related to holiday lights, decorations and Christmas trees, according to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC).

In fact, Christmas trees are involved in about 300 fires annually, resulting in 10 deaths, 30 injuries and an average of more than $10 million in property damage.

Underwriters Laboratories, Inc. (UL), the not-for-profit product safety testing and certification organization, in cooperation with the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA), is once again this year reminding holiday revelers to use common sense and follow a few simple safety tips when decorating for the holiday season:

- If purchasing live, cut trees or greens, carefully inspect the needles. If they're brown or break easily, the greenery isn't fresh and poses a greater fire risk. When you take your tree home, put it in a sturdy, non-tip stand and keep it filled with water at all times.

- If your family prefers decorating with artificial trees or greens, purchase those that are flame retardant. The product packaging will indicate whether the branches of your artificial tree or greens have been treated with flame retardant material. Do not use light strings and other electrical decorations on artificial trees or greens that have metallic needles, leaves or branch coverings.

- Place your tree or greens at least three feet away from fireplaces, radiators and other heat sources. Also make sure the tree isn't blocking a doorway or other exit route.

- Look for the UL Mark on light strings and electrical decorations. The UL Mark on a product means that UL engineers have tested representative samples of the product for foreseeable safety hazards such as fire and electric shock.

- Electrical light strings and other illuminated ornaments that have been tested by UL bear holographic UL labels — easily identified by the UL Mark that appears to "float" on a silver background. Lights intended for indoor-only use bear green UL Marks. Light strings intended for indoor and outdoor use bear red UL Marks.

- Read and follow the manufacturer's instructions for the electrical decorations you're using.

- Carefully inspect each electrical decoration — new or old — before plugging it in. Cracked sockets, frayed, loose or bare wires, and loose connections can cause a serious electric shock or start a fire. Replace damaged items with new, UL-Listed decorations.

- Always unplug light strings or electrical decorations before replacing light bulbs or fuses. Check the instructions to determine what maintenance the manufacturer recommends you perform. In most cases, maintenance is limited to replacing a fuse and lamp. Don't attempt to make a repair unless the instructions indicate the proper procedure and equipment for doing so. Decorations may overheat or safety mechanisms may not operate properly if you use replacement parts other than those specified by the manufacturer.

- Don't use staples or nails to hang light strings. They might damage the cord's wire insulation.

- Check the markings on your light strings to determine the maximum number of strings that may be connected together. If the product packaging does not indicate the number of light strings that may be connected together, practice this rule of thumb: Do not connect more than three midgeit (push-in bulbs) light string sets together. Light strings with the screw-in bulbs (C7s and C9s) should have a maximum of 50 bulbs connected together.

- Don't overload extension cords — it could cause the cord to overheat and start a fire.

- Don't allow children or pets to play with any electrical decoration. Electrical decorations aren't toys and could produce a deadly electric shock if they are misused.

- Turn off all electrical light strings and decorations before leaving home or going to bed.

- Make sure your home is equipped with working smoke alarms and fire extinguishers that carry the UL Mark. Don't forget to install, test and maintain these devices in accordance with the manufacturer's instructions.

- Develop and practice a fire escape plan for your household. Remember, never return to a burning building for any reason. Your belongings can be replaced — you can't!

Nominations Coming In For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Nominations are coming in for The Quincy Sun's 19th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, the late Paul Harold was honored posthumously for dedicating his life, public service and talents to serving his community with integrity and the highest principles while putting people first.

Harold was selected from among 24 nominees submitted by Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final decision.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on this page of this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

After nominations close Wednesday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with this award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominations should be postmarked no later than Dec. 31.

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for their nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Past recipients of the award, and the year of their selection, are:

Tony Siciliano, former deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management (formerly Civil Defense), 1985.

Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, a long-time community volunteer, 1986.

The late Richard J. Koch, Sr., for his work with charitable and community causes over four decades, posthumously in 1987.

Martin Finnegan, retired

Quincy high school athletic director, for coordinating the drug and alcohol program Project Impact, 1988.

Clara Yeomans, a long-time environmentalist and charter member of the Quincy Conservation Commission, 1989.

The late Gerald Gherardi for his contributions to charities and service organizations over a half century, 1990.

Frank Kearns, for his innumerable volunteer contributions as a community activist and advocate for the city's elderly, homeless, needy and poor, 1991.

Stephen Cantelli, an innovative Quincy public school teacher and advocate of community education, 1992.

Mary Vallier, a founder of Domestic Violence Ended (DOVE) and long-time aide to battered women and abused children, 1993.

Fr. William McCarthy, retired pastor of St. John's Church and Quincy's beloved "Father Bill," for helping the poor, hungry, homeless and all others in need for many years, 1994.

Joseph McConville, for freely giving a good part of his life to Quincy youth and his city in many capacities, including as a youth skating instructor and chairman of the Quincy Planning Board, 1995.

Olin Taylor for helping others, especially veterans, ill-children and the less fortunate as his "labor of love," 1996.

Robert Derbes for his volunteer work and many contributions to the community, 1997.

Robert "Bob" Curry for his long-time volunteer work in worthy civic and charitable causes as a member of many local organizations, including the Marie A. Curry Foundation which provides free mammograms for individuals not covered by insurance, 1998.

Ronald G. Adams, who has given freely of his time to guide and inspire his Broad Meadows Middle School students in highly acclaimed efforts to right social wrongs and oversights, both locally and worldwide, 1999.

The late Carol Herbai, for her dedication, enthusiasm and inspiration as a volunteer for a half century at Quincy Medical Center, the American Red Cross and a leper colony, 2000.

Henry (Hank) Bradley, director of Quincy Veterans' Services, for his compassion, dedication, commitment and humility as veterans' services director and for his volunteer work for many civic and charitable causes, 2001.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Wednesday, Dec. 31.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

Health Officials Concerned Infection May Reach Heightened Levels This Winter

What Do Do When Your Child Has The Flu

(NAPS) — Flu season is here and health officials are concerned that the infection may reach heightened levels this winter. Every year, as many as 40 percent of children will become infected with influenza, leaving parents wondering what to do if their children become ill and, perhaps most importantly, how to prevent the disease from infecting the entire family.

About Flu

Influenza is a contagious disease caused by a virus that attacks the respiratory tract and has a variety of symptoms, including muscle aches, fever, headache and sore throat. Because children can pass around the flu for more than a week, it is vital that the virus be diagnosed quickly. Health care professionals recommend a child see a pediatrician for testing and treatment at the onset of symptoms.

Many parents will press their pediatricians for antibiotics, but it is important to remember that, although tens of millions of antibiotics are prescribed every year, antibiotics are powerless against viral infections. In fact, the overuse of antibiotics in children can result in harm by increasing the child's risk of developing antibiotic resistance — a growing concern among pediatricians.

Risk Of

Antibiotic Resistance

According to Dr. Kathryn Edwards, professor of pediatrics at Vanderbilt University and an expert in pediatric infectious disease, "When faced with a child with a high fever, the physician is often tempted to treat with antibiotics to cover the possibility of a bacterial infection. This leads to the overuse of antibiotics and the subsequent development of resistance to antibiotics. If the doctor has an effective way to determine the cause of the fever at the bedside, unnecessary antibiotic use will be reduced. The rapid flu test performed at the bedside can provide just the answers that are needed to make informed decisions."

Rapid Flu Testing

One test that has gained widespread popularity among physicians is the QuickVue Influenza test, a fast and painless test that can test for the presence of the influenza virus. The test is simple, requiring either a nasal swab or nasal wash and can provide results in 10 minutes or less.

Once flu is detected, physicians can prescribe antiviral drugs — a more appropriate treatment option in place of antibiotics. Furthermore, parents get peace of mind knowing that their children are receiving the most appropriate treatment option available. For more information, visit www.flutest.com or consult your physician.

Rudolph With Your Nose And Eyes So Bright, Do You Have Allergies Tonight?

Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer may have saved deliveries for Santa Claus on that foggy Christmas Eve, but elf lore has it that indoor allergies caused his red nose and eyes.

These are the same allergies that unfortunately can leave the rest of us looking like Rudolph at holiday time: Bright noses and itchy, red eyes.

"People who suffer from allergies may get an unwelcome present come Christmas time — red, irritated, watery eyes and stuffy noses — because the things that cause allergies are cooped up indoors with us," said Dr. Reza Haque, principal clinical physician at Novartis Ophthalmics North America maker of Zaditor™. "We bring musty firewood indoors. We bring dusty Christmas decorations out of storage. We bring our pets indoors because of the cold or receive puppies and kittens as presents. All of these can trigger allergies in people who are susceptible."

In addition, Haque pointed out, many of today's homes are extremely energy-efficient, keeping the ingredients of an allergy attack trapped indoors.

According to the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America, allergies affect an estimated 50 to 60 million Americans. That translates to about one of every five adults and children. Allergies are the sixth leading cause of chronic disease in the United States.

"Dust, mold and pet dander are allergens," Haque said. "For most people, allergens are harmless substances, but they trigger physical reactions in people who are sensitive to them. These reactions range from sneezing to itchy, watery eyes and red noses that make them look like Rudolph."

Haque says these reactions are the body's way of ridding itself of the irritating allergens. Sneezing expels them from the nose, and tears wash them from the eyes.

Doctors prescribe medications to counter the attacks.

One of the leading medications to relieve itchy, watery eyes is Zaditor™ manufactured by Novartis Ophthalmics. The fast-acting, easy-to-use Zaditor eye drops relieve the itch in just three minutes and have a lasting effect for up to 12 hours. One survey showed that 96 percent of physicians queried said Zaditor is as effective as or more effective than many other similar products currently on the market.

"Zaditor is effective because it works on different parts of the allergic reaction," said Haque. "Zaditor is an antihistamine and it blocks the action of a chemical in the body called histamine, which causes itching and inflammation. Zaditor not only relieves the effects of histamine, but because it is also a mast cell stabilizer it prevents the further release of histamine for up to 12 hours."

Maintain A Healthy Diet When Eating Out

(NAPS) — Today's busy schedules often call for dinner plans at a restaurant. It's a fast and easy solution, but is it healthy? While it may seem difficult to dine out and stay slim, it's not impossible.

According to a recent study conducted by Taco Bell, more than two-thirds of Americans believe there are fewer healthy choices when eating out. However, more restaurants are now offering a variety of healthier options on the menu. If you can't find what you want, ask. Most places are willing to modify an order to meet dietary needs.

Are you not sure what to order? Dine out with confidence by following these tasty tips:

- Watch your portions. Order off the menu rather than a buffet to control how much you eat. If portion sizes are large, request a takeout container at the beginning of the meal and save the rest for later.

- Get it on the side. Ask for gravies, sauces and dressings on the side or substitute them with a low-calorie sauce like salsa.

- Avoid high-calorie beverages. Drink water, diet soda or coffee instead of regular soda or alcoholic beverages. Switching from regular to diet soda can easily shave off 100 calories a day and impact overall health.

- Fill up on veggies. Order extra vegetables whenever possible. Even lettuce, tomatoes and salsa give a nutritional boost to a meal. Plus, veggies are filling and appealing without adding many calories.

- Choose lean meats and cooking methods. Look for the leaner cuts of beef or meat like chicken breast and ask for it baked, grilled or roasted rather than fried.

- Eat slowly. Take breaks between bites to give your body enough time to signal when it is full. Concentrate on the environment and people you're dining with to keep from devouring food.

SUBTLE CHANGES. DRAMATIC RESULTS

Tooth contouring and reshaping offers instant improvement for patients with crooked, chipped, cracked, or overlapping teeth. This cosmetic technique involves the use of a sanding drill to sculpt tooth enamel and eliminate or minimize imperfections in only one office visit, in most cases. Abrasive strips are used between teeth to shape the sides of the teeth. And, finally, the teeth are smoothed and polished. For this procedure to be effective, it only takes a relatively small amount of enamel reduction to get the desired result and anesthetic is usually not required. Tooth bonding may be performed in conjunction with reshaping and recontouring to achieve a beautiful smile, which is always the goal of cosmetic procedures.

A smile is one of our greatest personal assets. It expresses who we are and how we feel about ourselves. We believe it is our responsibility to share our acquired knowledge and understanding of oral health with each and every patient, one on one. When was the last time you had your teeth checked by a professional? Call us now at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Tooth contouring can also help improve the bit in certain instances.

SPORTS

Motivated Quincy Soars Past Archies

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School girls' basketball team enjoyed its best season in two decades last year, posting a 14-7 record, finishing second in the league and qualifying for the tournament for the first time since 1982.

Quite an impressive résumé, indeed.

Yet, the six returnees and head coach Jeff Bretsch remember something far more different — the 62-26 debacle to Hingham in the first round of the tournament.

"Definitely, it's on our minds," Bretsch said. "It was a tough way to end the season. We were beat in the first round pretty good. It's definitely a motivation. The kids are working hard to get ready for that. We're hoping to improve in the tournament."

The Presidents got off on the right track last Friday with a 71-40 victory at Archbishop Williams in their season opener. They host Fontbonne, Division 2 state semifinalist a year ago, tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30. Next Tuesday, they host neighboring North Quincy at 5 p.m.

Against AW Quincy led 26-19 at halftime and then connected on 19-of-20 free throws in the second half to run away with an easy win.

Junior Alysia DiMuzio powered the team with 24 points and 13 rebounds. Senior co-captain Bonnie Hirtle poured in 23 points and sophomore Jessica Page, a transfer from AW, added nine points and eight rebounds.

"We had first-game jitters

in the first half," Bretsch said. "In the second half we started to come together and we executed well. The defense was solid, holding them to 40 points."

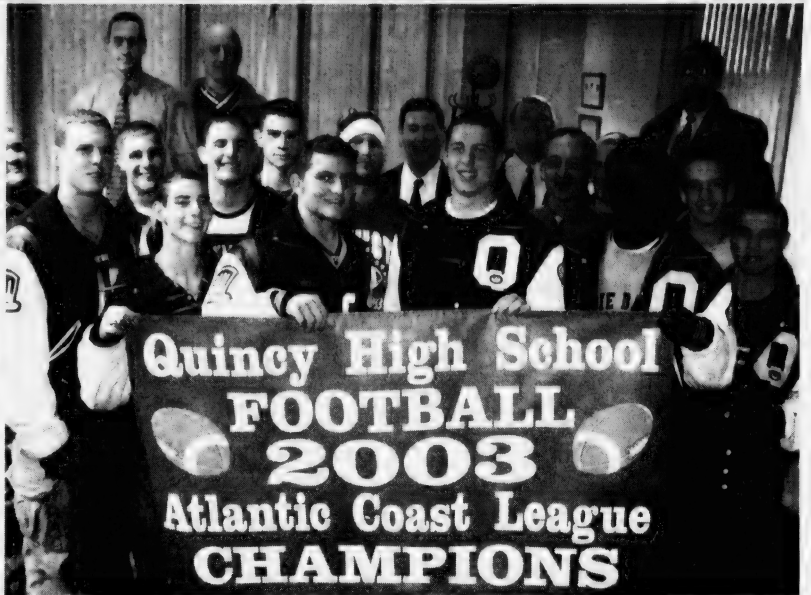

Hirtle, an all-star shooting guard, averaged 19 points per game last season and is joined in the backcourt by senior co-captain and all-star point guard Sarah Shea, who drained 32 three-pointers last year.

DiMuzio, also an all-star, is the Presidents' low-post threat at center. "Alysia has improved her game in the low post," Bretsch said. "She's a better athlete; she's stronger. I expect a breakout year for her."

Senior Brittney Tobin and Page are starting at the forward positions. "Page is a huge gain," Bretsch said. "She brings aggressiveness and intensity. She can score inside and outside."

On the bench are senior forward Julie Andrews, junior forwards Stephanie Kozlowski and Nicole O'Sullivan and guard Rebekah Sorensen, and sophomore forward Ashlee Scott.

"I think our strength is we have a lot of different weapons," Bretsch said. "We're confident and mature now and all are looking to contribute. And the bench has set the tone for this year in terms of defense and working hard."

THE QUINCY HIGH football team received an Atlantic Coast League championship banner from Mayor William Phelan last week. Holding the banner are, from the left, senior quad-captains Jon Banks, Steve Ohlson, Ed DeWitt and J.J. Niamkey.

Ridge Injury Big Loss For North

The North Quincy High School girls' basketball team suffered a huge loss before the season even started.

Senior tri-captain and starting point guard Ashley Ridge will miss at least eight weeks — and most likely the entire season — after sustaining a serious injury Saturday night, Dec. 6, during a winter storm.

Ridge was involved in an automobile accident and fractured the second vertebrae in her neck. She has to wear a special neck brace, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, for eight weeks.

"She's lucky to be alive," said head coach Doug MacFarlane. "Ashley's shoes are going to be tough to fill. She looked so good in a scrimmage against Hingham. This is going to hurt us big time. She's a solid point guard, a tough player like her older sister, Casey. She doesn't turn the ball over and plays tough defense."

The Red Raiders, which opened their season Tuesday at Silver Lake, will travel to Taunton tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 p.m. Next Tuesday, they battle city rival Quincy at 5 p.m. and then they'll compete in the Chelsea Tournament Christmas weekend.

North Quincy returns seven players from last year's 11-7 tournament squad, which fell to Braintree in the first round. It will be aiming for its fifth straight tourney appearance and 10th in the past 11 years.

"That's always one of our goals," MacFarlane said of the postseason. "Our league is going to be tough this year, too."

Senior tri-captain Beth Goodrich, more of a shooting guard, will be asked to take over the point guard position. "The pressure is falling on Beth because she is a senior," MacFarlane said.

Junior Shauna Kelly will join Goodrich in the backcourt. Rounding out the starting lineup are junior Sarah Goreham and senior Megan Sidorowicz at forward with senior Alyssa Dearani at center.

Coming off the bench are seniors Jenn Ryan (guard) Kara Culgin (guard/forward), juniors Amanda Saylor (forward), Meghan Coughlin (forward), Caitlyn Mark (guard), Caitlin Peters (guard), and sophomores

"We have trouble scoring, but we play really good defense," said MacFarlane, whose team plays a strong man-to-man, pressing defense. "We do a good job of cutting to the open spots and the kids pass the ball and look for each other. But we have spells where we can't put the ball in the basket. If we can score, we'll probably win."

AT YOUR SERVICE

One thing buyers should do after purchasing their vehicles is familiarize themselves with the service intervals. Those who own or lease a vehicle that remains under the manufacturer's warranty must perform the minimum recommended maintenance listed in the owner's manual. Otherwise, they risk liability if a warranted part were to fail. In short, the manufacturer warrants the vehicle as long as it is properly serviced. A review of the recommended service interval will involve a decision as to whether to follow the normal-duty or severe-duty schedule. While the latter may sum up the image of traveling non-stop through desert sands for a week, it may only take frequent stopping/starting, excessive idling, or sub-five-mile trips to lead to carbon buildup.

Maintain your car at the recommended intervals. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Red Raiders Eye State Tourney Return

By CHRIS POISSON

There are some questions concerning the North Quincy High School boys' basketball team this season.

The Red Raiders, particularly their bench, are a young and inexperienced team. They return just five players from last year's 5-15 campaign. And there are six first-year varsity players, four of whom are sophomores.

"There are a lot of question marks," said second-year head coach James Rendle. "We're kind of young and that's a little bit of a concern."

On top of that, North Quincy will be without its starting point guard for a couple of weeks. Senior Jimmy Burke is nursing a knee injury from the Thanksgiving Day football game.

Despite these obstacles, Rendle has set the team's sights on a tournament appearance.

"We're certainly looking to be a tournament team," Rendle said. "We think we have enough to get to the tournament. We also want to be competitive in our league. There are a few teams we think we can beat."

North Quincy, which opened its season Tuesday at home against Silver Lake, will host Taunton tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 p.m. Next Tuesday, it squares off at cross-town rival Quincy at 6:30 p.m.

Sophomore shooting guard Kyle Costa, in his second year on varsity, will fill in for Burke at the point. He'll be teamed up in the backcourt with his older brother, senior Daryl, who led the team in scoring last year with 13 points per game.

In the frontcourt, senior Bryan Donovan and sophomore John Murray are both 6-foot-3 forwards. Donovan possesses a nice shot, while Murray will need some time to get acquainted with the varsity level.

"There are a lot of big bodies in our league, so it will be a learning experience for Murray early on," Rendle said.

Senior Brandon Neves rounds out the group and brings a strong low-post game as the starting center.

"This year, everyone on the floor has the ability to score for us," Rendle said. "That will be one of our strengths. We're much more balanced than last year and we're going to score. Defensively, we have to work more as a unit. To date, we're not defending as well as last year."

The bench consists of junior guards John Fitzgerald, a strong defensive player, and Tom Loss and sophomores Kevin Donovan (guard), Akil Benjamin (forward) and Jade Pina (guard/forward).

"The bench is a question mark because they're relatively young," Rendle said. "As soon as they adjust to varsity we'll be competitive."

Supervised Gym Programs During Vacation Week

The Quincy Recreation Department will expand its supervised gym program for the upcoming school vacation period.

The free program, for boys and girls age 8 through high school, will be conducted in 11 school locations. Youngsters may attend the program location of their choice.

"These programs are well received by working parents and have continued to provide safe, supervised activities for the children," said Recreation Director Barry Welch. "This year the school vacation period will be for a two-week period, and our department has responded with a schedule that reflects the additional vacation days for the children."

The gyms will all be open from 9 a.m. to noon. The schedule is 9 to 11 a.m. for elementary participants age 8 through grade 5; 11 a.m. to noon for middle school and high school age.

There may be some changes in local gym times to accommodate difference in attendance by locations.

The following gyms will be open from 9 a.m. to noon Dec. 22-23, 26, 29-31 and Jan. 2: Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Bernazzani, Merrymount, Montclair, Snug Harbor, Squantum, Wollaston, Atlantic, Point Webster.

The Sterling gym will be open Dec. 22-23, 29-30.

The regular gym schedule of Saturday supervised gym programs will continue Dec. 20 and 27, from 9 a.m. to noon.

In addition to the expanded day schedule, the following gyms will be open on the usual evening schedule during the following days of the vacation.

Dec. 22, 29: Merrymount, 5 to 7 p.m.; Atherton Hough, Montclair, Snug Harbor, 5 to 8 p.m.

Dec. 23, 30: Atlantic, Snug Harbor, Point Webster, 5 to 8 p.m.; Squantum, 5 to 9 p.m.

For more information call 617-376-1394.

Rec Dept., Elks Sponsoring Free Throw Contest

The Quincy Recreation Department and the Quincy Lodge of Elks is co-sponsoring the Elks' National "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw Contest.

The first round of the Quincy contest will be offered at the following gymnasiums Saturday at 10 a.m.: Atherton Hough, Atlantic Middle, Bernazzani, Beechwood Knoll, Merrymount, Montclair, Point Webster, Snug Harbor, Squantum and Wollaston.

The Quincy competition is the first step in a national contest for boys and girls ages 8-13. Contestants are assigned to three separate categories in both boys and girls divisions. Age groups are 8-9, 10-11 and 12-13. The contestant's age is determined by April 1, 2004.

Each participant is awarded points for successful free throws. Boys and girls in the age 8-9 group will shoot from four feet in front of the regulation foul line.

The program will be supervised in neighborhood gymnasiums by the Quincy Recreation leaders assigned their regular recreation program in that area.

The program is free and contestants may participate even if not previously enrolled in the recreation program. Participants may choose any of the various times or sites to compete, but they may only compete in the Quincy qualifier.

"We are pleased that the Quincy Lodge of Elks has once again provided this program for the benefit of our participants," Recreation Director Barry Welch said. "Many Quincy residents in the past have enjoyed the benefits of this activity at the local, regional and state level, as well as the national championship. The Elks devote a great deal of attention to youth programs. Their commitment to our children helps make Quincy a better place to live."

The Quincy Lodge Hoop Shoot Chairman is Ed Miller, athletic director of Quincy Public Schools.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Recently, I came across a little book, entitled "Life's Little Instruction Book." Five hundred suggestions, observations, and reminders on how to live a happy and rewarding life. I would like to share some of the words of wisdom with you. This little book is not without a bit of humor.

Compliment at least three people every day... Be the first to say "Hello." Say "Thank you" a lot... Be forgiving of yourself, and others... Look people in the eye... Treat every one you meet the way you want to be treated. Don't waste time learning the tricks of the trade. Instead, learn the trade. Never give up on anyone. Miracles happen every day... When playing games with children, be sure to let them win sometimes... Be tough minded, but tender hearted... Wear out, don't trust out... Measure people by the size of their hearts, not the size of their bank accounts... Keep a secret, but be careful about burdening a friend with your secret... Never tell any one they look tired or that they look like they feel bad... Resist giving advice to anyone concerning matrimony, finances, or their hair style... Remember that over night success usually takes about fifteen years... Try to always have a friend who owns a truck... Don't be afraid to say "I made a mistake." Never rain on someone else's parade... Wise words from a tiny book...

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

INTERNATIONAL

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Careful, Lamb. Don't let your generous nature lead to some serious overspending as you contemplate your holiday gift-giving. Your social life kicks off into high gear by week's end.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A positive attitude helps you weather annoying but unavoidable changes in holiday plans. Aspects favor new friendships and reinforcement of existing relationships.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Demands on your energy level could be much higher than usual as you prepare for the upcoming holidays. Be sure to pace yourself. Friends and family will be happy to help.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't allow a suddenly icy reaction from a friend or family member to continue without learning what caused it — and what can be done to restore that once warm and caring relationship.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A relationship seems to be unraveling, mostly from a lack of attention. It might be a good idea to ease up on whatever else you're doing so you can spend more time working to mend it.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) New facts emerge that not only help explain the recent rift with a trusted colleague, but might also provide a chance to wipe the slate clean and make a fresh start in your friendship.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A family member's personal situation is, fortunately, resolved in time for you to get back into your hectic round of holiday preparations. An old friend might bring a new friend into your life.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Pace yourself in meeting holiday pressures and workplace demands to avoid winding up with a frayed temper and a Scorpion stinger that lashes out at puzzled kith, kin and colleagues.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A financial matter requires close attention. Also, news from a trusted source provides the means to help sort out a long-standing state of confusion and put it into perspective.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This is a good time to reinforce family ties. Make it a priority to assess and resolve all outstanding problems. Start the upcoming holiday season with a full measure of love.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't be pressured into a so-called solid-gold investment. Wait until the holiday distractions are over. Then take a harder look at it. You might find that the "gold" is starting to flake off.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A former friend might be trying to heal the breach between you by using a mutual friend as an intermediary. Best advice: Keep an open mind despite any lingering bad feelings.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of saying the right thing at the right time. Your friendships are deep and lasting.

Holy Spirit, You who solve all problems, light all roads, so I can attain my goals. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life You are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank You for all things, as You confirm once again that I never want to be separated from You, even in spite of all material allusions. I wish to be with You in eternal glory. Thank You for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer for 3 consecutive days. After 3 days, the favor requested will be granted. Even if it may appear difficult, this prayer must be published immediately without mentioning the favor. Only your initials should appear at the bottom. M.W. 12 18

Auto Dealer Quirk Contributes $5,000 To Archbishop Williams

Quincy-based auto dealer Daniel Quirk "bought a hole" in a recent fundraising golf tournament sponsored by Archbishop Williams High School and turned it into a $5,000 contribution to the Brantree school.

"It feels terrific to give to Archbishop Williams," said Quirk, a graduate of Keth Academy in Lowell, a now defunct Catholic school. "Catholic education worked for me and my family."

"My parents had 12 kids and most of us had a Catholic school education, so we're happy with what it has given us. One of my own daughters is a student at Newton Country Day School of the Sacred Heart."

"I was surprised and delighted by this unexpected generosity," said Williams' Principal Mary Louise Sadowski. "Given our upcoming independent status, this gift is very timely and welcomed."

Archbishop Williams, founded 54 years ago, is one of the schools that is being cut loose by the Boston Archdiocese to become an independent, private Catholic school in September.

It is currently involved in a long-term capital campaign to raise between $12 and $14 million to build a new multipurpose center and faculty office area and rehab other parts of the school.

"As we begin a new chapter in the school's life and as Archbishop Williams will be governed by an independent board, to have such financial support by a prominent businessman is terrific," said Development Director Steve McGrath (AWHS '71).

Quirk has nine dealerships on the South Shore, selling cars by Chevrolet, Ford, GEO, Hyundai, Kia, Mazda, Mitsubishi, Nissan and Volkswagen in Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth Landing.

New Access To I-93 Connects Logan Airport

Sen. Michael Morrissey announces the opening of a new direct connection to I-93 South from I.A. East Boston, and Logan Airport as well as specific route changes in Boston.

The new Exit 23 from the Mass Pike West will improve the commute for drivers heading to points south by allowing them to use the Ted Williams Tunnel, thus avoiding downtown traffic. Beginning Dec. 16, this will be the only direct route to I-93 south from East Boston, Route 1A and Logan Airport, as there will no longer be access from the Summer Tunnel to the Central Artery southbound.

"This is a long anticipated change by the Central Artery/Tunnel Project and the Mass Pike," said Morrissey.

"This advancement will benefit the thousands of South Shore residents who frequently commute from Logan Airport and points north."

Drivers on Atlantic Ave. heading north past the Aquarium and Marriott Long Wharf will now take a new Cross St. northbound turn left directly onto North St. from Atlantic Ave. northbound. To access Hanover St. and North Washington St. areas, drivers should go straight. From Fulton and Commercial Sts., drivers must now turn right onto Cross St.

In addition, the I-93 northbound exit 23 will no longer provide a connection to Fulton St. and Surface Artery southbound. I-93 North Exit 23 drivers headed to

"This development is especially opportune with the arrival of the holiday season," said Morrissey. "This new information and added access is a bonus to so many of our South Shore commuters and Christmas shoppers. Also, with so many family and friends traveling in these upcoming weeks via Logan Airport, it's good to know that there will be a new convenient route serving our community."

For more information on the changes, contact Morrissey's office at 617-722-1494.

Browne said the number of outpatient visits has increased 15 percent over the past three years. Since 1999, the number of inpatient discharges has increased 28 percent, he said. Emergency room visits continue to rise also, he said.

Some residents said the hospital should build the garage on the existing parking lot, but Browne said it could hamper QMC's financial turnaround.

"We can't risk derailing our turnaround," said Browne. "If we build another garage in the existing lot our business will go away, and where will people park during construction? We will certainly lose revenue. But we will look at it."

Local Organizations Helping Hundreds Of Needy Families

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Once again, local charitable organizations are reaching out to hundreds of needy families during the holiday season by offering food, clothing and other necessities.

Major Doug Jones from the Salvation Army on 6 Baxter St., said more than 200 families will receive help from the organization this year.

"We are definitely seeing an increase in the number of families requesting assistance," said Jones.

Toys, food vouchers and clothing, such as hats and mittens, will be distributed during the holidays, he said.

In addition, more local businesses are "adopting" families for the season. Jones said local businesses contact the organization to determine the specific needs of a family. From there, the business heads the call, he said.

Despite inclement weather, charitable donations to the Salvation Army kettles are on par with last year, said Jones.

"Even though we've had to play catch up, we are finding that people are very generous this year," he said.

Helen Crowley, program manager for the American Red Cross South Area, 1495 Hancock St., said more than 1,000 South Shore children will receive stocking full of goodies from the organization's holiday stocking program.

Area businesses, schools and citizens volunteer to participate in the program, which provides a Christmas stocking full of toys and gifts.

Crowley thanked all donors for their charity, although she said contributions are down approximately one third compared to last year.

"Our donors are so generous, but we did notice that people were not able to give to the extent they have in the past," said Crowley. "I think the economy has had something to do with that."

Peter Seppala, president of the Seaside Advocacy Group at 15 Bicknell St. said demand for food has risen markedly this year. The organization has been helping local families since 1995.

The organization plans on distributing about 178 food baskets to needy families during the holiday season. The baskets include a 10-12 pound turkey, potatoes, vegetables and stuffing.

"We have had a large increase in needy families this year," said Seppala. "But we want to satisfy as many people as we can."

Seppala said the organization has been working with the Quincy Housing Authority (QHA) to attract more families.

"Many people from the QHA didn't know we existed, so we sent a letter out

On Fraud Allegations

College, City Conducting Own Investigations

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Quincy College and the city are conducting separate investigations into allegations that students graduating from the school's surgical technology program received inadequate or no clinical training.

Quincy College has come under scrutiny in recent weeks after two graduates of the program filed complaints with the state Board of Higher Education alleging the school failed to provide required clinical instruction.

In addition, the MetroWest Medical Center in Framingham filed a complaint with the board, saying a recent Quincy College graduate hired by the hospital had inadequate skills to do the job.

The initial complaints, filed by Pamela St. Clair and Dawn Spencer, both of Plymouth, allege the school promised that its surgical technology program would include hands-on training in the operating room. The women completed the one-year certificate program in May but said they never received adequate instruction.

The students allege that documents placing them in clinical training at Quincy

Medical Center during the spring were concocted or forged.

The complaints were submitted to the Association of Surgical Technologists. The New England Association of Schools and Colleges is also looking into the matter.

Thomas Largey, Mayor William Phelan's executive secretary, said the city has contacted lawyer John Sullivan, a forensic auditor from the accounting firm of Melanson, Heath & Co., to conduct an investigation.

"This is an extremely serious set of allegations made against the college," said

Will Appeal, Attorney Says

Maher's Pension Rescinded By Retirement Board

By a unanimous vote, the Quincy Retirement Board voted to rescind former chief plumbing inspector Ralph Maher's $36,000 a year pension.

But Maher intends to appeal the decision, according to his attorney.

"We are definitely going to appeal this," said attorney Frank McGee. "I think we have a strong basis for appeal."

The five-member board rescinded Maher's pension Monday morning after holding four closed-door meetings over the past few months.

The board will submit its final report in early January. Maher will have 30 days beyond that to appeal the case.

The board members are: Chairman George McCray, Richard Crespi, Councilor Frank McCauley, City Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick and Roger Perfetti.

In July, Maher pleaded guilty to charges related to a break-in at city hall in which portions of his personnel file were removed. He was put

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Largey. "We are very interested in ensuring that the investigation into these matters is conducted in a thorough and aggressive manner with the aim of getting to the truth."

Sean Barry, president of Quincy College, is a surgery patient at Massachusetts General Hospital.

But Theresa Lord-Piatelli, chairwoman of the College Board of Governors, said: "Clearly, the college would not have any motivation to encourage or foster any kind of activity that damages the credibility of one of our programs. But this is certainly something that needs to be investigated."

The college recently retained attorney George Burke, former Norfolk County District Attorney and Quincy city councillor, to conduct the school's investigation.

Burke met for three hours this week with Faith Tucker, the college's coordinator of surgical technology, and her attorney.

After the interview, Burke said Tucker's recollection of the matter is at odds with the students' version of events. He has requested an interview with St. Clair and Spencer on the matter.

Surgical technologists work as assistants in hospital operating rooms and are sometimes called "scrubs." They require detailed knowledge of operating rooms, the tools used in surgeries, and how to prepare patients for surgery.

The college program is supposed to comply with a strict set of accrediting standards and requires all surgical technology students to spend several weeks in clinical training at one of more than a dozen hospitals that partner with the college, according to college officials.

College officials said a recent visit by the college's accreditation agency generated positive reviews.

St. Clair and Spencer allege that the college side-stepped clinical requirements.

Instructor evaluations require a series of marks given to students on tasks related to clinical training. At the bottom of each evaluation are hand-written notes outlining the student's overall performance and highlighting areas that needed improvement.

Burke said Patty King, a former Quincy College instructor who was listed as the instructor on record for the evaluations, did not fill out the evaluations personally, but conveyed the information by phone to Tucker.

The students claim they never met King. A local newspaper recently quoted King as saying she never worked as a clinical instructor at QMC.

The college hired a private investigator to track down King, according to Burke. King's last known address was listed in Abington, but she moved recently, said Burke.

"I think she is the missing link," said Burke. "But we cannot find her at the moment - she is the key to unlocking the door or opening Pandora's Box."

The students claim they never signed self-evaluations that are part of their student records. The evaluations ask students to rank their own performance on a series of tasks.

But Burke said the students did sign their self-evaluations, based on an initial report by a handwriting expert.

Burke said 70 students enrolled in the college's surgical technology program last year. Students are placed in a number of hospitals to satisfy the requirements of the program. Five students, including St. Clair and Spencer, were assigned to QMC. Burke said the other three students received the proper training.

Burke said he will interview hospital officials, doctors and nurses to determine whether the students in question attended their training at QMC. The hospital should have some record of who enters operating rooms, he said.

"I am not reaching any conclusions until I talk to all witnesses, but I intend to get to the bottom of this," said Burke. "Why did the other three students receive the training at QMC but Spencer and St. Clair didn't?"

Stephen McGrath, the college's lawyer, said the Board of Higher Education has set a Dec. 26 deadline for the college to respond to the complaints. But McGrath said the college will present its findings at that time, and if the board wants more information he will ask for an extension.

In the meantime, Burke is asking anyone with knowledge about the issue to contact him.

He said the college has been very cooperative, turning over numerous documents, including information about attendance records and evaluations. He said he is conducting interviews with students, faculty and others connected to the matter.

Largey said the city was prompted to conduct its own investigation after the college's initial response to the matter was "fundamentally deficient."

"We demanded that they conduct their own independent investigation and when they did not we decided to conduct our own," he said.

But McGrath disagreed, saying the college is taking the allegations seriously.

"We have always considered these allegations to be extremely serious," said McGrath. "Our obligation is to the students and that's how we are conducting ourselves."

Largey said the new investigation is not connected to the city's rent dispute with the college.

"These allegations were brought by people who had no contact with the mayor's office," said Largey. "They were stymied in their efforts to resolve the issue, so they decided to take the matter to the state Board of Higher Education."

Largey said it is possible other students will come forward with similar allegations.

Maher To Appeal Rescinding Of Pension

was put on probation and ordered to pay $893 in fines and restitution. Maher retired from the city job after he was charged in the 2001 break-in.

Board members based their votes on whether they believed Maher's actions were directly related to his job as plumbing inspector.

McGee said the board misapplied the law.

"This is a heck of a Christmas present to his family," McGee said. "I can't understand why the board would choose to take this vote only days before Christmas. This is a good way to destroy a family's Christmas."

Daniel Keating, former Mayor James Sheets' executive secretary, pled guilty to his role in the crime several months before Maher.

to everyone over there and we had a great response," he said.

Seppala praised the efforts of Mayor William Phelan for setting up last week's citywide food drive. Seaside received approximately 3,000 pounds of food from the drive, he said.

Seppala said the organization should have enough food to satisfy recipients until mid-January.

"There's no way of thanking everyone involved, but we are just grateful for their help," he said. "This has been such a hectic year."

The Quincy Lodge of Elks is giving 150 Christmas dinners to needy families throughout the area, according to Exalted Ruler James Ryan. The dinners will include a turkey, stuffing, vegetables, potatoes and breads, he said. The organization works with the Fruit Basket on Granite St. to distribute the baskets, he said.

This week, Elks members will deliver the baskets to needy families, he said.

"Donations are up a bit this year," said Ryan. "Our members realize times are tough, and I think they opened up a little more this year."

Ryan said a recent UMass Boston study about hunger in the city surprised many people.

"Many people were shocked to hear about that study, and the Elks really want to do what we can to help. The City of Quincy has helped us and we wanted to help the city in return."

Also, the organization works with the Marines' Toys for Tots program to provide gifts for children. Ryan credited Dave and Andrea Bartick with assisting the program.

The Elks also held its first Christmas party for senior citizens. Ryan said he hopes the event will become an annual tradition at the Elks.

John Yazwinski, executive director at Father Bill's Place, said the shelter will provide gifts for approximately 130 people on Christmas Eve. In addition, about 30 to 40 families will receive care packages during the week.

On Christmas Day from 12 noon to 2 p.m., the shelter will serve dinner to nearly 100 people. Dinner will consist of a buffet-style meal with roast beef, Chinese food or ham, he said.

Yazwinski said the shelter receives food and gift donations from local churches, businesses and residents.

"The food pantries have really struggled this year, and there is a great need out there," he said. "But it's great to see Quincy respond to the need."

Tracey Donohue, director of planning and development at the Quincy Community Action Program at 1509 Hancock St., said the organization has been assisting nearly 300 families during the holiday season. The group is also providing food or food vouchers to needy families.

The organization's Headstart program has benefited from WJDA and its Giving Tree program to help numerous families throughout the area.

Also, the housing program is working with local businesses to provide food vouchers to 53 homeless families living in area motels.

"Donations are up," she said. "We have plenty of gifts this year, and I hope it continues throughout the year. It's very heartening to see the response from the citizens of Quincy."

Rev. David Wooster, program director of the Quincy Crisis Center at 282 Billings Rd., said the organization will help out 180 South Shore families during the holidays.

Each family will receive four bags of groceries and a turkey or ham, and families with children under the age of 16 will receive toys, stocking stuffers and an article of clothing, he said.

Wooster said charitable giving has been down slightly this year, but he thanked everyone who has volunteered and taken part in helping needy families.

Area businesses, churches and schools have donated to the center, he said.

He said about 80 volunteers will deliver items to homebound families prior to Christmas.

Thomas Koch, executive director of the Koch Club, said the organization is celebrating its 51st year helping needy families.

This year, the Koch Club is helping more than 50 families with various gifts, toys, and food baskets, including turkeys, hams and canned goods.

Koch thanked Attorney David Mahoney, Robert Woods, Joseph Koch and Dave Murphy for their efforts on the group's Christmas Charity Program Committee.

This year, Koch Club is dedicating its charity drive to the late Jim and Anne Moody, longtime members and supporters of the organization.

- On Dec. 24, 1851, a devastating fire at the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C., destroys about two-thirds of its 55,000 volumes, including most of Thomas Jefferson's personal library, sold to the institution in 1815.
- On Dec. 28, 1869, the Knights of Labor, a labor union of tailors in Philadelphia, hold the first Labor Day ceremonies in American history. The first annual observance of Labor Day was organized by the American Federation of Labor in 1884, which resolved at a convention in Chicago that "the first Monday in September be set aside as a laborer's national holiday."

• On Dec. 22, 1964, comedian Lenny Bruce is sentenced to four months in a New York jail for violating obscenity laws during his nightclub act. Bruce never served any time, however, because he died of a drug overdose in 1966 while the case was on appeal.

Dear Santa . . .

Dear Santa:

It's me again, Santa. And, late again.

I'm sorry. I don't know why every year I wait to the last minute to write.

Please forgive me and try to do the best you can to get the gifts I'm asking for delivered on time.

And just a reminder, Santa. We pronounce it Quin-zee. Don't want you to get confused with those places that call theirs Quin-see. We were the first and it's really Quin-zee. Just ask DAVE McCULLOUGH. He knows.

As in the past, Santa, some of these gift requests are in a serious vein — and some humorous. Please do your best to get the following to the following:

Mayor BILL PHELAN, a gold mine under McIntyre Mall to keep the city on an even keel through these not so great economic times. (He didn't get the oil well I asked for last year) . . . DAN RAYMONDI, the right decision on whether and when to run for mayor . . . And while you're at it, Santa, how about a Christmas card from Bill to Dan and one from Dan to Bill . . . FRANK MCCAULEY, the incoming city council president, a gavel with a built-in stop watch to keep the council meetings short, sweet and to the point . . . Fire Chief PAUL O'CONNELL, a set of fire engines to replace the present five oldies especially Engine 8 in Germantown which has been around since about 1979 . . . Police Chief BILL FALCO, a year without a major crime . . . Ward 6's ALICIA GARDNER, Quincy's first woman councillor in 10 years and only the fourth in 115 years, an impressive debut . . . Ditto JAY DAVIS in Ward 4 . . . And, of course, for Ward 1's LEO KELLY, a successful pick-up from where he left off in 1984 . . . Another RICHIE MEADE in the Planning Department. (He'll be hard to find, Santa) . . . Health Commissioner DREW SCHEELE, a special delivery of flu vaccine — just in case . . . DPW Commissioner JAY FINK, the rest of the winter without another major snowstorm . . . BRIAN McNAMEE, 26 more votes . . . JOE NEWTON, quite a few more. But he's going to be a winner anyway, with his coming marriage to LAURA MacKNIGHT . . . City Clerk JOSEPH SHEA, that miraculous election day when every registered voter actually comes out to vote. Joe's been looking for that day for sometime now, Santa. How about it? . . . DEAN RIZZO, the new executive director of Quincy 2000, a "biggie" development to bring more tax dollars and more jobs to Quincy . . . MARALIN MANNING, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, a pair of roller skates to cover all the ground she does. And another pair for the other half of the dynamic duo, MARIE WATTS. They were out the bicycle built for two we asked for last year. . . DICK LOMBARDI, a return of the Babe Ruth World Series . . . TOM KOCH and his Park Dept. staff, a "Well Done" for transforming Adams Field into the perfect ballfield for the first series while up against a pressure deadline . . . TOM LARGEY, the mayor's executive secretary, a necktie that will get him through security detectors at Logan Airport . . . KRISTEN PRISCELLA, the mayor's director of operations, a successful new career in San Francisco. She's put a twist on HORRACE GREELEY'S famed advice to "Go west young Lady, go west." May she never hear the rumble of an earthquake . . . The SCHOOL COMMITTEE, a peace pipe. THE QUINCY COLLEGE, a pound of peace pipe tobacco . . . JO-AN BRAGG, nice try and better luck next time . . . MIKE McFARLAND, a toothpaste TV commercial contract for that big smile . . . Fr. BILL MCCARTHY and JOHN YAZWINSKI, the day they can close Father Bill's Place because it and other shelters for the homeless are no longer needed due, at last, to plenty of affordable housing. . . CHRISTINE CEDRONE and BRYAN CONNOLLY, who are leaving the school committee and city council, successful new law careers. And, maybe someday, a return to the local political scene . . . Majors DOUG and LINDA JONES, commanding officers of the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, jammed full kettles . . . Senator MIKE MORRISSEY and Reps. BRUCE AYERS, RON MARIANO and STEVE TOBIN, any goodies on Beacon Hill they can steer here to help Quincy get through these tough times . . . Former Mayor JIM SHEETS, who is heading up the fundraising, a flurry of king-sized donations to break ground in 2004 for the Adams Memorial in Washington, D.C. . . ED KEOHANE, and his Quincy Partnership, a "Well Done" for all the worthy projects they have undertaken for the good of the city . . . A Happy, HEALTHY New Year for: Two of our Quincy Sun "Citizens of the Year, CLARA YEOMANS (1989) and MARY VALLIER (1993), Fr. BILL MULLIN, JOYCE BAKER, RAY McEACHERN, ED SPARGO, MARJORIE NASH, VIRGINIA SWALLOW . . . And to SHARON (PAOLUCCI) SWATEK, a true, genuine "Profile In Courage," more of that wonderful determination and many, many days of happiness . . . BOB FITZGERALD and JIM DUGGAN, keeping those Buicks moving . . . The best to our good friends at WJDA: JAY and TERRY ASHER, JOE CATALANO, CHARLIE ROSS, MIKE and DEBBIE LOGAN, JIM FELCHI, and TERRY FANCHER . . . JOE CANAVAN, new state of the art equipment for the Hancock parking lot. Before someone who gets in, can't get out . . . GREG HANLEY, a passport to Quincy . . . SHARRON BEALS, a red scooter to get around the Beechwood Community Life Center. And if you stop by there, Santa, she'll give you a copy of her favorite "Thought For Christmas" which goes like this:

"Do you know what would have happened if it had been the Three Wise Women instead of the Three Wise Men? They would have asked directions, arrived on time, helped deliver the baby, cleaned the stable, and made a casserole, brought practical gifts and there would be Peace on Earth." How about that, Santa?

And to DOROTHY, GAIL, LINDA, DONNA (D.J.), DOLLY, BOB, FREDDIE, JIM, AMY, MICHELLE, KIM, BRIAN, LINDSAY, JAY, KELLIE, MICHAEL, DAVE, FRED, BEN, AMY and WENDY, all my love. It was wonderful to have AMY join the family this year and we're looking forward to welcoming WENDY in 2004.

Santa, one other little thing: I've asked you for this before, but do you think while you're in town you could squeeze the granite ball into your sleigh and bring it back to City Hall where it really belongs? It would be a great gift for all the kids who would love seeing it close-up and their reflections in it. P.S. You don't have to mention this to TED DeCRISTOFARO if you see him.

Santa, I'm sure I've forgotten some people including good friends. But as I've said before, you start getting a little forgetful after you hit 39. And, boy, I've hit it a few times.

But to all of them and all of you, a very Merry Christmas and a Happy, HEALTHY New Year.

Scenes From Yesterday

Quincy's Yesterdays

It Was Cold – Even For Santa

Sub-zero temperatures and gale force winds in Quincy and the South Shore area gave Santa a North Pole-like welcome.

Doors blown open by the wind touched off burglar alarms at Jordan Marsh Co. on Willard St., West Quincy; and the Bargain Center.

Plate glass windows were smashed at Gilchrist's in the Parkingway; Whiteman's Department Store and the Fruit Basket on Billings Rd., Norfolk Downs.

MERRY CHRISTMAS from QUINCY, MASS.

Largest Christmas Tree in United States.
85 feet high contributed by Retail Merchants.

THIS 34 POSTCARD shows the 85-foot Christmas tree erected that year by the Retail Merchants Bureau of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce in front of the then Granite Trust Building, now the Fleet Bank. Two weeks before this tree was lighted a smaller 75-foot tree was dedicated on the same spot but it was toppled the next day in a gale. MIT engineers brought in to prevent a recurrence claimed this new tree could withstand winds of 240 mph. The first 60 feet of the trunk, set firmly into the ground, was a derrick boom donated by the Swingle Quarry Co. It was capable of lifting 20 tons of granite. On top of this boom was attached a 25-foot real tree. Three hundred and twenty smaller trees salvaged from the first disaster were inserted in holes in the boom to serve as branches. Six nearly one-inch thick guy wires secured the tree from all sides. Some 600 lights below accompanied a large and small star that flashed alternately at the top. On the occasion of lighting the tree, a spectacular scintillator on top of the bank building threw a great fan of light in all colors more than a mile into the sky. The purpose of the tree and the lighting ceremony was to bring cheer to the children of Quincy whose Christmas that year might be a drab affair. It was the fourth year of the Great Depression. This postcard is a favorite among Quincy Sun readers and is appearing for the ninth year.

Nearly 1,600 units of blood are needed each day to help those in need in this community, according to Red Cross officials. This makes it a challenge to collect enough blood to meet the needs of hospital patients each year.

Anyone 17 years of age or older, weighing 110 pounds or more and feeling in good health may be eligible to donate blood. Call 1-800-GIVE-LIFE (1-800-448-3543) with any questions about donating blood, or visit www.newenglandblood.org.

NEW CITY SEAL – Council President Dan Raymond (right) and designer/carver Raymond MacDonald welcome the arrival of a new carving of the city's seal, which will replace the current one in the council chambers. MacDonald, commissioned by the city to carve the seal, took nearly two years to complete the project. The seal will take its place behind the council president's chair next month.

Next Month

New Carving Of City Seal To Replace Current One

A new carving of the city's seal will be placed in the council chambers next month, replacing the current one which has been there since 1922, according to City Clerk Joseph Shea.

The new seal was carved and painted by Raymond MacDonald, who spent nearly two years on the project, according to Shea. The new one will take its place behind the council president's podium prior to Jan. 20, according to Shea.

The new carving is the final phase of the refurbishment of the council chambers, which began six years ago under former Mayor James Sheets.

Shea said the new seal weighs nearly 100 pounds and is larger than the current one.

The current seal was created in 1922 and refurbished in 1973, according to Shea. It will be reconditioned and placed somewhere in old City Hall, said Shea.

Quincy Joins 'You Drink & Drive You Lose' Campaign For Holidays

Quincy Police are joining 218 other Massachusetts departments and the State Police in the "You Drink & Drive. You Lose. Mobilization" Dec. 15 to Jan. 4 in an effort to cut down on impaired driving over the holidays.

"This 'You Drink & Drive. You lose. Mobilization' will focus public attention on the dangers posed by drunk driving," said Quincy Police Chief William Falco. "Throughout the upcoming holidays, we'll have extra traffic enforcement looking for impaired drivers, as well as those who speed, drive aggressively and do not use safety belts and child safety seats.

WILLIAM FALCO

"All of this effort is to help ensure everyone has a safe and enjoyable holiday season with family and friends."

Alcohol was deemed to be a factor in 49 percent of the motor vehicle-related fatalities in Massachusetts in 2002, a rate 8 percent higher than the national average.

Falco advised those going out to holiday celebrations that involve alcohol the plan ahead and designate a sober driver or take a taxi or use mass transit.

"If you host a party, help people by serving non-alcoholic beverages and protein-rich food," he said. "Should a guest have too much to drink, speak up and do what it takes to ensure they don't end up behind the wheel."

Falco said the holiday season is a good time for parents and caregivers to speak again with older children about the dangers and legal consequences of underage drinking.

"This 'You drink & Drive. You Lose. Mobilization' is a critical opportunity to focus on the dangers posed by drunk driving and it is a chance to remind people that always wearing a safety belt is one's best defense against a drunk driver," said Secretary of Public Safety Edward Flynn.

About 18,000 people are arrested each year for impaired driving in Massachusetts. Alcohol-related accidents in the state annually cost the public about $2 billion. A first-time drunk driving conviction can cost $7,300 with insurance surcharges costing another $6,000.

Phelan, Kelly To Preserve Stoughton St. Parcel

Mayor William Phelan, at the behest of Ward 1 Councillor-elect Leo Kelly, has agreed to protect a parcel of land on Stoughton St. in Hough's Neck.

The tax-foreclosed property was scheduled to go to auction next month.

"Councillor-elect Kelly made a strong case that the development of this property may adversely affect the surrounding natural areas, specifically the adjacent wetland," said Phelan. "We decided to take a second look at the parcel and agreed that the preservation of this parcel would be consistent with our open space objectives."

Kelly expressed concern in a letter to Phelan and in conversations with the mayor's Executive Secretary Tom Largey. Councillor Frank McCauley also indicated his support for protecting the property from further development.

The 16,548 square foot parcel is a mix of upland and marshland.

The city will auction two other tax-foreclosed properties on Jan. 8, 2004, a 5,416 square foot parcel on Bay View St. and a 4,000 square foot parcel on Sagamore Ave.

An auction of a series of smaller tax-foreclosed properties last month netted the city close to $46,000.

"The city, with the help of Hough's Neck resident P.J. Foley, is undertaking a massive marsh restoration effort concentrated in the Hough's Neck area," said Phelan. "The protection of the Stoughton St. parcel is consistent with our efforts to protect and restore wetlands in this area."

Probation Officers Key Members Of 'Operation Stopwatch' At T Station

Two county juvenile probation officers were key members of "Operation Stopwatch," the law enforcement team that converged on Quincy recently in a show of force to prevent teen crime and other problems.

Assistant Chief Probation Officer Mark Prisco and Probation Officer Denise Aguero joined MBTA and Quincy police and representatives from the Department of Youth Services and Quincy School's director of Safety and Security.

"This is a very busy T station," said Norfolk Juvenile Court Chief Probation Officer Thomas Mitchell. "A lot of arrests originate here. There have been reports of drug transactions, sexual activity in the wooded area behind the station and vandalism."

"We have picked kids up who are in default of their probation but that is not the primary reason we are here. We are here to maintain a presence."

"Operation Stopwatch" originated in complaints from nearby residents of criminal and delinquent behavior by middle and high school students when they are released from school in the afternoon.

MBTA Police Sgt. Detective Mark F. Gillespie said 21 students were arrested from Sept. 1 through Nov. 27 for robbery, assault, larceny and distribution of drugs. The Operation Stopwatch team maintains a presence there three times a month.

Aguero said she is familiar with many of the young people who pass through the station. "I think Operation Stopwatch works," she said. "It is presence, partnership and continuity."

An Open Letter To The Citizens Of Quincy

As you may have heard, the Quincy Fire Fighters Association and the Mayors office have reached an impasse in contract negotiations and have filed for arbitration. The Fire Fighters have done this not because we demand extravagant increases, but because we have worked without a contract since July of 2001, and we believe we deserve nothing less than what was given to the rest of the public employees in the City of Quincy.

Not long ago during another economic downturn in the City of Quincy, your Fire Fighters understood the financial crisis the City was facing and went without an increase in pay for three years. While our taxes, utilities and cost of living increased, our salaries remained stagnant causing many of us financial hardships; but we accepted these hardships knowing that our actions were helping Quincy through adversity. In lieu of pay increases, the Sheets administration gave your Fire Fighters the opportunity to spend vacation time they had accumulated in a different manner. Fire Fighters and Fire Officers instead of having to take a whole weeks vacation were allowed to take individual days off, offering these men the opportunity to spend a holiday or special occasion with their family. This practice is treasured and has greatly improved moral within the Fire Department as well as nurturing the family lives of your Firefighters.

Incredulously, Mayor Phelan wants to strip your Fire Fighters of this right. Although the actions of Fire Chief O'Connell has reduced overtime to its lowest level in over 6 years, (a level that until now continued to increase because of the City's resistance to fill necessary positions within the Fire Department that remained vacant for extended periods) and all indications are this downward trend will continue, Mayor Phelan seems to want to exact his pound of flesh from the ranks of the Quincy Fire Fighters. Quincy Fire Fighters are proud, and will not relinquish a benefit that would drastically affect our family life.

We ask you, the Citizens of Quincy to call Mayor Phelan's office and tell him to give your Fire Fighters a contract. Tell him that his punitive actions are unfair, and it is wrong to take back something that was given in good faith. The funds to pay for this contract have already been allocated in this year's budget, and will not cause any additional tax increase. Conway Traces Company's Success To Its Good Reputation

Real Estate Firm Founder Says Customer Service Is Top Priority

"I love what I do, and I intend to continue doing it," was the way Jack Conway, founder and chairman of the Bay State's largest independent real estate company, recently explained the "secret" of his success.

Conway was the featured speaker at a fall Business Forum sponsored by the Plymouth County Development Council. He told the story of his company, which grew from a one-man shop in Hingham Square to a 41-office network that posted $1.75 billion in sales last year.

"I used to joke that the reason I expanded the business was to have someone to talk to at the water cooler," Conway said. "But we grew because we provided good service to our customers, and word got around that we were a good company to do business with. We maintain that reputation today."

Conway, who formerly was a sportswriter for the Boston Record-American, entered the real estate industry in the early 1950s. He worked as a sales manager for Martin Cerel, then a well-known Realtor and developer in the Natick area.

When he decided to open his own office, he asked Cerel where he wasn't planning to expand, as he didn't want to compete with his old boss.

"He told me he would never go to the South Shore, because there was nothing happening down there," Conway said. "So that's where I went, and today, we're the fastest growing region in the state."

From Hingham, the company added offices along the coast, reaching Scituate, Cohasset, Duxbury and Marshfield. Next came expansion along the Route 3/53 corridor, then Cape Cod, Boston, Southeastern Massachusetts and the South Coast.

JACK CONWAY, founder and chairman of the real estate company that bears his name, was the featured speaker at the Plymouth County Development Council's recent Business Forum.

The firm's trading area has become known as "Conway Country," a name devised by Conway's father-in-law, James Carroll, who helped develop the company's marketing strategy.

To complement the residential offices, Conway opened a commercial division, relocation company, property management group and a real estate school to train new agents.

Since 1975, Conway has operated a mortgage company, and in recent years has added a referral registry, a technology division, a development sales arm and Conway At Your Service, which refers buyers and sellers to other services they need to complete a real estate transaction.

Conway also discussed his company's multi-million-dollar marketing program, which consists of newspaper, television and radio advertising, as well as specialized publications, mailings and Internet partnerships.

Among his proudest accomplishments is maintaining independence despite an industry trend toward consolidation. He noted that his company is 100-percent owned by him and is 100-percent debt-free.

"This business, and probably every business, is about people - caring for people and making sure people are satisfied with your service," Conway said. "And when that alarm clock goes off in the morning, after 47 years, I'm still happy to get up and go to work."

The PCDC Business Forum allows executives of locally based companies to share their successes and discuss new ideas for improving their businesses. Plymouth County Development Council President Al Asaf moderated the luncheon, which was held recently at the Massasoit Conference Center in Brockton.

Conway is the sixth business leader to be featured at the luncheons. The first forum featured Randy Papadellis, chief operating officer of Ocean Spray Cranberries, which is headquartered on the Lakeville/Middleboro border. Other speakers were Jeffrey P. DeMarco, a partner in the Braintree-based Campanelli Companies, Bruce C. Soderholm, senior vice president of operations for Talbots, Paul Sullivan, vice president of advertising and marketing for Sullivan Tire, and Terrence Tedeschi, president of Tedeschi Realty.

The Plymouth County Convention and Visitors Bureau/Plymouth County Development Council is a non-profit agency established in 1972 to promote the recreational, industrial, agricultural and historical advantages of Plymouth County. The organization provides resources to attract visitors and businesses to the county and improve its quality of life.

Founded in 1956, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independent real estate company in Massachusetts, with 710 sales agents in 41 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

New Technology Can Help Prevent Fire-Related Deaths, Injuries

Safety Foundation Warns About Electrical Fires

As we head into winter and electrical use goes up, Electrical Safety Foundation International (ESFI) is at the forefront of the fight to reduce electrical fires. ESFI recommends that parents and homeowners inspect and protect against hazards inside their home as well as dangers lurking behind the walls.

About 40,000 residential electrical fires and 350 deaths occur each year, the majority of which are caused by faulty appliances, extension cords, power strips, and hidden hazards with electrical circuits. In addition to making sure all appliances, plugs, and cords are in good working order, consumers can add an extra layer of protection by installing a new fire safety device: an arc fault circuit interrupter (AFCI).

AFCIs provide a more advanced defense against electrical fires, by detecting and stopping electrical arcs. An arc can occur when an electrical wire is punctured or overheats and is a sign that an electrical fire may soon start. AFCIs have special technology that makes it more sensitive to dangers along an electrical circuit that cannot be detected by most breakers and fuses.

"Electrical fires, especially those caused by faulty wiring, are among the most deadly because the fire can start behind the wall and spread throughout much of the home before being detected," said ESFI Executive Director Michael G. Clendenin. "Electrical fires are as serious as cooking and candle fires, so protect your family and home by inspecting and correcting all electrical dangers."

Though electrical products are being made safer, homeowners should still heed the following advice to avoid potentially fatal electrical fires:

- Look for telltale signs of electrical problems such as dimming of lights, frequent circuit breaker trips or blown fuses.
- Ask a qualified electrician if your home would benefit from AFCI protection, especially during inspections of older homes or upgrades to electrical systems.
- Limit the use of extension cords, use them only temporarily, and never with space heaters or air conditioners.

• Use light bulbs that are the proper wattage for the fixture.

• Make sure smoke alarms are installed on every floor outside sleeping areas and in every bedroom, and are in good working order.

For additional electrical safety information, visit the Foundation's web site at www.electrical-safety.org or call 703-841-3229.

twice a year to stop damage before it starts. Here are some hints on what to watch for:

• Leaky, inadequate or deteriorated flashing (the metal used to seal bends and joints around vents, skylights, chimneys) can lead to water damage in the house. Look for holes, tears or buckling in the flashing. Experts estimate more than 90 percent of roofing leaks occur in these areas.

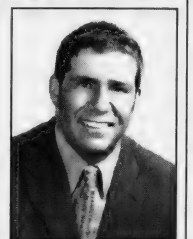

• Next, look for any damaged, loose or missing shingles or any that have blistered or buckled.

• Make sure shingles are firmly secured and sealed to the roof, especially around the roof edge where wind, driving rain and ice dams (when water freezes and backs up under the roofing system) can do a good deal of damage.

• Inspect and clean gutters, leaders, window wells and drains of all leaves and debris and make sure gutters are firmly secure to the house. Direct downspouts away from the foundation and clean them of any debris.

• If you see any dark, "dirty-looking" areas on your roof it could mean algae growth.

Health Dept. Tips On Avoiding The Flu

How To Avoid Transmitting Or Getting The Flu:

- Good hand hygiene: People should wash hands or use alcohol hand rubs or gels after being in public or after contact with anyone with a cold or flu.

- Cough etiquette: When coughing, one should turn the head and cough or sneeze into a disposable tissue and promptly dispose of the used tissue; or cough into the inside of the elbow if a tissue is not available.

- Avoid taking young children or immunocompromised people into large crowds (shopping malls, for example) unnecessarily when flu is in the community.

- Avoid close contact (holding, kissing) between infants and anyone who has a cold or the flu.

- Do not share things that go into the mouth such as drinking cups, straws, etc.

- If people are experiencing respiratory symptoms with a fever, they should refrain from public activities (stay home from work or school) for at least five days (maximum infectiousness lasts 3-5 days in adults and up to 7 days in children) to prevent spread of the infection.

What You Should Do If You Get The Flu:

- Rest.
- Drink plenty of liquids.
- Avoid alcohol and tobacco.

- Take medication to relieve the symptoms.

- If someone has severe or prolonged flu-like symptoms, they should seek medical attention.

- Don't give aspirin to children or teenagers with flu-like symptoms, and particularly fever, without first speaking to a doctor. Giving aspirin to children and teenagers with influenza can cause a rare but serious illness called Reye Syndrome. Take medicines without aspirin to relieve flu symptoms.

Presidents Shooting For State Tournament

By CHRIS POISSON

If its 7-6 season-opening loss at Plymouth South last Wednesday is any indication, the inexperienced Quincy High School hockey team will be making a lot of mistakes this season, particularly early on.

How quickly the young Presidents can learn from them will determine if they can make a return trip to the playoffs.

"We have a lot of inexperience and that will translate into a lot of mistakes early in the season," said head coach Bob Sylvia, who's beginning his 39th season. "It looks like we're going to score goals, but we need to work on the defensive part of our game."

"Our ultimate goal is to make the state tournament. I think it's a realistic goal. I think if we can mesh as a team and work on our mistakes, we can achieve that. They're a good group of kids and they're willing to learn."

Quincy will travel to Plymouth North Saturday at 4 p.m.

Quincy has graduated 10 seniors from last year's 11-

ICE HOCKEY

6-1 club, which was upset by Norwood, 3-2, in the first round of the state tournament. But it does have one thing going for them: captain Josh Giordani.

The reigning MVP and top goal scorer of the Atlantic Coast League is back on Coddington Street for his senior season. And you can bet all opponents will be focusing their attention on the first-line center. Giordani recorded a hat trick in the season opener.

"I certainly would," said head coach Bob Sylvia, who's beginning his 39th season. "But he's skating with (sophomore Mike) McKeon, who's a smart player and knows what to do with the puck. Josh won't try to force anything and skate between two players. He'll give it up and pass it to his teammates."

"Josh is an athlete," Sylvia added. "He played football this year, but hockey is his passion. That's what he wants to do at the next level."

Skating with Giordani and McKeon is senior left winger Dan Sullivan, who tallied a goal against Plymouth South.

Between the pipes, junior Joe Daly is the No. 1 netminder and is backed up by sophomores Jim Carita and Alex Smith.

THE GARDNERSISTERS, Sarah (left) and Michell, of Quincy recently attended a New England Revolution soccer game at Gillette Stadium in Foxboro.

Raiders Win Moral Victory Against Taunton

BOYS' BASKETBALL

The North Quincy High School boys' basketball team may have set the foundation for the rest of the season last Friday night at home.

Playing in their second game, the young Red Raiders battled a powerful Taunton squad to the very end only to suffer a 51-49 loss.

"It was a great game," said head coach James Rendle. "I'm very pleased with the efforts of our kids. I'm never happy with a loss, but the kids played to the best of their abilities. It's an excellent sign. You can build off this loss."

A moral victory, for sure. The Tigers strutted into the contest as the heavy favorites. After all, they were bigger, stronger, faster, more athletic — and the defending Old Colony League champions who happened to whip last year's Red Raiders twice by 30-plus points.

"They're the defending champs and pre-season favorites," Rendle said. "They're fast, big and strong — and we knew that. Our game plan was ball control and we followed that very well. We wanted to be close at the end of the game and we were. We hung in there."

North Quincy (0-2), which took on rival Quincy Tuesday, will host Boston Latin Sunday and travel to Rockland next Tuesday, Dec. 30.

North Quincy trailed by a high of seven points in the second half before it slowly chipped away at Taunton's lead to even the game. Tied at 49, Taunton netted the game-winning shot with eight seconds left as the ball bounced around the iron before falling through.

Senior guard Daryl Costa led North Quincy on both ends of the floor, tallying 16 points while holding Taunton's leading scorer to just nine points. Senior center Brandon Neves registered a double-double with 12 points and 10 rebounds.

Senior guard Jimmy Burke, who didn't play much in the first game with a knee injury, saw extended minutes against Taunton. He and sophomore guard Kyle Costa ran the offense well and, more importantly, broke Taunton's suffocating defensive traps with ease.

"They both executed the offense well," Rendle said. "Taunton trapped us, but Costa and Burke did a tremendous job of breaking the traps. Taunton didn't score off their traps, which they usually do."

In the season opener last Tuesday at home, North Quincy dropped a 57-48 decision to Silver Lake.

The Red Raiders trailed by only three with a minute remaining before the Lakers hit their free throws to account for the final score.

Neves scored 12 points and grabbed eight rebounds and sophomore forward John Murray played well.

"That was the first varsity game for a few of the kids," Rendle said. "We made a few mistakes and that cost us. We showed a lot of improvement from the first game to the second. If we play like we did (last Friday), we should do well this season."

GETTING INTO CIRCULATION

Since oil pressure is the mechanism by which oil is sent through the engine, any disruption in pressure will adversely affect the system's ability to circulate oil. As an engine ages and wears, the tight clearances that once helped keep oil pressure at optimum levels become less tight, which can cause pressure to drop. The best way to avoid engine wear and resulting pressure problems is to adhere to regular vehicle maintenance schedules. In addition, dirty and worn oil can compromise the oil pump's ability to deliver oil efficiently. Because the oil pump draws unfiltered oil from the oil pan, it does not get the benefit of the oil filter, making regular oil changes advisable.

Using the correct grade oil and changing it as recommended can greatly extend the life of your engine. Don't hesitate to ask questions about anything related to your car when you bring it into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. We have modern test equipment, the right parts and the best ASE Certified service technicians available in the area. Limited Sunlight Exposure Linked To Seasonal Affective Disorder Stop Singing The Winter Blues (NAPS) — As the days grow shorter and the skies grayer, many find that winter weather brings sunken moods, apathy and other sad feelings — especially around the holidays. Even celebrities experience this phenomenon, which is sometimes called the “winter blues” or Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD).

“I find the best way to keep the winter blues at bay is to get proactive,” says actress Camryn Manheim and star of the hit television series “The Practice.” “I have dinner parties, go out to the theatre, plan scrapbooking days, organize my home and catch up on all my reading. But the best way to kick the blues is to hang out with my 21/2-year-old son and all his friends. If that doesn’t make you laugh, nothing will.”

About 20 percent of the population is affected by SAD, which usually begins in late fall or early winter. Women are four times more likely than men to experience SAD, and the condition occurs more often in northern parts of the country. According to American Family Physician magazine, SAD is seven times more common in Washington state than in Florida.

Doctors believe SAD hits in the winter because of the limited sunlight exposure that accompanies the shorter winter days. “People who have reduced exposure to sunlight often have low levels of melatonin, serotonin and other compounds that support the body’s feelings of stability, emotional balance and well-being,” said Richard Brown, M.D., associate professor of clinical psychiatry at Columbia University, practicing psychopharmacologist and co-author of “Stop Depression Now.”

Dr. Brown adds that during winter, people stay indoors more, eat more and become less active, particularly in the cold regions. “These lifestyle changes can impact your mood, but there are ways to combat the problem,” he said.

To jumpstart your mood, Dr. Brown recommends the following tips:

Monitor Your Diet: Take vitamins and make sure to get enough fresh fruits and vegetables with a well-balanced diet. Consume fish and other high-quality proteins. Avoid refined sugars, which can negatively alter your mood.

Exercise And Breathe: Exercise is an important part of feeling good. A 10-minute walk, three times a day is enough to help you to fight the winter blues. Exercise may release hormones and neurochemicals that restore your body’s mood.

Try Yoga: The breathing and meditative practices of yoga may help relieve anxiety and tension.

Consider A Natural Remedy: SAM-e (pronounced “sammy” and short for S-adenosylmethionine) is a naturally occurring compound found in all living organisms. It’s clinically proven to help enhance mood and emotional well-being.

“Taking SAM-e regularly is one of the best ways to enhance mood,” adds Dr. Brown. “Studies have shown that it often works in half the time of prescriptive medications, and SAM-e has very few, if any, side effects.”

Simple Tips To Help Keep Willpower From Waning

(NAPS) — For many, the New Year is a time to resolve to become healthier, wealthier and wiser. Whether you decide to give up smoking, lose weight or find a job, following a few simple tips can make it easier to follow through on your resolutions.

“Keeping a New Year’s resolution can be extremely stressful, especially when people have unrealistic expectations,” said Angie DeLaCruz, a Dallas-based therapist. “You should set simple, achievable goals and stick to them. If you want to run a marathon, aim for running four to five miles first. Create milestones that can lead up to your overall goal. Trying to make too many changes at one time can lead to failure.”

To help you get started, here are a few tips:

Plan Your Resolution In Advance: Decide what goal you’d like to achieve in the New Year. Is it becoming healthier? Spending more time with your family?

Once you zone in on that one goal, make sure it is realistic. If you want to start an exercise program, make sure you pick an activity that fits into your schedule. Draw up an action plan for how you will achieve your goal. Include a specific timetable and rewards for your road map for success.

Write down your resolution and your plan of action. Stick it up on the fridge, in your locker, or wherever else you know you’ll see it. That way you’ll have a constant reminder of the resolution. You may want to revise the wording as you progress.

Plan Your Strategy: Develop strategies for changing your behavior. Make sure you customize your goal to your lifestyle and habits.

If you are trying to lose weight, try stocking up on low-calorie snack foods or diet beverages such as Diet Rite, Diet Dr Pepper or Diet Snapple Lemon Tea. If quitting smoking is your goal, stick up on sugar-free gum such as Trident or Dentyne.

Several of these low-calorie snack foods contain the same great taste of their regular counterparts. Taste need not be sacrificed to meet your resolution. Small changes will help you obtain your overall goal.

Share Your Goals With Loved Ones: Share your goals with your spouse, best friend or coworker. Empower him or her to remind you of your resolution if you begin to waiver.

Or choose a goal that you can reach with a friend. This way you have a “buddy-system” approach to your goal.

Be Realistic About Setbacks: Setbacks are bound to happen. If they do, don’t get discouraged. DeLaCruz said, “If you do slip up, acknowledge the slip and get back on track.”

One lapse does not equal failure. Keep the big picture in mind, and don’t take resolutions too seriously. Remember that resolutions are goals, not absolutes.

These simple tips will help create a realistic way for you to keep and stick to your New Year’s resolutions.

BABY’S FIRST TEETH

Baby teeth tend to arrive on their own schedule. On average, the first baby tooth erupts at around six months. Some babies are actually born with a tooth or two while others reach their first birthday without a single tooth in sight. By age 2 1/2 or so, a child usually has twenty primary teeth, ten on top and ten on the bottom. Baby teeth are apt to arrive in pairs, with the two middle teeth on the bottom showing up first, followed by the two middle teeth on the top. Next come their neighbors, the lateral incisors, then the first molars, followed by canines, and, finally, the second set of molars. Each set arrives about four months after the last.

This column on baby’s first teeth has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. Our goal is to help our patients reach their own unique and highest levels of oral health. All of our patients are individuals, and as such will achieve our goal in different ways and at different paces. No two patients are alike, so no two treatment programs will be the same. A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

The season of Christmas is sacred and is observed by Christians all over the world as commemorating the coming of the King. It is then that we devote ourselves to the joys of our friendships and to the contemplation of spiritual things. Our hearts are mellowed, our spirits are lifted, and our good will is broadened. It is the season of giving, giving not only to our loved ones but also to others who are less fortunate than we.

The message of New Year's Day is, "Think of the passing of time." The message of Easter is, "Think of immortality." The message of Thanksgiving is, "Think of your blessings." But the message of Christmas is, "Think of others."

Generally, at no other time during the year are we so generous towards others as during the Christmas season. Streets are crowded with package-laden shoppers who have been spending their time and money on gifts for others... Yet it is possible to have Christmas all around us and still not share in it with heart and mind.

When God measures a man, He puts the measuring tape around the heart. As we wrap our gifts this year, let us make sure that we put something of ourselves into each one.

Christmas joy springs from the loving and generous heart.

Koch Club At 52 Honors Volunteers Glennon, Joyce

The Koch Club closed out its 52nd season of baseball and softball by honoring Brian Glennon and Richard Joyce, two of its longtime volunteer coaches.

Thomas Koch, executive director of the Koch Club, presented them with jackets.

Glennon, who lives in North Quincy, has been coaching for 25 years, and Joyce, of Wollaston, has been coaching for 20 years.

Koch said one of the reasons Quincy is such a desirable place to live can be attributed to activities offered to families that would not be possible without individuals like Glennon and Joyce.

"The Koch Club and the Koch family are deeply grateful for the unselfish, dedicated service provided to our children by these two gentlemen," said Koch.

"The hundreds of youngsters that were fortunate enough to come into contact with Brian Glennon and Richard Joyce have not only benefited from their knowledge of the game but now have a model of leadership, character and conduct to emulate."

The Koch Club was started in 1948 by the late Richard J. Koch and has served tens of thousands of boys and girls for more than 50 years.

$2.1 Million HUD Grant Awarded For Housing Of Homeless

The Quincy/Weymouth Consortium has been awarded $2.1 million in grants from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to provide housing and services for the homeless. Mayor William Phelan's office announced Monday.

The grant was awarded under HUD's 2003 McKinney Program and will be the largest of its kind given to the consortium. Last year, the Quincy/Weymouth board received $1.4 million from HUD for homeless services. The funds will assist agencies in Quincy and Weymouth in providing housing and services for the homeless.

According to Councillor Joseph Finn - who wrote the first application for the McKinney grant nearly 10 years ago - about 72 percent of the funds awarded this year will go toward new housing services.

Finn said the city received more funds for new housing programs than any other community in the Commonwealth.

"I'm so excited that once again, Quincy is a leader in providing housing for the homeless, not just programs," said Finn. "Rather, this gives people a housing alternative."

Listed below is the breakdown of the new grants:

- Quincy Housing Authority (QHA) in conjunction with Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition (QISC/ Father Bill's Place) will receive $787,920 under the Shelter plus Care Tenant-based Rental Assistance program over a five-year period.

It provides eight permanent housing certificates for homeless families with a disabled member.

- QISC will receive $170,172 over a three-year period under the Supportive Housing Program for a Transitional Housing Program for families that are victims of domestic violence. The program links homeless families to supportive services, job placement, training, and stabilization services and it pays for the leasing of seven units of housing.

- QHA/QISC/Father Bill's Place will receive $749,100 over a five-year period that will fund 11 certificates for chronic homeless individuals moving into permanent housing. The housing funded under the Shelter plus Care Tenant-Based Rental Assistance Program is tied to support services.

- QHA/QISC will receive $136,200 for the renewal of 10 existing housing certificates for individuals under the Shelter plus Care (S&C) Program. These certificates are only for one year. All existing certificates under S&C have to be renewed annually.

- QHA/QISC will receive $299,640 for the renewal of 22 existing housing certificates for individuals under the Shelter plus Care (S&C) Program. These certificates are for one year.

Since 1996, the Quincy/Weymouth Consortium, through the Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development, has successfully secured more than $7 million in McKinney funds to be used for programs that serve the homeless population in the Quincy/Weymouth area.

Outdoor Skating Rink, Activities From 4-9 PM Over 10,000 Expected At First Night

More than 10,000 revelers are expected to usher in 2004 at First Night Quincy, with a diverse lineup of entertainment and activities for people of all ages, according to organizers.

Quincy's 12th annual new year's celebration, Wednesday, Dec. 31, will feature performances from more than 200 entertainers, including musicians, dancers and jugglers.

"This year's event may be our most exciting ever," said Mayor William Phelan. "We have an incredibly diverse entertainment lineup that guarantees that everyone in the family will enjoy the show."

Highlights of this year's show include an outdoor skating rink, ice sculptures, the International Food Emporium, KidsFest and the annual Festival of Lights Parade.

"The outdoor skating rink will create a unique atmosphere in Quincy Center that we've never seen before," said Phelan. "I encourage everyone to join us for this fun, convenient and safe New Year's Eve celebration."

At Next Monday's Inaugural Ceremonies

Davis, Gardner, Kelly, McCarthy To Take Seats

Three new faces and a familiar one will take their oaths of office at Quincy's inaugural ceremonies at 10 a.m. next Monday at North Quincy High School auditorium.

The three new faces are:

Alicia Gardner, Ward 6 councillor; Jay Davis, Ward 4 councillor; and Dave McCarthy, school committee.

The familiar face belongs to Leo Kelly, who will be returning to the Ward 1

Sun staff reporter William Traynor sat down with them to get their thoughts and goals as they prepare to take office.

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Kelly: Environment A Top Priority In Ward 1

Ward 1 voters elected a familiar face in Leo Kelly, the 70-year-old Houghs Neck resident who previously served on the council from 1973 to 1984.

Although out of public office for nearly 20 years, Kelly says certain issues still take precedence in the Ward. Since a majority of the Ward is nearly surrounded by water, environmental issues will continue to be a top priority in the coming year, he said.

"When I served as Ward 1 councillor before, the environment was an issue, and it still is," said Kelly, who beat back a stout challenge from Joe Keegan on Nov. 4. "I will continue to work to rejuvenate the marshes and to make sure they are kept healthy."

Kelly called the condition of the streets and sidewalks "deplorable," and said he supports Mayor William Phelan's initiative to set aside revenues from the Quarry Hills Golf Course for the repair of the city's roadways.

"I support the mayor's proposal and I want to make sure Ward 1 gets its share of funds for the repair of the streets and sidewalks," said Kelly, who twice held the position of council president. "I would like to see a larger portion of the funds go to the streets."

He has an interest in serving on the newly created Environment Committee, as well as the Public Works committee.

In addition, Kelly said he hopes to provide a moderate voice on the council when he replaces Greg Hanley as the Ward 1 councillor.

"There's been too much infighting on the council recently," he said. "The better you work together the more work you do."

Kelly said he will remain as chairman of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and continue his work on the city's Evergreen program.

In addition, Kelly said he will work with other local organizations to produce after-school programs for young adolescents.

"The kids need more things to do after school and to keep them busy," he said. "This is a tough period for them and they have a tendency to get into trouble, then they have to live with those mistakes for the rest of their lives. So we will try to keep them out of trouble."

He credits his campaign staff for achieving his latest victory.

"It is a heck of a feat to come back to the council after 20 years," said Kelly, who will soon enter his seventh term as a Ward councillor. "I had an organization that was second to none. These people were dedicated to my campaign seven days a week. And these were not politically connected people, just my friends and neighbors. I didn't get that kind of help—I'm my own man."

Gardner: Public Safety, Roads On Ward 6 Agenda

Alicia Gardner has some big shoes to fill, but she feels up to the task.

After squeaking by Brian McNamee in the election for Ward 6 councillor, Gardner will become only the fourth woman to serve on the council in Quincy's storied history. She follows Edna B. Austin, Joanne Condon Walsh and Patricia Toland as the city's only female councillors.

Gardner, 49, says she hopes that people will look beyond her gender and instead judge her by her conduct and character.

"I think it's a good thing we have a woman on the council now, because women make up a majority of the voters in the city," said Gardner, a lifelong Quincy resident. "I hope people will look at my qualifications and not my gender, but I do think women bring a different perspective on things. Diversity is desperately needed on the council."

The daughter of Gloria and Robert Noble, Gardner said she is anxious to take the oath as Ward 6 councillor in January. During the campaign, she said she received a lot of helpful feedback from residents.

"The condition of the streets and sidewalks is a great concern," she said. "The residents don't ask for a lot, but they want their roadways and sidewalks to be in good condition—there's an incredible amount of room for improvement there."

She supports Mayor William Phelan's initiative that earmarks funds from the Quarry Hills golf course for the repair of the streets and sidewalks.

"It's very important that we have a dedicated revenue source for that purpose, and then you can maintain the streets on a regular basis," said Gardner.

But the North Quincy High School graduate parts ways with the mayor on the firefighter ordinance that compels the city to hire more firefighters. The city council passed the ordinance, despite Phelan's veto.

"I will be keeping an eye on the Squantum fire station, Engine 7, because there is a large elderly population in Ward 6, and they need the services of the fire department there," she said. "I favor the ordinance hiring more firefighters, because I think it is penny-wise, instead of spending so much money on overtime. It will make the citizens and firefighters safer. Also, Rescue 1 is such an important piece of equipment, we need to have that running all the time."

Gardner, who works as an aide to Sen. Michael Morrissey, said she is also concerned about the rapid development in the city and how that will affect traffic.

"I think it's great that people want to come and live (Cont'd on page 26)

Davis: Development, Growth, Ward 4 Key Issues

One of the reasons Jay Davis ran for Ward 4 Councillor was to pay tribute to his late father, James Davis Jr.

"My dad and other veterans fought in World War II to allow people to have the right to vote and express their opinions," said Davis, who is considered James Davis III. "I can think of no greater honor and tribute to my dad."

Davis, 38, will become Ward 4 councillor in January after running unopposed in the city's Nov. 4 election. Davis will replace Bryan Connolly, who decided not to seek re-election.

Davis said he simply wants to help people.

"I guess I expected someone else to get into the race, but I ran a very aggressive campaign and stayed focused," he said. "Unfortunately, there is not a great deal of trust in government entities right now. Some people think Quincy politics is a dirty business, and not because of Bryan Connolly or the mayor, but in general,

JAY DAVIS

But I'm here to help people."

Davis, an attorney who graduated with a degree from the Suffolk University School of Law, said he will work to address the issues of smart growth and development in the Ward.

"Ward 4 has more potential for development than any other Ward in the city," said Davis. "How well the city deals with this issue is very important."

During his campaign, Davis said he received feedback from constituents about two other important issues: traffic concerns and motorists who flout speed limit laws. As a result, public safety issues will appear near the top of his agenda.

He also said it is important for the city to secure state funding for the construction of an additional ramp to relieve traffic congestion from Crown Colony Office Park. Davis said Connolly has worked hard on the issue, and he hopes to pick up where his predecessor left off.

In addition, Davis said he hopes to bring new businesses to the Brewer's Corner area. He praised the work of a newly created task force charged with encouraging commercial development in the area.

"I intend to work with the task force to bring in more resources, such as the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Quincy 2000 and other organizations, to develop Brewer's Corner," he said.

Davis is married to his wife of 12 years, Honor, and the couple has two children. (Cont'd on page 26)

McCarthy: Ready To Tackle Controversial Issues

Many political observers believe you must love kids to serve on the school committee.

If so, then Dave McCarthy should fit in just fine.

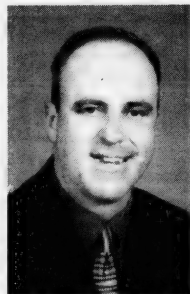

The Merry Mount resident emerged victorious in the Nov. 4 election for school committee, finishing third behind Linda Stice and Elaine Dwyer. As a result, he will become the newest member of the school committee in January.

McCarthy and his wife of 18 years, Rosanne, have seven children, five of which are adopted.

"My wife and I always wanted a big family," said McCarthy. "I believe a lot of people understand that I can empathize with parents and their issues with kids."

He is anxious to tackle a number of issues on the committee's upcoming agenda, including the new Quincy High School project.

"I think I can bring a lot to the table, because I am going through many of the same issues as other parents in the city," said McCarthy, 43. "I am witnessing everything they are witnessing."

He said he is anxious to weigh in on the city's rent dispute with Quincy College.

"I did my homework on this, and the fair market value for the college is about $450,000 annually, and that money should be going toward grade 6 through 8 programs, such as foreign language, technology and athletics," he said.

McCarthy, who grew up in Houghs Neck, said he is concerned about the construction of the new high school and the accompanying drainage plan. He lives on Whitney Rd., a stone's throw from the proposed projects.

"For the people in that area, including Russell Park, that is a huge concern," said McCarthy. "But I think Camp, Dresser and McKee has done an excellent job thus far, but they have to be held accountable for their design and plan for the sewer/drain project."

He said he wants to review all school programs and curriculum, as well as meet with school principals and PTO leaders as a way of understanding concerns.

McCarthy can empathize with parents who have children with special needs.

His first adopted child, Gerald, 11, is completely blind.

But McCarthy said he has had great success working with school officials to improve the city's special needs (Cont'd on page 26)

Election, Finances Highlight 2003

By TOM HENSHAW

Despite differences that kept him at loggerhead with City Council President Daniel Raymondi for most of the year, Mayor William Phelan rolled to a second term in office in one of the highlights of the year 2003 in Quincy.

Phelan triumphed handily over two opponents, City Councillor Joseph Newton and gas station owner Harvey Kertzman after Raymondi, to the surprise of many, passed up the opportunity and opted for reelection.

In the same election, Alicia Gardner became the first woman in 10 years and only the fourth ever to win a Council seat and Leo Kelly, who served 10 years on the Council but retired 20 years ago, won back his old post.

Elsewhere, the big news of the year involved Quincy College, which was forced unsuccessfully to fight for its independence after the School Committee raised the rent on its buildings from $217,000 to $450,000.

At year's end, the college was staggered by charges of fraud by two former students, who claimed the institution did not give them the hands-on training they were promised in the surgical training programs.

The City Council approved a $110 bond issue to build a new Quincy High School on Faxon Field but action on actual construction was held up when it appeared that state reimbursement for 90 percent of the cost was years away.

Here is a log of some of the most important happenings in Quincy in the year 2003:

2003 IN REVIEW

JANUARY

Mayor William Phelan, delivering his mid-term address, declared that Quincy is beginning the year 2003 "on a firm fiscal foundation," but he warned of challenges ahead due to "a tough economy and threatened cuts in state aid."

To meet these challenges, he proposed the creation of the position of Chief Financial Officer to help the various departments to deal with budget problems and plan for the future.

"You simply can't make these future long-term investments without a firm grasp of the overall financial health of the city," he said.

Phelan's address also accented the future use of the Fore River shipyard property, the extension of the Quincy Center Concourse, the revitalization of the downtown business area and sidewalk and street repairs.

Daniel Raymondi, fresh from reelection to a second one-year term as president of the City Council, urged the mayor to "guarantee" the preservation of Engine 4 at the Wollaston Fire Station and other Fire Department equipment.

"The neighborhood firehouse is more than a garage," he said. "It's a safe haven in our neighborhoods."

Elimination of Engine 4 was one of the solutions to an $800,000 shortfall recommended by acting Fire Chief Paul O'Connell and passed on to the City Council by the mayor.

Four former mayors were in the audience as Phelan delivered his mid-term address — Walter Hannon, Arthur Tobin and Joseph LaRaia as guests, Frank McCauley as a member of the City Council. But James Sheets, who lost reelection to Phelan, was absent.

"There's nothing to read into that," said Sheets. "I had a couple of appointments that I couldn't break. I need to get on with the rest of my life."

Three local officials reacted to Mayor Phelan's address by raising serious concerns over whether or not a new Quincy High School should be built. The mayor had not mentioned the controversial proposal to build a new school on Faxon Field.

Senator Michael Morrissey, School Committee Vice Chair Christine Cedrone and School Committee member Jo-Ann Bragg expressed concerns that the Commonwealth will be able to follow through on its commitment to reimburse the city 90 percent of the construction costs.

"Given the present budget constraints, will the state be able to reimburse cities and towns at a 90 percent rate?" asked Morrissey.

Tim Cahill, the newly elected state treasurer from Quincy, was sworn in by Gov. Mitt Romney and immediately faced the daunting prospect of contributing to the solution to the state's fiscal programs, which included a possible $3 billion budget deficit in Fiscal 2004.

One of Cahill's first acts as treasurer was to name Rep. Joseph Sullivan of Braintree to be executive director of the state lottery.

The four members of Quincy's legislative delegation, citing a floundering economy and the need to share in sacrifice, refused to accept a 6.5 percent pay raise

McFarland New School Vice-Chairman

Mike McFarland will be the new vice-chairman of the school committee.

McFarland has the votes to be elected — unanimously — at next Monday's inaugural ceremonies at North Quincy High School.

And you might say he will make a Quincy political history footnote that day: the first male vice-chairman of the school in six years.

He succeeds Christine Cedrone, who held the post the last two years and is leaving the school committee. Before her, Jo-Ann Bragg and Linda Stice each served two years.

The last male to hold the post was Steve Durkin.

McFarland sees MCAS scores, new Quincy High and Central Middle schools and the budget among the top matters on the committee's agenda.

He will be starting the last half of his second four-year term next week.

And political speculation is following him.

He is mum about it all but observers wouldn't be surprised to see him make a bid for a city council at-large seat in 2005. Specifically the one Frank McCauley now occupies and will be stepping into retirement from that year.

And, there are those who see him as a future mayoral candidate.

Ask him about that and you might get one of those big smiles.

But if mayoral candidates were to submit resumes when they picked up nomination papers, he would have a pretty impressive one.

He has been business manager at the Norfolk County Agricultural High School for the past year and a half.

But before that he had considerable experience on the Quincy municipal front: executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, city auditor, city purchasing agent, and school committeeman.

And he is a former businessman.

Pretty good credentials.

Not to mention a sunny, unflappable disposition that brings diplomacy not only to the political scene but to the important discussion and decision table.

McFARLAND

WHEN CHRISTINE CEDRONE leaves the school committee next week after deciding not to seek a third term, she will also leave a huge political void for the Republican party.

She has been one of only two Republicans in Quincy municipal elective office. The other is Frank McCauley, councillor at-large and former mayor.

CEDRONE

So, when Cedrone departs, it means 50 percent of the Republicans in municipal elective office will be gone.

And the other 50 percent could follow in two years.

McCauley, who will be starting his 31st year in elective office, has said this will be his "last hurrah." He will serve this term and step into political retirement.

And, he says, he will keep his word on that.

McCauley will go out a winner with a spot of his own in Quincy's political history.

He will be the new city council president — the final feather in his political cap.

He is already the only person to hold all four municipal elective offices: mayor, councillor at-large, ward councillor and school committeeman.

And as mayor, served as chairman of the school committee. And now as city council president, he will be hitting for "the political cycle."

But with Cedrone now embarking on a law career (but still vice chairman of the Quincy Housing Authority Board of Commissioners) and leaving municipal office next week and McCauley leaving in two years it raises a question for the future:

Will the mayor's office, city council and school committee become completely dominated by Democrats?

Quincy's elections are non-partisan and one party shouldn't have complete control. Diversity in opinion and philosophy is healthy for the community.

But Republicans continue to lose ground in Quincy, a far cry from the GOP stronghold it was in the 1930s and 1940s.

The latest City Election Department figures show Quincy with 52,648 registered voters.

Of those, 24,416 are Democrats, 21,291 unenrolled and 6,488 Republicans.

Democrats outnumber Republicans by 17,928. But they in turn, should be a bit concerned as the unenrolled keep creeping up on them. Democrats now have only a 3,125 edge on the unenrolled.

Down the road, the unenrolled could be in the political driver's seat.

Meanwhile, Republicans need to find some young, energetic blood to run for Quincy's municipal offices.

Or find themselves relegated to standing on the outside — always looking in.

Quincy would be the real loser there.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1930 POSTCARD showing the Stony Brae Golf Course clubhouse at the top of Forbes Hill in Wollaston. The hill, which is a drumlin like the harbor islands, provides a spectacular view to the ocean. Now known as Furnace Brook Golf Club the course was originally 18 holes and was bisected by Furnace Brook and later the Parkway. Today's nine-hole course was created when the portion south of the Parkway was sold and developed into house lots in the early 1950s. The area is now the neighborhood of Puritan and Joan Drives. An early resident was former Red Sox slugger Ted Williams who lived there for one season while the houses were being built. This postcard was one of a series on Wollaston published by Howard Johnson and sold from his ice cream store on Beale Street.

A Sincere Thank You From The Sullivan Family

We would like to thank all of the participants and donors who braved the storm of December 6 to attend the Sullivan Family Celebration of Life at the First Parish Milton Church.

In particular we would like to take this opportunity to thank our dearest friends, the First Parish Milton congregation under the direction of John Robinson, the committee comprising Sandy Cavanaugh, Amy Kavadlo, Barbara Nathan, Amy Killeen, Lynne Stack, Jennifer Pinkus, Linda Corcoran, Dawn Choi-Kolack, and Sandy Wise.

In addition we would also like to express our deepest

The Neighborhood Snowbirds

Neighborhood snowbirds begin to take flight, when yellow and red leaves start to appear. The last one to go, is our good friend Joe, he doesn't depart until the end of the year.

As soon as migration is finally complete and little toes ensconced in Florida sands, our weather turns nasty, we all hunker down. Numbness creeps upon ears, nose and hands.

Major decisions down in tropical climes, involve pina colodas, swimming pools, golf matches. Frozen north choices are much more mundane, about long johns, woolen socks, icy patches.

The golden forsythia declares to our friends, pack your bags, book a flight, time to travel. Your Quincy neighbors are beginning to thaw, and winter's frigid grip starting to unravel.

I'd love to charge them for the onset of cold, but pure logic would dictate, no such thing. If we blame them for sleet and half frozen feet, we'd have to credit them, for glorious spring.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Della Chiesa First Mayor Of Italian Descent

Amelio Della Chiesa, a veteran of 10 years in the City Council, became Quincy's first mayor of Italian descent when he was elected to the Plan E post by a 7-2 vote of his fellow councillors.

Those voting against him were former Mayor David S. McIntosh and Alfred G. Helfrich, who voted for each other.

Edna B. Austin, who was starting her sixth term on the Council, was elected vice chairman, the first woman to be so honored.

A. Wendell Clark was re-elected to a ninth consecutive one-year term as vice chairman of the School Committee. He had been a committeeman for a dozen years.

NEW YEAR WELCOMED

Sam Lombardo and his Singing Strings played "Auld Lang Syne" as revellers greeted the New Year at the Sportland Grille, 80 Copeland St., West Quincy.

Elsewhere, Harry Downing's Orchestra and Ray Jones, your song and piano man, were at the Fox and Hounds Grille on Sea St., and the Show Boat Trio made music at the Brewster Boat near the Neponset River bridge.

The midnight show at the Strand was "Kiss Me Kate," starring Kathryn Grayson, Howard Keel and Ann Miller, and you could watch it in 3-D through polaroid glasses.

For those who celebrated at home, noisemakers were available at the House of Fun, 541 Washington St., Quincy Point, and Thomas Morton whiskey was $3.35 a fifth at Wollaston Wine and Liquor Co., 54 Beale St.

Ward 4 Open Space Re-Zoning Completed

Planning Director Richard Meade and Ward 4 Councilor Bryan Connolly recently completed their open space re-zoning initiative, culminating in the protection of more than 20 acres of Ward 4 land as open space.

In conjunction with the city's landmark Parks and Open Space initiative also undertaken this year, Connolly and Meade developed a plan to alter the future of land use in West and South Quincy by dramatically increasing the amount of land protected by open space zoning.

Meade discovered more than two dozen parcels of publicly owned land - currently zoned for industrial, commercial and residential development - as potential candidates for rezoning to open space. By identifying publicly owned parcels, the rezoning enhanced open space without requiring any expenditure from the city to compensate private land-owners.

"This is yet another example of how Richie Meade's expertise and experience have quietly improved the quality of life of thousands of Quincy residents," said Connolly.

Meade and Connolly reduced the list to 17 prime parcels, comprising more than 20 acres of land. The rezoning proposals they authored were passed with unanimous votes of the city council and planning board.

Meade is scheduled to retire this week after 35 years of service to the city in the planning department.

"Richie Meade is the quintessential behind-the-scenes professional whose actions, though often unnoticed, have truly reshaped the City of Quincy," said Connolly. "This Ward 4 rezoning initiative is just one more of the indelible thumbprints Richie Meade has left on the city. It enriches a legacy that already burnishes brightly before his retirement has begun. He will be greatly missed."

Shea will then give the roll call of city councillors. "America the Beautiful" will be sung by the North Quincy High School choir and directed by Choral Director Timothy Carey.

Phelan will be administered the oath of office by Arthur Tobin, Clerk Magistrate at Quincy District Court and a former mayor.

Phelan will deliver his second Inaugural Address to the city.

A tribute to Quincy's servicemen and women will be conducted by the Gaelic Column.

The city council will be administered the oath of office by Shea.

The school committee will be given the oath of office by Phelan. Along with newcomer McCarthy, other school committee members taking the oath will be JoAnn Bragg, Michael McFarland, Ronald Mariano, Elaine Dwyer and Linda Stice. The committee will then organize for the coming year.

A Benediction will follow, and the ceremony will close with a rendition of "My America" by the North Quincy High School Choir.

With Santa's Help, Quincy Firefighters Aid Needy Families

With the help of Santa himself, Quincy firefighters last week brought a little joy to the lives of 11 needy families by giving gifts, clothing and food.

Firefighters escorted Santa to the homes of the families and furnished them with the gifts, including a special dinner prepared for them at the fire station.

Firefighters pitched in to collect $3,000 to help those less fortunate than themselves. In addition to those donations, the firefighters' union, Dunkin' Donuts, Wal-Mart and Roche Brothers supermarket contributed as well. The families contacted the Germantown Neighborhood Center for assistance.

The Center coordinated the event and provided gifts and meals to more than 350 families in need.

"This year was our biggest year ever," said the Center's Director, Kathy Quigley. "We are so thankful for the generosity of this community to give so much of themselves to help others."

Quincy firefighters union President William Arienti led fellow firefighters and fire officers Thomas Bowes, Luis Ruiz, Paul Mullen, Edward Nardone and Edward Rossini in a caravan of vehicles with gifts for the families, along with a baked ham and all the fixings prepared by firefighter Tim Marks.

"These families are so different from the average people on the street," said Arienti. "When children ask Santa for sheets, blankets and coats for themselves and their mothers instead of toys it breaks your heart, and providing these basic needs to these families is the true nature of Christmas."

For the second year in a row, Firefighters shopped, wrapped and delivered the gifts.

"We are proud to join with the Quincy Police Department in this project - when we work together nothing is impossible," said Bowes. "We look forward to doing the same thing, if not even more next year. I still cannot get over the emotion that poured from these kids when they saw Santa."

this year. The raises would have increased their base salaries from $50,123 to $53,381.

Auto dealer Dan Quirk purchased most of the old Fore River Shipyard at auction with a bid of $9 million and announced his intention to move his auto auction to the site and "develop the remainder of the yard for the highest and best use."

"Now is the time to get the shipyard back on the tax rolls and produce jobs for local people," said Quirk. "This yard will not remain idle for 30 years."

But before Quirk could take final ownership in the property, the second high bidder, developer Jay Cashman, threatened to take the issue to court if the Maritime Administration did not reject Quirk's bid as invalid.

Acting Fire Chief Paul O'Connell, a fourth generation firefighter who held the job once before but gave it up to remain a deputy and fight fires, was named permanent fire chief once again.

Father Bill's Place sheltered 132 homeless men and women in facilities designed for 95 beds in one night as the wind chill temperatures fell below the zero mark. A van from the shelter combed the streets of Dorchester and Quincy for more.

"It's the worst I've ever seen," said Executive Director John Yazwinski. "We had emergency army cots in the hallways, the cafeteria, the conference room, wherever there was an empty space."

Quincy's city flag was sent to Afghanistan on behalf of the families of three military policemen from Quincy stationed there with the Army National Guard. They were Sgt. Michael Eastwick, Daniel Parisi and Frederick Standrick.

Charles T. Sweeny, a former member of the Quincy School Committee who helped to found Quincy College 47 years ago, was named to the board of governors of the college.

Gayle Anne Kelley, educator, documentary film maker and author of "Some Leaders Are Born Women," was the keynote speaker at the annual Martin Luther King Celebration.

"Honoring our diversity is the process by which we can find the solutions and heal many of the problems that plague us," she said.

With the two months of heaviest snowfall still ahead, the city's snow removal costs were already $100,000 over budget.

A subcommittee was named to solve the long impasse over rental payments by Quincy College to the Quincy Schools. The college had been paying $217,000 annually for use of Coddington Hall and two other buildings. The School Committee this year hiked the price to $450,000. The college refused to pay.

Kao T. Li, who was born in Taiwan, grew up in Libya and spent 18 years in sales at Pfizer Pharmaceuticals, was hired as the first executive director of Quincy Asian Resources, Inc.

February

Mayor William Phelan announced that there would be no layoffs or significant cut in services this fiscal year, despite the loss of $2.2 million in local aid from the state.

The blow to the city's finances was softened when $3.4 million was set aside for reserve for appropriation, said the Mayor, "allowing the city to deal with local aid cuts better than most communities."

"Without those funds, massive layoffs would have been inevitable," said Phelan.

John F. Keenan, the first runners-up in the 2001 election for councillor at-large, was unanimously elected by the eight remaining councillors to replace Timothy Cahill, who resigned from his at-large seat to become state treasurer.

For Outstanding Community Service

Nominations Close Today For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Today (Wednesday) is the final day to submit nominations for The Quincy Sun's 19th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, the late Paul Harold was honored posthumously for dedicating his life, public service and talents to serving his community with integrity and the highest principles while putting people first.

Harold was selected from among 24 nominees submitted by Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final decision.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on Page ?? of this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

After nominations close today (Wednesday), a judge-ing panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with this award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominations should be postmarked no later than Dec. 31.

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address today (Wednesday).

Past recipients of the award, and the year of their selection, are:

Tony Siciliano, former deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management (formerly Civil Defense), 1985.

Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, a long-time community volunteer, 1986.

ing many events including the Presidents Day Winter Carnival and the opening games of the Quincy Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament.

The storm cost Quincy more than $200,000 in snow removal alone, jumping the bill for the winter to $600,000, approximately twice what was budgeted for the entire year.

A crew of city inspectors were sent around to check the bars, restaurants and nightspots for overcrowding and fire code violations in the wake of the night club fire in The Station in West Warwick, R.I. that claimed nearly 100 lives.

Moody's Investor Service reaffirmed Quincy's A3 bond rating, which had been downgraded from A2 the previous year.

The Quincy School Committee filed an eviction notice to force Quincy College out of its main building by March 2 for non-payment of a raise in rent. The Committee, strapped for cash, had hiked the rent from $217,000 to $450,000 which the college declined to pay.

College President Sean Barry filed suit in Norfolk Superior Court asking a judge to determine the legal relationship between the college and the city.

"Until it's defined we can't negotiate," said Theresa Lord-Piatelli, chair of the board of governors of the college.

Questions remained over the fate of a new Quincy High School after the state temporarily halted a program that called for reimbursing cities and towns for new school construction and renovation, a moratorium that could be extended to Fiscal 2004.

City Council President Dan Raymond, who was also chairman of the Fore River

Redevelopment Committee, asked the U. S. Maritime Administration (MARAD) to delay the transfer of the Fore River Shipyard to Daniel Quirk until he discloses his plans for the property.

Jay Cashman, the runner-up bidder, filed suit to halt the sale to Quirk and award the yard to him because MARAD failed to sell it to a buyer who would promote a maritime use for it.

A 117-year-old solid-oak partners desk, designed by the architect Henry Hobson Richardson for a library at the University of Vermont, was installed at the Thomas Crane Public Library, which was also designed by Richardson in 1882.

Kam Man Food, the largest Asian supermarket on the East Coast, opened in President's Plaza on Quincy Avenue. Customers were able to select their own sea food, lobsters, crabs and fish, live from large Plexiglass tanks.

The City Council approved the city's request to hire a contractor to assist in collecting and tracking unpaid parking tickets. Purchasing Agent Al Grazioso told councillors that an outdated computer had resulted in more than $1 million such tickets since 1995.

Stephen J. Roche, an assistant since February, 2002, was appointed to the post of city assessor succeeding Joseph LaRaia, the former mayor who retired in August.

The City Council called for the city to establish a contingency plan for continuation of services on the major state-run roads and beaches in Quincy when Gov. Romney eliminates the Metropolitan District Commission.

Boy Scout troops from Andover, Mass., and Salem, N.H., held a wreath-laying ceremony aboard the USS Salem in remembrance of the crew of the ill-fated space shuttle Columbia, which burned up on reentry.

The Public Safety Committee asked the License Board to clamp down on rooming houses that generate chronic complaints or police calls. Currently there were 40 rooming houses in Quincy, 20 of them in the downtown area.

Deaths in February included:

State Treasurer Tim Cahill of Quincy underwent successful surgery for the removal of his kidney for transplant into his sister, Alicia, in a six-hour surgical procedure at Mass General Hospital in Boston.

Rescue 1, the city's most active Fire Department vehicle with 2,500 calls, was taken off the road due to a budget shortfall, in spite of the City Council's passage of a $400,000 appropriation to cover overtime costs in the department.

Mayor William Phelan directed the DPW to draft a contingency plan to clear the roadways and walkways near the city's schools more effectively after receipt of complaints of inadequate snow removal this winter.

The DPW launched a major assault on pot holes in the city streets.

"An average winter requires 35 tons of asphalt patch on the roadways," said Commissioner Jay Fink. "This past weekend alone my crews have laid out some 40 tons and we are not done yet."

Fire Chief Paul O'Connell ordered a halt to sleepovers for youngsters and adults aboard the USS Salem as a safety measure and Executive Director Michael Condon vowed to fight the order, which, he said, would shut down the ship as a tourist attraction.

The Quincy College rent dispute was back to square one when Norfolk Superior Court Judge John Cratsley refused to halt the School Committee's try to evict the college from Coddington Hall. Each side waited for the other side to move.

Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Ron Mariano and Bruce Ayers painted a grim picture of the state's financial status, saying Quincy Mayor Phelan proposed to submit a home rule petition to the legislature seeking to name the new downtown concourse bridge in honor of the late Paul Harold, the former city councillor, senator and Norfolk County register of deeds. The City Council quickly approved it.

Alfred Grazioso resigned his post of more than eight years as city purchasing agent and parking clerk to join newly elected State Treasurer Cahill as assistant state treasurer for administration and finance.

The Quincy Medical Center and its union workers reached agreement on a two-year contract that restored many of the wage and benefit cuts taken by the workers in 1999 when the hospital was in imminent danger of closing.

The City Council reversed itself and agreed to fully fund Mayor Phelan's requests for $83,650 for inspectional services and $79,523 for information technology after the mayor agreed to bring such requests to the council in a more timely fashion.

The Veteran's Services Department offer Blue Star Banners for their windows to families with members of active duty with the military in the war of terrorism. The banners were similar to the ones displayed during World Wars I and II.

Mayor Phelan said he has received assurances from the federal government that the residents of 48 apartment units at the Naval Terrace in Squantum that they will not be displaced even if the property owner defaults on its financing responsibility.

Mayor William Phelan's administration unveiled an ambitious long-term plan to repair and maintain Quincy's streets and sidewalks which, he said, had been neglected for years. The cost for the first year would be about $3 million.

The plan was opposed by City Council President Daniel Raymond who asserted that it did not address the chronic problem of street flooding.

The late Paul Harold, former senator and city councillor, was honored posthumously as The Quincy Sun's 18th annual "Citizen of the Year" for his distinguished public service career that lasted 25 years.

When Phelan finally submitted the plan to the Council it earmarked $5 million for open space, including the 22-acre Highpoint parcel, and $4 million for park improvements, including $1.6 million for Veterans Memorial Stadium and $850,000 for Adams Field.

"The hard work in the past year and a half, reining in spending and doing more with less on behalf of the taxpayers, has paid off," said the mayor.

William Arienti, president of the Quincy Fire Fighters Association, and Thomas Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, clashed before the City Council over minimum manning standards for the Fire Department.

Under the Council's proposal, the city would have to hire about 40 firefighters to staff its 13 pieces of apparatus at a cost to the city of $1.7 million. Arienti and Councillor Greg Hanley were for it; Largey urged the Council to wait.

The Council voted for it by a 7-2 margin with Councillor Frank McCauley and Ward 5 Councillor Doug William Aylward, an environmental activist, filed an appeal to block renovation work to Adams Field, which was preparing to welcome the National Babe Ruth 14-year-old baseball world series in August.

But Aylward dropped his appeal of the $800,000 project, which included new bleachers, lights, rest rooms and a concession stand, in return for the city's pledge to make improvements to the area surrounding Black's Creek.

Former Mayor James Sheets accepted a position as New England manager for fund-raising and assist in the design of the Adams Family Memorial that will share a most hallowed location along with the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that libraries could screen their computers for pornography or lose federal funding but Ann McLaughlin, director of the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy said all but two of that library's 90 public computers are already screened.

Fee increases in the City Clerk's office, including the cost of obtaining a birth certificate, a marriage license and a death certificate, were approved by the City Council. But the councillors declined to pass similar hikes in fees at the Inspection Services Department.

Ward 5 City Councillor Gutro and Councillor McCauley proposed that the city establish user fees for the city's parks to pay for the continued maintenance of those facilities.

James Edwards, a Quincy architect, was elected president of the Quincy Historical Society, succeeding Joyce Baker, who served 16 years.

A giant 40-foot by 60-foot American flag was raised at Pageant Field by fire trucks from Quincy and Boston as a highlight of the 52nd annual Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration.

Donald H. Strong, 86, of Hingham, former executive director of the Quincy Council on Aging.

July

City Council President Daniel Raymondi, a fierce critic of Mayor William Phelan, took of nomination papers to run for an eighth term as councillor from Ward 2, ending speculation that he would run for mayor against Phelan.

"Some people may be disappointed," said Raymondi, "but there always tomorrow."

Harvey Kertzman, owner of a gas station in Quincy Point who billed himself as "a hands on guys... a working stiff" announced he would run for mayor against Phelan.

A few days later and only moments before the time for drawing nomination papers expired, Ward 6 City Councillor Joseph Newton entered the race for mayor, thus ensuring that there would be a preliminary election for that office.

Quincy hired 21 new firefighters to replace those lost in a flurry of retirements over the summer. All 21 started at the Quincy Fire Academy in the old Fore River Shipyard after they were sworn in by Mayor Phelan. They would complete their training in eight weeks.

About 40 residents of the downtown area were told that the MBTA and Quincy Police have stepped up their efforts to patrol the Quincy

A suspicious fire damaged the stairs of a wooden porch leading up to the second floor of the Islamic Center of New England in Quincy Point but police and the state fire marshal said it did not appear to be a hate crime. Damage was estimated at $15,000 to $30,000.

The state legislature overrode Gov. Mitt Romney's veto of additional assistance to cities and towns, restoring $700,000 that had already been factored into Mayor Phelan's $204.5 million budget.

Quincy obtained a federal grant of $125,000 in homeland security funds to assist the city in identifying potential terrorism targets and enhance its ability to prevent any terrorist action. Mayor Phelan met with public safety officials to determine the best way to spend it.

Christine Cedrone, vice chairman of the School Committee, announced that she will not seek reelection to a third four-year term in the November election. She called her reasons "personal and professional."

Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park, reported a 14 percent increase in visitors to the birthplaces of John and John Quincy Adams and the mansion that was the home to four generations of the Adams family. "Tourism is at an all time high," she said.

One of those tourists was Lynne Cheney, wife of Vice President Dick Cheney, who visited the Adams Mansion without fanfare, except for her entourage of Secret Service men. "She didn't want any publicity," said Peak. "We respected her wishes."

Eighty graduates of Quincy College's practical nursing program, nine of them from Quincy, received their pins at graduation ceremonies.

Simple Tips For Keeping Your Home Toasty, Energy Efficient This Winter

(NAPS) — Homeowners can avoid one of the great pains of home ownership: drafts. Drafts are annoying because they creep up on people when they are most vulnerable — glancing out the window first thing in the morning, toweling off after a warm shower or taking off snow-covered shoes next to the front door.

According to Keith Hahn of Handyman Connection, one of the nation's largest home-improvement companies, those drafts also cost homeowners money. "Drafty windows and doors can increase a homeowner's heating costs by as much as 20 percent," says Hahn.

Older homes are especially vulnerable, but even new homes can develop drafts as they settle. Hahn advises homeowners to check each of their windows and doors at least once a year to locate energy-sapping drafts. Once located, drafts can be minimized or eliminated altogether with some basic do-it-yourself skills.

The simplest and most common solution, says Hahn, is using caulking cord to seal windows from the outside. Caulking cord is available at just about any home improvement store. Just unroll the cord and use your fingers to press the cord into the creases between the sash and the window casing. "Make sure you also seal the space between your top and bottom sash," Hahn adds.

Exterior sheeting is another option for sealing windows. While this option may not be as aesthetically pleasing, plastic sheeting is very effective at insulating windows. Pre-fabricated sheeting kits are widely available. Simply follow the manufacturer's directions for installing the sheeting. "If you're uncomfortable on ladders or with your own DIY skills, you should consider hiring a pro to install sheeting," cautions Hahn.

Around doors, check the weather stripping on the inside of the door frame to ensure that it is still intact and supple enough to provide a tight seal. If you can see gaps, or if the weather stripping is no longer resilient, it's time for replacement. Materials are readily available, but this installation is a little more difficult. Hiring a professional to install a new weather stripping around doors might be a wise option, says Hahn, "especially considering the money you'll save by keeping your house sealed tightly."

Other common but often forgotten sources of drafts are the spaces around exterior electrical outlets and faucets. Both caulking cord and canned foam insulation work well for sealing these spaces.

All of these solutions are effective but temporary, Hahn points out. "Recent technological advances may make it worth your while to consider replacing windows and doors altogether," he says.

Finding Palatable Hues For Your Home

(NAPS)—Although most everyone has a favorite color, interior designers say that it may not always be easy to live with.

"Whether someone wants cool or warm colors is more important," says Kristen Dilworth, designer at Glenna Cook Interiors, San Mateo, Calif. "In the same way people either like summer or winter best, almost everyone prefers either warm colors, such as reds, oranges and yellows, or cool ones — blues, greens and lavenders. A person's particular 'favorite' usually falls within their preference. If overpowering, choose a shade from the same side of the palette, and add the vivid hue through accessories."

Wardrobes provide clues to comfort, according to Kevin Pritchett, owner of Traditional Plus Interiors Inc., Lilburn, Ga. He asks clients: "What outfit do you look best in, feel best in, get the most compliments on, reach for first? That's the palette to choose from," he says. Pritchett agrees, however, that the color of a favorite jacket might not be appropriate as the dominant color in a room. "Choose a compatible shade and add the favorite in pillows or a throw," he suggests.

"Pay attention to how the color in one room works with those in adjacent spaces," advises Pamela Maffei-Toolan, vice president, design, Waverly Lifestyle Group. "I wanted something rich and luxurious in my dining room, so I picked red. But red is too dark for a room I work in, so, for the kitchen, I chose a subtle terra cotta."

Maffei-Toolan and her Waverly design team recognize that most people don't make over whole rooms all at once, but add to interiors year after year. The brand's fabric and wallcovering collections make it easy to achieve color compatibility. Patterns are designed to coordinate with each other, and with colors in previous collections.

WOLLASTON...for Everyone!

Sewer, Water Main Work Continues Near Wollaston Beach

Sewer and water main replacement work near Wollaston Beach will continue into the new year, according to Ward 5 Councilor Doug Gutro.

The work is part of a $5.8 million improvement project that will replace 11,600 feet of deteriorating sewers along Quincy Shore Drive and 11 adjacent side streets.

Work began this fall on Beach St., Billings Rd. and Bromfield St. and continues northward.

"This is a major project for Wollaston and North Quincy in terms of improving water quality at Wollaston Beach, reduce sewage backups in homes and businesses, upgrading utilities and repaving streets and replacing sidewalks," said Gutro. "So far, most residents have been patient with noise and disruption and cooperative on issues such as temporary parking and traffic restrictions."

Gutro said he held two neighborhood meetings regarding the project to open up the lines of communication between residents and the contractor.

"Any time you do work in the winter the weather can have an impact," said Gutro. "And the snow certainly complicates matters." Gutro also he will work closely with incoming Ward 6 Councilor Alicia Gardner, who will represent residents on some of the streets impacted by the project.

Portions of the following streets will see sewer replacement: Quincy Shore Drive (between Bayfield Rd. and West Elm Ave.); Milton Rd.; Colby Rd. (between Milton Rd. and 200 feet down Colby Rd. towards Sharon Rd.); Edwin St. (between Milton Rd. and Hollis Ave.); Hollis Ave. (between QSD and Edwin St.); Herbert Rd.; Apthorp St. (between QSD to approximately 320 feet towards Warwick St.); Channing St.; Vassall St. (between QSD and Rawson Rd.); Beach St. (between QSD and Rawson Rd.); Bromfield St. (between QSD to approximately 300 feet past the intersection of Billings Rd.); Billings Rd. (between Channing St. and Bromfield St.).

Gutro said the personal involvement of Public Works Commissioner Jay Fink is a positive sign that work would move forward as quickly as possible to minimize disruptions.

A project contact list is available to residents in the neighborhood, Gutro said. Residents can call Keyspan at 1-800-732-3400 on natural gas issues related to project.

Peter Knowlton is the Resident Engineer on site and can be reached at 508-523-0209. Marco Gioioso is the Project Manager for the contractor and can be reached at 617-592-3421.

The team from Quincy dropped all four games to Waterford, Conn., 9-0; Italy, 9-6; LaCrascentas, Calif., 7-6; and Willamette Valley, 12-5, but Kevin Bossart was named catcher and Tom Power an outfielder on the Spikes All-Defensive Team.

November

Mayor William Phelan steamrolled to a second term in a municipal election that saw the first woman elected to the City Council in 10 years, the return of a councillor after a 20-year absence and a new member elected to the School Committee.

Phelan, 43, breezed by underdog challenger Joseph Newton with 73 percent of the vote to 27 for Newton. "This vote indicates that people think the city is moving in the right direction," said Phelan.

Alicia Gardner, 50, of Squantum edged Brian McNamee by 26 votes to win the open Ward 6 council seat and become only the fourth woman in Quincy's 114-year history as a city to be elected to serve on the City Council.

McNamee asked for a recount but he added only one vote to his margin of defeat and Gardner was declared the victor by 25 votes.

Leo Kelly, 71, beat police officer Joseph Keegan, 32, by a 268-vote margin to win back the seat in Ward 1 that he had held for 10 years from 1974 to 1983.

David McCarthy, 42, director of security at General Dynamics in Needham, captured the School Committee seat left vacant by the retirement of Christine Cedrone, surprise winner considering his sixth place finish in the primary.

Frank McCauley, 73, making what he called his last run for office, topped the councillor-at-large field to win an eighth term. The former four-term mayor had spent 30 years in elective municipal office.

McCauley was chosen president of the Council, succeeding Daniel Raymondi who had served two consecutive terms. McCauley had held every elective office in the city but the Council presidency had eluded him until now.

Others elected or reelected were City Councillors Raymondi, Doug Gutro, Kevin Coughlin, Joseph Finn, John Keenan and Jay Davis; and School Committee members Linda Stice and Elaine Dwyer. Just 35.20 percent or 18,545 of the 52,684 registered showed up to vote.

Mayor Phelan signed a Council resolution giving him the authority to implement an early retirement program for the second straight year but he was still undecided about using that authority.

The Quincy Welfare Office at 1515 Hancock St. closed its doors, leaving 3,600 clients to make new connections. The 1,000 welfare cases from Quincy were being sent to an office in Roxbury but there were hints that the Department of Transitional Assistance may retain a "limited presence" in Quincy.

State Trooper Charles McGrail of Quincy was awarded the Mass State Police Medal of Valor for his part in an attempt to rescue six passengers from a flaming airplane that had crashed in Leominster.

New state legislation gave the city to option of permitting liquor stores to open on Sunday but the prospect was not well received by the packie owners and managers. Brain Timberlake, manager of Atlas Liquors, didn't see the need. "If you run out of beer on Sunday, shame on you," he said.

Retired Navy Capt. Thomas Hudner, a Congressional Medal of Honor winner in Korea, told ceremonies marking the end of the Korean War that "Northeast Asia is a perilous situation that threatens the peace of Asia, if not the whole world."

Mayor Phelan urged the City Council to retain the city's tax classification at 169 percent for Fiscal 2004. "We have seen a steep decline in revenue from commercial business," he said, "at a time when we are encouraging businesses to come to Quincy."

The City Council passed a home rule petition that would dedicate half the funds generated from the Quarry Hills Golf Course to the repair of city streets and sidewalks and the purchase of new equipment for the DPW.

Quincy Attorney Thomas Williams was honored as the Jewish War Veterans 53rd "Citizen of the Year" for his dedication to helping children and the community at a breakfast at Beth Israel Syna-

Joseph Cardinal, account manager for MassElectric, told the City Council that lingering vapors from the 10,000-gallon August gasoline spill in Quincy Square pose no threat to public safety.

A report by UMass-Boston documented a high hunger rate in the Germantown area and the word prompted the City Council to call for hearings to seek input from food providers on the issue and ways to alleviate the problem.

The Amistad Celebration Dinner at the Joseph Moakley Courthouse in Boston kicked off the Adams Memorial Foundation's fund-raising campaign for the creation of a Adams Memorial in Washington, D.C. The arrival of a replica of the slave-ship Amistad coincided with the dinner.

Seven residents who left Quincy and North Quincy High Schools early to join the armed forces in the Korean War were awarded diplomas 50 years late at the Veterans Day Ceremonies.

The City Council denied Mayor Phelan's request to increase the stabilization fund by $525,000. Most of the councillor said they wanted a clearer view of the city's revenue picture, especially with regard to local receipts.

Quincy High's football team won the Atlantic Coast League championship, their first such title in 33 years, and topped off their fine 7-1-1 season with a 20-7 victory over Thanksgiving Day rival North Quincy and a bid to the Superbowl.

Deaths in November included:

John Muldowney, 50, Of Quincy, who once worked with Bruce Springsteen as a sound engineer.

December

Quincy College and the city were conducting separate investigations into allegations that two students who graduated from the Surgery Technology Program failed to receive the hands-on clinical training they were promised when they enrolled in the program.

The complaints, filed by Pamela St. Clair and Dawn Spencer, both of Plymouth, alleged that they completed the one-year certificate program last May but they never received adequate operating room instruction and documents that said they had were forged.

The $36,000 a year pension of former chief plumbing inspector Ralph Maher was rescinded by the Quincy Retirement Board. Maher had pleaded guilty to charges related to a 2000 break-in at City Hall at which parts of his personnel file were removed. He promised to appeal.

The City Council voted to increase the city's tax classification for Fiscal 2004 from 169 percent to 175 percent, the maximum allowed by the state, but residential taxpayers were still going to get hit with an 18 percent increase in property taxes.

A blizzard-like weekend storm deposited at least 18 inches of snow on Quincy with cleanup costs to the city estimated at up to $200,000. "This was a very difficult storm to fight," said Traffic Engineer Roy Lamotte Jr. "The intensity of the storm made it difficult."

The Quincy Health Department ran out of flu vaccine just as a particular virulent type of flu was expected to arrive from the west, but Health Commissioner Drew Scheele said the public should not be unduly alarmed.

The City Council, under intense scrutiny from about 100 of the city's yachtsmen, defeated a plan offered by Mayor William Phelan to establish mooring fees of $2 a foot for those residents who tie up their boats in Quincy waters.

QTA's Cousin Sees Average Tax Bill $10,320 By 2016

The average residential property tax bill in Quincy has increased by a dizzying 65.5 percent since 1998 but proposed municipal budgets have gone up by only 36.8 percent in that time, says the Quincy Taxpayers Association.

"So taxpayers don't appear to be getting their money's worth," said Alan Cousin, president of the QTA, which conducted a six-year analysis of city taxing and spending.

"The city needs to trim its spending so residential property taxes don't continue to rise faster than inflation."

Unless the city can contain its spending, said Cousin, "at this rate, by 2010 that average tax bill would be $6,233; by 2016 it would be $10,320." The average bill for Fiscal 2004 will be $3,694.

"The lesson of this analysis is very clear," he said,

ALAN COUSIN

"Taxpayers have to lean hard on the mayor and the new City Council to curb the growth of spending next year and in years to come."

"Otherwise, in a few years, today's 'average' residential taxpayer won't be able to live in Quincy."

"I see only one conclusion to be drawn from this analysis," he said in a letter to Mayor William Phelan and the City Council. "Residential taxpayers will not be able to support continued increases in city spending."

Cousin said the QTA recommends "that the city base its Fiscal 2005 budget, and following budgets, on tax increases that are small enough so that the average residential tax bill does not increase faster than the rate of inflation."

"This will mean cuts in the real purchasing power of the budget. The alternative is not acceptable."

Cousin said the QTA will leave it up to the administration and the City Council to determine specific cuts but "we can, however, mention areas of concern."

"Selected city employees receive double digit pay raises every year. We have brought this to the City Council's attention twice, to no avail.

"We have advocated for two years that the city conduct periodic staffing reviews of all departments with the aim of cutting unneeded staff — again, to no avail."

"More than three-quarters of every budget is in 'personal services.' Fiscal restraint has to start with 'personal services.'"

"We believe that our elected officials are unwilling to address this issue... they need to become willing or we need new elected officials."

"When this matter is addressed, the taxpayers will be best served by layoffs, not by a costly early retirement incentive."

"The taxpayers of Quincy are supposed to be paying for services, not to create and maintain jobs."

Cousin said the need for cuts in personnel will become more acute in the future when additional burdens come into play, like:

"Backloaded contracts for most unionized city employees, the $5 million price tag over 15 years for an early retirement incentive... annual net debt service costs for a new high school... (and) rapidly escalating health insurance costs for city employees."

"If the city hopes to absorb these costs, and continue to do all that it has been doing in recent years... this is sure to mean more double-digit tax increases," said Cousin.

"The taxpayers of Quincy have to decide whether they are willing to try to absorb these tax increases, or are willing to entertain cuts in city operations that are not genuinely essential."

Gardner: Public Safety, Roads On Ward 6 Agenda

in the city," she said. "Quincy has all the ingredients of a great city — its proximity to Boston, the shopping convenience, public transportation — but traffic is a concern, especially the corridor from the Neponset Bridge to Hancock St. We need to improve the traffic situation there."

Gardner is married to her husband of 25 years, William, and the couple has three children, Nancy, 22; William, 19; and Robert, 16.

When discussing family issues, Gardner says Quincy

Center comes to mind.

"In my lifetime I was never worried about walking down Quincy Square," she said. "But during the last three or four years it has become a concern." She said the introduction of many social service organizations in the downtown area has helped many people, but it has also caused some problems.

"I am not suggesting we discontinue these services, but residents have to feel comfortable when they walk downtown. Quincy Center is a reflection of the entire city — it will never be another Shopperstown like 30 years ago, but I think it can be better than it is now."

Gardner also said she will work with state and local officials to improve Squantum Point Park, Squaw Rock, as well as Nickerson and Orchard Beach.

"Many families said they moved to Quincy because they are attracted to the water, but many are disappointed with the beaches and water quality," she said. "But I tell them to hang in there."

Madison, 6, and Meghan, 3.

He describes his first foray into city politics as "a learning experience."

"There are other councilors who have a lot of experience, and I hope to learn from them," he said. "We may not agree on one particular issue, but I'm sure we will agree on the next one. When you work with people, inclusion, not exclusion, is necessary."

Davis said he grew up in a politically active family, which prompted him to become involved in public service.

"Most people say you shouldn't talk about politics and religion, but that never held true in my family," he said. "Politics was always a topic of conversation in my family."

He was Class President as a senior in Weymouth South High School, and he ran for Governor of his class for the American Legion Boys State program.

Davis said his father would be proud of his latest accomplishment.

"He was a man of few words, but he would have sat back and told me to let it come to you. He would have told me you have a great opportunity, now do what you've been trained to do."

McCarthy: Ready To Tackle Controversial Issues

program for the vision-impaired.

When McCarthy first placed his son in kindergarten in the Merrymount School years ago, the school did not have a viable program for him.

"They had a special needs program but not for children who are blind," said McCarthy. "I have nothing but praise for the people in the Merrymount School, we worked together to create a program for blindness."

McCarthy's other children, Collin, 11, Rosella, 9, Diana, 8, Lisa, 8, Francis, 7 and Chloe, 4, keep him and his wife busy.

McCarthy said his experience with Gerald is indicative of the problems parents face with their kids.

"There are so many parents who don't know where to go or what to do if they have a concern," said McCarthy. "If you get an answer but don't understand it, don't go home and settle for it. Call the school committee or the superintendent's office and look into it further."

"The programs are out there, but you just have to know where to go and who to talk to," he said. "I had several good reasons to run, and not just for my kids, but for all the parents and kids I've met. It's a good time for me to step up to the next level."

Babe Ruth World Series Among Year's Highlights

There were many local individual and team success stories in 2003, from the youth leagues to the high schools, from the youngsters to the senior citizens.

One event, though, seems to stand above the rest — the 14-Year-Old National Babe Ruth World Series hosted by Quincy in August at Adams Field.

Three local teams, eight others from all over the county and one from as far away as Italy participated in the tournament, which attracted nearly 60,000 fans for the 29 games spanning nine days.

The world series brought the community together, with the committee, the park department, local unions, host families, local businesses, countless volunteers and many others all instrumental in its success.

Although the host Quincy team was not successful in terms of wins and losses, the kids worked hard all summer long in preparation for the tourney and put forth a valiant effort in all four games.

Most importantly, those nine days at the end of summer created many memories that will last a lifetime.

Here's a look back at some memorable moments of 2003:

RING OF TRUTH

In a vehicle's engine, the piston rings' job is to seal against pressure losses from the combustion process, which compromise performance. To verify whether the piston rings or valves need maintenance, the technician uses a compression tester to check for low compression readings. Oftentimes, the technician will refine the check by squirting some medium-weight oil into each plug hole, crank the engine over, and repeat the compression test. If the readings are significantly higher, there is a problem with the rings or cylinder. If no changes are evident, the trouble is with the valves. A significant drop in pressure in one or more cylinders can be indicative of several problems, the most serious being a blown head gasket.

Really Want To Lose Weight In 2004?

Weight Watchers Tips Help Keep Your Resolution On Track

Whether your goal is to get rid of a little holiday weight gain or to improve your health in the New Year, sticking to a weight-loss resolution post-January can be a challenge. To the rescue: new research that shows that a flexible approach—rather than a rigid regimen—is linked to successful long-term weight loss. In the New Year, FlexPoints from Weight Watchers makes flexibility a reality.

Below are ten real-world suggestions from Weight Watchers to help keep your New Year's weight-loss resolution.

Concentrate on getting started; don't worry about every detail of a weight-loss program.

Remain focused on the steps immediately before you. Don't be overwhelmed by the weight you feel you must ultimately lose. Remember, just getting started is an important achievement.

Make your first major goal to lose 10 percent of your current body weight.

Not only has a 1-percent weight loss been proven to be medically significant, it's also an achievable goal. Sustaining a 10-percent loss has multiple health benefits, including lowering blood pressure and cholesterol.

Don't go to extremes.

Cutting out food groups and crash dieting inevitably leads to feeling deprived, which in turn leads to over-eating and then the weight snaps back. In other words, "deprivation is fattening." The key to long-term weight control is to learn how to eat in moderation.

Be flexible.

If you find yourself over-eating at a special occasion, just eat less at the next meal or ramp up your exercise a tad. Learning to be flexible by adjusting your eating and exercise up or down is an important strategy for losing and maintaining your weight.

Learn to count your successes.

Celebrate every pound you've lost as you move toward your weight goal. Don't fret about the weight that you haven't shed. Keeping a positive, balanced perspective is key.

Don't be discouraged if you plateau.

Weight loss is never a consistent process. In the first three weeks you may lose more weight due to water loss. Expect your weight loss to vary from week to week.

Give yourself breathing room—take simple, small steps to improve your lifestyle.

If you know you need to be eased into a routine, then change your habits gradually. For example, walk an extra five minutes a day, and increase the pace gradually.

Accept that you will make mistakes along the way.

What you do about any mistake is what's important. Pick yourself up, dust yourself off and continue with your healthy eating habits. If you succumb to that pile of French Fries or that dish of chocolate mousse, don't despair and give up. Lapses are normal. Knowing you can get back on track is an empowering skill to learn.

Dieting does not have to equal deprivation—you don't have to give up your favorite foods.

Many of the foods you love—and that you may have thought of as weight-loss saboteurs—can be eaten in good conscience and good health. Remember, a flexible approach to losing weight allows you the freedom to incorporate all foods and food groups into your food groups into your food plan.

Recognize that new habits take practice. Practice them until they become your own.

Give yourself time for lifestyle changes to feel natural and automatic.

More Blood Donations Still Needed

(NAPS)—Americans are rolling up their sleeves. In the first phase of the Save A Life Tour, the American Red Cross announced that the country rallied together to secure more than 3 million blood donations during the largest blood donor initiative in Red Cross history.

For six months, more than 300 communities nationwide participated in the Save A Life Tour to help raise awareness and educate the public about the need for a safe and available blood supply. But this is only the beginning.

"Now, more than ever, people understand the importance of donating blood. We commend the American public for supporting this vital initiative by helping build and maintain an adequate supply of blood for our nation," said Marsha J. Evans, president and CEO of the Red Cross.

A recent survey conducted on behalf of the Red Cross Save A Life Tour revealed that nearly 18 million Americans do not feel their blood donation would make a difference and another 13 million say they would donate, but they don't understand the blood donation process.

How To Donate Blood

Giving blood is a simple—but not small—thing to do. Anyone who is at least 17 years old, in good health and weighs at least 110 pounds may be eligible to donate blood. The whole process takes about an hour. It starts with registration, a health history and a mini-physical. Then comes the actual donation, which actually takes less than 10 to 12 minutes. People who are deemed eligible may donate blood every 56 days.

The organization is encouraging Americans to make blood donation a routine part of their lives. Just as you get your haircut about every 8 weeks, you should schedule an appointment to donate blood.

The Importance Of Donating Blood

Just one pint of blood can help save as many as three lives. Every two seconds, someone in America needs blood.

Every day, 38,000 donations are needed in the United States to help save the lives of cancer patients, accident victims and patients with blood disorders among others.

TAKE TEA AND SEE

If you are worried about bad breath, recent research shows that regular tea drinking may help stave off mouth odors. Bad breath is caused by malodorous, volatile sulfur compounds produced by anaerobic bacteria that thrive on the back of the tongue and in the deep recesses of gums. Researchers found that compounds in tea, called polyphenols, appear to combat halitosis (the medical term for bad breath) in a two-way step process. First, they prevent the growth of the odor-causing bacteria. Then, they block their inability to produce sulfur compounds. While black tea was used to this study, other research found that green tea extract shows microbe-fighting properties that protect the mouth from disease-causing bacteria and viruses.

Identification of the types of bacteria in the mouth may be the first step in diagnosing several diseases and ailments. We stress the importance of preventive dental care for the entire family. Your total emotional and physical well-being is as important to us as your teeth. We will do what is best for you, and we will not compromise. Call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

One of the gods in Roman mythology was Janus. He was pictured with two faces, one looking ahead, the other backwards. It is certainly appropriate for January, the first month of the year, to be derived from the name of Janus.

January first is an ideal time to look back, but it is far more important to look ahead. Worry, regret, disappointment and other negative thoughts of the past can and should be replaced with positive thoughts of hope, faith, trust and confidence as we look ahead. The New Year represents opportunity. The New Year offers challenge. The New Year offers accomplishment. But accomplishment requires a start, a beginning. And the beginning is in the mind. No other place. Thinking about doing something is one thing. Doing it is another thing. We can only make the most of it if we show less concern for what lies behind us and intelligently motivate our thinking and action to what lies ahead.

With a New Year facing all of us we sincerely say "Happy New Year to you - We especially mean - "Happy Anticipation," and above all, "Happy Accomplishment" to you. . .

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be busier than you had expected right now. But between the socializing rounds and the workplace tasks, there are opportunities for special moments with that certain someone.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your creative approach leads to a quicker-than-expected solution to a workplace problem. Now you can devote more time to that proposal you hope to introduce by midmonth.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Technological glitches create problems early on. But by midweek, all runs smoothly once again, and you're well and truly on your way toward meeting all your deadlines.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your energy levels are high, and you feel you can handle everything that comes along. But try to take a break from your hectic pace for some quiet time with someone close to you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Before you pounce on that shiny new opportunity, take more time to check it out to see how much substance actually lies beneath all that glitter. A family member has important news.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A personal situation you thought was resolved resurfaces, thanks to a possibly well-intentioned move that went awry. Deal with it as soon as possible. Accept the help of a trusted friend.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) That goal you set way back when is finally in sight. Maintain your focus on achieving it, and don't allow yourself to be distracted by unimportant demands for your attention.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A temperamental flare-up creates negative feelings that need to be dealt with immediately. But things once again go well after the apologies are made and hurt feelings are soothed.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) An early impulsive act causes confusion. But all is smoothed over once explanations are made. Expect a friend or family member to ask for your kind and always wise advice.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might have to do some juggling of your priorities, as a personal matter appears to require more time and attention. Put your pride aside and accept help from those who offer it.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your creative aspect is strong. Not only does it help you accomplish your goals, but it also inspires others. This could lead to a potentially rewarding collaboration opportunity.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be careful about making major decisions when you're not really committed to them. And resist any pressure to do otherwise. Better to delay action until all doubts are resolved.

BORN THIS WEEK: You set goals and are rarely distracted by any attempt to move you off the path you've chosen to reach them.

Community Sponsors Holiday Party For 150 Foster Children

For 150 local foster children, it was a Christmas party to remember.

Area businesses, residents and civic organizations joined together recently to offer a Christmas party at the Quincy Sons of Italy for 150 local foster children.

The children, ages 18 months to 16 years old, come from the United Homes For Children in Dorchester, a non-profit agency.

Jestina Richardson, director of the organization, said many of the children were neglected, abused or left with absent or non-functioning parents. Others are dealing with emotional problems or learning disabilities, she said.

The organization works with the state Department of Social Services, Office of Childcare Services and the Department of Mental Retardation.

The idea of holding a party for the children began when Loretta DeGrazia, president of East Coast Petroleum in North Quincy, found out that United Homes For Children in Dorchester would not be able to hold a Christmas party for the children due to budget cuts and a tough economy.

DeGrazia stays in touch with the organization because she recently adopted a child, Miguel, 5, through the agency.

"I felt this was something we could put together so I decided to contact a few local businesses," said DeGrazia. "For these kids, this was their only chance to meet Santa Claus and receive gifts."

She said the response was overwhelming.

"Quincy always puts the letter 'P' in the word philanthropist," she said. "It was an incredible outpouring of charity."

About 20 sponsors answered the call to help, she said.

A majority of these children are available and waiting for adoptive homes. The agencies are also looking for persons willing to be foster families as well.
